

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

MYSTERIOUS TUMBLERS.

A Little Experiment For the Boys and Girls to Try.

Here is a pretty little experiment illustrating the principle of air pressure which may be tried by any boy or girl and which may be made quite entertaining at a gathering of little ones. It will interest even the older folks if any are present.

Take two tumblers of the same size. Be careful that they fit closely when one is placed on top of the other.

HOW TO FIX THE TUMBLERS.

Light a piece of wax candle and place it within the tumbler on the table. Place on top of it a piece of rather thick paper saturated with water. Then place upon it the other tumbler, as in the illustration. The tumblers will then be found to adhere closely. The candle will be extinguished, but while burning it has dilated the air contained in the lower tumbler, and the air has, therefore, become rarefied. The exterior pressure of the atmosphere will fix the tumblers as closely together as the classical Magdeburg hemispheres are united. It is possible to raise the undermost tumbler by picking up the upper one. The paper may be scorched on the underside, but the success of the experiment is not thereby imperiled.

"Who Can He Be?"

The game "Who can he be?" is instructive and also helps to refresh the memory. One of the party selects a historical personage without naming him and relates an anecdote or anything that is interesting about him and names the country in which he lived. The player who guesses the name, having previously the privilege of asking one question, gives a description of another character, and so the game progresses. Here is an example:

"There was a celebrated Swiss, a famous archer, a champion of liberty and who was the first to strike a blow for freedom. He refused to bow to the Austrian governor's hat that had been placed on a pole that all should do homage to it, and as a punishment for his disobedience he was ordered to shoot an arrow at an apple placed on his son's head or else the son should be put to immediate death before his sight. With horror at the fearful alternative he at first refused, begging that vengeance might fall on him only, but his son assured him that he did not fear the result and begged him to make the trial. He yielded to his persuasions, took aim, drew his bow and struck the apple without injuring his son. Who was he?"

"Who but William Tell?" says a player, who instantly proceeds with another description of a hero or heroine.

Washing the Dishes.

Our Polly goes a-fishing, but the weather what it may be, she washes the dishes. Not less than twice and often thrice on every holiday. She always starts right after meals, and, singing merrily, she fishes and she fishes in her little soapy sea.

She'll catch the best pink china cups and play that my are four. And when she drops her line again she'll draw spoon minnows out. The plates, of course, are flounders (so round and flat, you know); The kitchen knives are hungry sharks out watching for a foe;

Each sauceman is a poll-wog, with handle for a tail. And—"There she blows!"—the frying pan, how very like a whale! There's nothing left, pour out the tea and put the fish away. All high and dry and waiting to be caught another day. —Hannah G. Ferns in Youth's Companion.

All That Was Left.

The scene was the garden of a suburban villa, and little blue-eyed, sunny haired Dora was joyfully playing with her latest possession, a red toy balloon.

High in the air she threw it, shrieking with delight, and Charlie, the puppy, did his little best to shriek with delight also.

"Up it went and down it came, and at last, after long waiting for an opportunity, Charlie pounced upon it—one bite, a little bang and Dora's balloon was no more.

"Mamma, mamma," she cried in wild distress, "do come here! Naughty Charlie has eaten my balloon and only left me the skin!"

Riddles.

Why is a watch the most difficult thing to steal? Because it must be taken off its guard.

Why is an author more free than a monarch? Because he can choose his own subjects.

Why were gloves never meant to go? Because they were made to be kept on hand.

A RESOURCEFUL LAWYER.

An Inspiration That Won a Case He Considered Impossible.

A Philadelphia lawyer tells the story that a picture of Panny Davenport once won a case for him. His client was suing the Pennsylvania Railroad company, of which Wayne MacVeagh was counsel, for $7,500 damages for the death of her husband. "Just a few days before the case was to have come up she happened into my office and announced that she had married again. 'Good Lord, madam, I gaped, why couldn't you have waited until your case came up?' It's next to impossible for me to get damages for you now." She said she didn't care very much, and went out, seeming very happy. Well, it just happened that I had a photograph of Panny Davenport on my desk, and when the next day Wayne MacVeagh happened into my office to discuss quite another matter he picked up the photo and admitted it. Whose portrait he asked, I had a sudden inspiration, and I said: "Why, that's the lady who is suing your company for $7,500." "The deuce you say," said he. "Handsome woman, isn't she?" "She is, indeed," I replied. "I'm to be esclaimed, looking at the picture closely. 'A deuced handsome woman, I about say.' A deuced 'handsome woman.' There was a slight pause. 'What'll you take to settle this case?' he asked. 'I thought of my client's second marriage, and I fixed the figure at $5,000. The deal was consummated and the case never came to court.'"

Paid in His Own Coin.

Once in a way Archbishop Temple of Canterbury would get paid back in his own coin. A delightful instance of this is recorded. The church people of a certain parish are said to have strongly urged the bishop to find another sphere for their person, whom they wished to get rid of. Dr. Temple summoned the obnoxious clergyman to his study and suggested a change of benefice. What was it, the parson wanted to know, that his people had to find fault with? "Well," said the bishop of the peculiarly harsh, strident voice that so sadly marred his preaching, "if you insist on knowing, it's your voice, they complain of; they don't like your sermons." "A friend was with me at the cathedral the other day, when your lordship was preaching, and as he went out he said, 'What a fine sermon, but what an unfortunate voice!'"

An Accommodating Witness.

The witness on the stand had been bullied by the lawyer until his patience was exhausted.

"Now," said the attorney, "you say you saw the prisoner draw his pistol?"

"Yes."

"Remember you are on your oath."

"I'm not forgetting it."

"You are sure you are telling the truth?"

"None."

"No mistake about it?"

"None."

"You couldn't be persuaded into any other statement?"

"Ob, let him go on, your honor," pleaded the witness. "I'm a lawyer, and he doesn't know the truth when he sees it, and I'm only too glad to show him how so far as I can."

The Monument Was a Mistake.

A stately granite shaft had been erected in the cemetery of a Massachusetts town in memory of a man whose life had been anything but prosaically worthy. None the less the monument was one of the sights to be shown to a stranger, and one day a former resident of the town who had been away for many years returned and was taken to see the granite obelisk. He was no stranger to the faults and failings of the man whom it celebrated with its gilded inscription, and, after silent contemplation of the shaft on all sides, he said, "Well, if it's for goodness, it's too big, and if it's for badness it's not big enough."—New Haven Chronicle.

Trained Chrysanthemums.

Chrysanthemums in Japan are trained into numerous quaint shapes, like the old English yew trees, in the forms of peacocks, etc. In Tokyo there are gardens filled with life sized figures made entirely of the flowers and leaves, the faces being masks, and these chrysanthemum figures accurately represent court ladies, warriors, children and animals, one of the favorite characters being a young lady with a fox's tail peeping from under her dress and a mask which by the touch of a string turns into Reynard's head.

Down With Impertinent Neighbors.

Mr. Mulhooly—Phwat fur are you makin' such a noise on the piano? I'm not distracted wid y'r racket an' me head achin' looks it wud split in two paces.

Daughter—Them new neighbors next door has been complainin' of my playin'.

Mr. Mulhooly—Begorra, haxmor harder.—New York Weekly.

Not Acquainted With Him.

"Do you know Mr. Fresco, Mr. Albert Fresco?" Inquired Mrs. Nuttich.

"No," said her husband. "Why?"

"I've got an invite to Mrs. Blugore's garden party, and she says they're going to dine at Fresco's."—Philadelphia Press.

Mercenary.

Sue—So you are going to marry Cholly Sportboy. On what grounds do you base your belief that he really loves you?

Mad—On what grounds? On his real estate, of course.—Baltimore Herald.

Grief is the agony of an instant. The indulgence of grief is the blunder of a life.—Disraeli.

Col. J. C. Jones, of the Withrow Lumber company, arrived here this morning from a business trip to Parkersburg.

C. M. Shrewsbury, of the United States district court, was here last night on a business trip. He returned to his home at Parkersburg this morning.

SKETCHES

FROM THE LIFE OF A WEST VIRGINIA METHODIST PREACHER WORTHY OF PERUSAL.

Rev. Dr. Fullerton Reviews Through the Columns of the Telegram His Thirty Years' Work in the West Virginia Ministry.

Sketch XIV.

The presiding elders during this pastoral term were Henry Clay Sanford and James M. Warden, both veterans of high standing and now among the remaining senior members of the conference. Mr. Sanford has served half a century in the effective ranks, a Christian gentleman beloved wherever known, a man who has but few enemies, genial and sympathetic, honorable in all the responsibilities of life and as modest as minister can be. Dr. Warden was quiet, thoughtful and unostentatious, reserved in disposition and at the same time true in his friendships and devoted to loyalty to his church an able preacher and wise counselor. He is now resting from his labors in his declining years at Grafton.

"Come up and help me establish the M. E. church at this point," was the invitation Mr. Fullerton received from a young minister stationed 100 miles from Charleston on the like of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad. "We want you to help us in special services in this new field for a week or two." Mr. Fullerton went, found a new town rapidly growing, rough and wild as new railroad towns in that region of country usually were. The young preacher from whom the invitation came had no church building, no organized congregation; in fact, nothing just then to build on. Special services under the care of another branch of Methodism were in progress in the town. These good people had a church house of their own and were established. The needs of the place so far as the Methodist denomination was concerned seemed to be fully met. Mr. Fullerton, therefore, took the train the next day and returned home. His policy has always been not to enter any field where some other branch of the Methodist church has already prepared to hold the fort, and is fully equipped to do so. It is very strange in these days of modern fraternal greetings to see two or more branches of the same general denomination holding the same doctrines and in the main the same church, with nothing to divide them except a difference in sectarian name or an old prejudice from some early controversy which the "fathers" had, trying to sustain themselves in some small town or rural neighborhood, spending much money to keep up two or more organizations of the same faith, which one is sufficient, and where two or more ministers have less than a living salary. To such vain methods of Christian work the pastor at Charleston was resolutely opposed, and has so continued to this day. Though such opposition has not always attracted on his behalf the popularity which many desire, and which sometimes is caused to be known as an ardent and zealous purpose to "advance the cause." Alas! the pity of it, to see in many small country villages from six to a dozen little struggling churches, with as many threadbare, struggling preachers and poorly clad families, for which these pastors are responsible. Christianity is not dreams, but facts. Christianity is not helped by these few and feeble organizations. One good, strong church for each denomination would be a great blessing to such places and bring about silent contemplation of the shaft on all sides, but as it is the opposite is often true, and bickering and bitterness are found.

One Saturday while Mr. Fullerton was at Charleston a brother minister, who had just erected a fine new church forty miles from the city, came to see him in a great state of excitement. "What am I to do," said this eccentric brother. "Have just received a telegram from Dr. DeH— he can't come; he had to fill some other forgotten engagement. You must come and take his place. Church must be dedicated tomorrow. In need of money; $1,700 to raise. You must come." Well, Mr. Fullerton, in company with a friend, started on Sunday morning at 3 o'clock, and after a drive of eight hours, held the dedicatory service, preached a long sermon and raised the debt. For all this service and providing a supply for his own pulpit, he received nothing except the sense of having done a good deed. When the peculiar brother aforesaid was introducing the substitute preacher to the congregation, he said: "If I meet Dr. — I will whip him." Mr. Fullerton said nothing to this strange threat against the absentee until near the close of the service, when he informed the pastor, it must be taken back in the presence of the entire congregation and apology offered, as the impression made by such a threat would remain long after the occasion was forgotten. The good brother, with tears and pain, did as requested and all the people said amen. That pastor and the man who was to dedicate that church have long since passed over to the majority. The man who accompanied Mr. Fullerton has also gone and the person who was supply on that day at Charleston is likewise numbered among those of the church triumphant. Such is life. Alas! how many changes in so brief a period. The church at Charleston during this pastorate had a prosperous time. All the interests of the congregation were on the ascendancy. The number of people attending public services greatly increased until the audience became one of the largest in the city, and a large number of new names were added to the list of membership.

During this pastorate the capitol of the state made its second trip to Charleston to remain until the present time or longer. It was expected that the arrival of so august an institution would give rise to great enthusiasm among the people and make a time long to be remembered.

"Strange is human nature in some things and some times in all things," said Artemus Ward, without much relevancy to any particular object. So it was with the capitol. There was no excitement, no bonfires, no cracker-shooting, no Chinese lanterns, no praise services. They just said: Well, we have our own, own again, and this time we will keep it. They took it away from us unjustly before, but this time they are beaten. And so the poor capitol has had a rest for a score of years. How long will it continue? (To Be Continued.)

Lewis, of this city; and Floy, Teter, George Chin and two or three other prominent business men of Belington. It is the intention to begin the construction work on the bottling plant next Monday. The contract for the ice plant has not yet been awarded, but will be in the near future. It is the intention to have the former in operation in a few weeks and the latter about the first of next March. The capacity will be sufficient to meet the trade.

Very Remarkable Cure of Diarrhoea.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment, without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by Geo. C. Stone.

MATINEE TOMORROW AFTERNOON

IN THE UNION LAND THEATER IN THE PARK—SUMMER CARS WILL RUN.

Costumes of the Company Receive Favorable Comment—New Play Proves Quite Popular—Good Attendance Last Night.

The matinee at the Union Land park by the Carroll Comedy company tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock is looked forward to by the ladies and children with much pleasure. Two summer cars will begin running around the loop and to and from the park at 1 o'clock and will continue to run until after the performance. The admission will be 10 cents for children and 15 cents for adults. Extra specialties will be put on especially for the ladies and children. A large attendance is anticipated.

"The Will of Iron" was presented last night to a big house. It is an English comedy drama and entirely different from the piece presented the first of the week. The bill was especially pleasing to the ladies. The beautiful costumes worn by the ladies of the company on the stage elicited much admiration. There have been very many favorable comments on the wardrobe displayed by the company, which is much better than generally seen worn by traveling organizations. This play will be given the remainder of the week.

The first of next week there will be an elaborate scenic production, Frank Harvey's melodrama, "The Crimes of London," a play that will doubtless be extraordinarily pleasing and popular. New scenery was used last night. There were three new drop curtains, and they were much admired by all present. The stage is now completely equipped with scenery and everything is in perfect running order. The attendance thus far has been very gratifying and the season promises to be highly successful.
