THE NEW YORK WORLD THIRICE-A-WEEK EDITION

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World long ago established itself in public favor, and it is now recognized as the strongest publication of its kind in the United States. Advertisers and publishers seeking clubbing combinations—and they know best—universally testify to this. It is widely circulated in every State and Territory of the Union, and even in remote South Africa and on the gold fields in the deserts of Australia. These are the things that tell.

Next year we have the Presidential campaign, in which all Americans are deeply interested. Already the issues are being discussed and the two great parties are preparing for the first moves. You will not want to miss any details and if you subscribe now your year's subscription will cover the campaign from beginning to end.

The Thrice-a-Week World is absolutely fair in its political news. Partisan bias is never allowed to affect its news columns, the Democrat and Republican alike can obtain in its pages truthful accounts of all the great political contests.

In addition to all the news, the Thrice-a-Week World furnishes the best serial fiction, elaborate market reports and other features of interest.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the Clarkburg Weekly Telegram, together one year for $1.65.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. d-w-tf.

THE MULTICOLORED STAR.

How to Make and Operate This Interesting Toy.

The multicolored star producer is an arrangement that any boy or girl can make and is a toy that is decidedly interesting. This is how to make it:

Fold a large, square piece of pliable cardboard in the center, like the cover of a book. In the center of this folded cardboard punch a hole with a strong pin, insert the point of a compass and draw a circle on the front and back of the folded paper three inches in diameter. In each of these two circles draw a triangle—one with the point upward, the other with the point downward. Cut these triangles out with a sharp knife. Open the cardboard almost flat and stand it upright on the table a short distance from a white wall or a large sheet of white paper. Place two candles in such a way that the two shadows of the two stars cover one another. "This is done by moving the candlesticks sideways, or if the candles stand too low, by putting books underneath the sticks. If you hold a glass containing a solution of red ink and water or green paint and water or a colored tissue paper spanned over a wooden frame between the flame of the candle and one of the triangles the star on the white wall or white sheet of paper will appear in three colors—the center white, while the points show the color of the fluid or the tissue paper and their supplementary colors. For red the supplementary color is light green; for green it is red, and for yellow it is violet.

A FUNNY GAME.

Seeing the Full Moon Often Fools the Little Girls.

Here is a funny game to play: Stand facing a girl and say to her, "You can't make the same motions I am going to make."

"Then she will say, 'Just see if I can't.'"

Now do this: Put your left hand forward, point the forefinger toward your face and make a circle around your face with it, saying, "I see the full moon."

Next point at each eye and say, "Two eyes;" then touch your nose, saying, "A nose;" then touch your mouth and say, "And a mouth."

Now let your arm fall and tell the girl to do exactly as you did and say what you said.

The point is this: She will be sure to do all the motions with her right hand instead of her left.

And you can promptly say, "No; you didn't do it right." She will ask you to go through "the motions again and very likely will use her right hand again.

But suppose she is left handed? She will naturally use her left hand and get the trick right. So you should tell her, "Well, you can't do it again," and be sure to use your right hand when you show her again. When she tries to do as you did she will most likely use her left hand, and so you can say, "You're wrong this time."

This trick amuses everybody.

Game of Gentle Lady.

Do you know this game? One player begins, "I, gentle lady, always gentle, come from the gentle land, always gentle, beg leave to inform you that my ship has just come in from China laden with apricots."

The next player has to report, adding some object beginning with "b," such as biscuit, the next player one beginning with "c," and so on down the alphabet. If any one hesitates or makes a mistake, a twist of paper is stuck in her hair, and she is "one horned" instead of the "gentle" lady and for two mistakes the "two horned lady" and so on—"Games of American Children."

Big and Little Boat.

A little boy was taken down to the harbor by his father, where he saw, for the first time, a large steamer towed by a puffing, whistling, little tug, with an immense hawser connecting the two. "Oh, papa, papa!" he shouted in excitement. "See! The big boat has the little one by the tail, and he's a-squealing."

The Frugal Snail.

The frugal snail, with forecast of repose, Carries his house with him where'er he goes; Peeps out, and if there comes a shower of rain Retreats to his small domicile again. Touch but a tip of him, a horn—'tis well—he curls up in his sanctuatory shell. He's his own landlord, his own tenant; stay Long as he will, he drags no quarter-day. Himself he boards and lodges; both invites And feasts himself; sleeps with himself or nights. He spares the upholsterer trouble to procure Chatter; himself is his own furniture And his sole riches. Where'er he roams, Knock when you will, he's sure to be at home.

HIS GRUDGE?

(Original.)

"I've heard, sub, that there has been a fight in this place, and one of the contestants took an unfair advantage of the other."

"Ver' referin' to the set-to in the Empire saloon last night. Yas; the Texas man shot t'other feller when he was lookin' down on the floor for a half dollar he'd dropped. They'd had some words about the cards, but none of us 'bout here expects a man to shoot when t'other feller isn't expectin' nothin'."

"Do you know the Texas man's name, sub?"

"No, sir; he hain't been here long. Why are you concerned about him?"

"I've been lookin' fo' a man, sub, and when I heard that this Texas man had done a mean, murderous trick I wondered if he weren't the man I'm lookin' for. Has he been arrested?"

"Well, no. There ain't nobody here as likes to tackle him."

By this time a number of citizens had gathered round the man who was looking for some one. He was a white headed old man, but very erect and with plenty of vigor, at least in his eye. He was well dressed and had the air of a gentleman.

"There he is now," said one of the bystanders as a man emerged from a saloon and walked across the street. The stranger started, the blood rushing into his face, then rushing back again. His hand shook. Indeed he trembled all over. Then he mastered himself and said coolly:

"Gentlemen, that's the man I'm lookin' fo'. I request yo' permission to change the co'se of the law somewhat. I would like to fight the 'accused.'"

"There was a look of surprise on the faces of those standing by."

"Oh, he'd eat you up," said one of them. "He's young and spry and mean enough to rob a dead nigger. You're too-good stuff to buck against a man like that."

"I know I'm not young, sub. How could I be when I served under General Lee in Virginia? Trust me, sub, I've just enough grit left in me to tackle that man—not another man; that particular man."

The stranger turned and walked toward the object of his search. The crowd went with him. The Texas man saw them coming and gave them a defiant glance. Suddenly he recognized the stranger and paled.

"I've found yo' at last, Jim," said the old man, "but I've had a long hunt." Then, turning to the crowd, he added: "This man and I desiah yo' permission to settle a private matter." Will any gentleman present make the arrangements?

A representative man was urged forward and at once began to provide for a meeting. The principals were to step back into the "clearing," off the street, stand thirty paces apart and at a signal advance, firing till their revolvers were emptied. The crowd submitted under protest, for they did not doubt that the Texas man would commit another murder. However, some of the onlookers observed that he was growing nervous under the veteran's glittering eye, which was never for a moment withdrawn from him.

Slowly his at a burial, for no one doubted that one at least of the enemies would die, the party passed between two houses and proceeded over cracking twigs through a wood to the clearing. The Texas man and the stranger walked a little in advance, the former peering straight before him, as if to escape the fixed glance of the veteran, who kept his head turned toward his enemy, never for a moment relaxing his gaze. Once only did the murderer turn to meet that relentless glare, and then he shuddered as if the very marrow in his bones had been frozen. One of the followers who held the advance and saw the expression of the old man's eyes dropped back and whispered to another: "That ain't no live man. He's come back from the dead to avenge some wrong."

In the center of the cleared space the party stopped, the manager of the affair examined the principals to make sure they had no concealed weapons, relieving the Texas man of a revolver and a knife, and then placed them in position, handing each a revolver. The master of ceremonies stood with a pistol in his hand waiting for the crowd to get back out of the way. Now that the Texas man was face to face with his opponent he seemed to have passed under a spell. He was covering under the other's merciless glance, vainly endeavoring to turn his own aside. Then the veteran, as if to give the man a chance to recover his equanimity, turned to the manager.

"We ar' waitin' fo' yo', sub."

The manager, with deliberation raised his weapon to give the signal, the veteran still looking at him, then just before the signal turned again to his enemy. The Texas man had apparently recovered from the spell and when the signal shot rang out raised his weapon with the rapidity of lightning and sent a bullet tearing his opponent's coat at the side of the left breast; and passing between the breast and the arm. Before he could fire again the veteran had emptied a chamber of his revolver. The Texas man stretched himself upward on his toes (there was a red hole in the very center of his forehead) and fell. His enemy stepped over to where he lay and looked down at him. The fallen man shuddered and was dead.

"Stranger," said the manager, "we're much obliged, and now tellin' us what he could not do here him?"

"I could not do it, sub. I should have to couple with his name of—"

"The veteran's voice broke tremulously. "Gentlemen, good mornin'!"

And he strode away.

Laborers of the Andes.

The majority of the laborers in the mountains of Peru are Cholos, or Indians born in the Sierra. They are found incapable of doing efficient work on the coasts or in the warmer altitudes without a long course of acclimatization. If gangs of these Cholos have for special purposes been taken down suddenly from the Sierra to work at altitudes of from 2,000 to 5,000 feet sickness and fever have resulted from the change.

Voices.

All long known objects, even a mere window fastening or a particular door latch, have sounds which are a sort of recognized voice to us—a voice that will thrill and awaken when it has been used to touch deep lying fibers.

Not Compulsory.

"Tell me, colonel," asked the beginner in politics, addressing the gray haired statesman, "can a politician be honest?"

"I suppose so, my boy," replied the veteran, "but—ah!—it isn't necessary."—Collier's Weekly.

Ladies and Children

Who can not stand the shocking strain of laxatives and cathartics pills are especially fond of Little Early Risers. All persons who find it necessary to take a liver medicine should try these easy pills, and compare the agreeably pleasant and strengthening effect with the nauseating and weakening conditions following the use of other remedies. Little Early Risers cure biliousness, constipation, sick headache, jaundice, malaria and liver troubles. Sold by Wells & Haymaker.

In the matter of Arthur C. Taylor, Bankrupt; No. 421, in Bankruptcy.

PETITION FOR DISCHARGE.

To the Honorable Joan J. Jackson, Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of West Virginia:

Arthur C. Taylor, of Faimont, in the County of Marion, and State of West Virginia, in said district, respectfully represents that on the 4th day of May, last past, he was duly adjudicated a bankrupt under the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; that he has duly surrendered all his property and rights of property, and has fully complied with all the requirements of said acts, and of the orders of the court touching his bankruptcy.

Wherefore he prays that he may be decreed by the court to have a full discharge from all debts provable against his estate under said bankruptcy acts, except such debts as are excepted by law from such discharge.

Dated this 28th day of April, A. D. 1904.

(Signed) ARTHUR C. TAYLOR, Bankrupt.

(Signed) SPERRY & SPERRY, Attorneys.
