WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

DEER PARK HOTEL, Deer Park, Maryland.

This famous Allegheny Mountain hostelry will open on June 18, with prospects for a brilliant season. Twelve cottages have been renovated and painted, inside and out. Two of the choicest can be secured if application is made at once. Many suites of rooms have been engaged in the hotel. The popularity of this resort is due to its splendid location, 2,800 feet above the sea level, out of range of malaria and mosquitoes. Every convenience is provided for guests. The hotel is provided with all modern improvements for comfort; and bowling alleys, billiard rooms, tennis courts, golf links, swimming pools, etc., for amusement. An entirely new livery equipment has been installed. Three solid vestibuled trains each way daily with Pullman cars via the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, Louisville and St. Louis. Stop-overs allowed on all through tickets. Address W. E. BURWELL, Manager, Camden Station, Baltimore, until June 1, afterward Deer Park, Md.

If you need a trunk, valise, suit case or umbrella go to Merriman's shoe, hat and men's furnishing store, where you can get the best for the least money. He has the finest and most complete stock of these goods in the city and guarantees prices the lowest. jun29ff

The Real Thing

(Original)
"The gentleman on the floor below is dead, sir."
"Dead? What did he die of?"
"Murdered."
"You don't mean it! Well, put my things into that suit case. I must be off in half an hour sharp or miss my train."
While the man was packing I put in the last words of a chapter of a story I was writing—for I am a slave of the pen—then looking at my watch and dropping my work rushed for the train. I was going to the country to spend Sunday with my fiancée.
The next morning was bright and beautiful. Kathryn and I strolled away from the house and found a shady nook where we sat looking alternately at a superb view and into each other's eyes.
"Stephen," she was saying, "do you know I lay awake last night thinking that"—She paused and cast her eyes on the ground.
"Thinking what, love?"
"Papa says that you and I haven't a single mutual acquaintance."
I was holding her hand. I dropped it. "You are offended," she said, tears starting into her eyes.
"No, hurt. You have no confidence in me for myself; only what you may learn from others. Suppose I should be accused of some dark crime, would you stand by me with perfect faith when all others were sure of my guilt? Would you visit me in prison? Would you pour words of comfort into my ear?"
"Oh, Henry," she cried, throwing herself into my arms, "I would share your captivity with you. I would die with you."
There was a pause. I heard words distinctly spoken, "That's your man."
I turned, and a man stepped out from behind a bush. I had never seen him before, but a companion I recognized as an elevator boy in the apartment house where I had my rooms.
"That's Mr. Perkins," said the boy, referring to me.
"Mr. Perkins, I'll trouble you to come with me."
"Come with you! Who are you and what do you mean?"
"I am a constable come to arrest you for the murder of Anthony Hurd, a gentleman occupying rooms in your apartment house."
"Nothing will take the romance out of a person so quickly as being placed suddenly in one of those romantic situations in which one delights to read of others. I should have bitterly repelled the allegation. Instead I said impatiently:
"What rot! I haven't murdered anybody."
The man paid no attention to my words—instead he slipped a pair of handcuffs on my wrists.
Kathryn, the heroine of this story, should have clung to me in tears, crying my innocence between her sobs. Instead she said, turning a bit pale:
"This is very strange."
"Kathryn," I exclaimed, looking at her, disappointed and astonished, "do you think me a murderer?"
There were conflicting emotions in Kathryn's breast. She had engaged herself to a man she knew very little about. Her father had counseled waiting till my references from Sydney, Australia, where I had lived till I came to America, could arrive. But Kathryn was as full of romance as a woman who loves.
"He's been fooling you, miss," said the constable. "He's a larrikin from Australia."
"What's a larrikin?" asked Kathryn, horror stricken at having loved any one with such a designation.
"The descendant of the Botany bay criminals and a shipload of women from the London alleys sent out to Australia many years ago."
Kathryn covered her face with her hands and turned her back.
"Kathryn," I said reproachfully as I was led away, "how about your fine words to share my captivity, to die with me?"
That there is romance in men and women, though they do not always express it as in books, was evident from Kathryn's reply, who as soon as put to the test relinquished her book romance for the real article.
"You shall have every opportunity to vindicate yourself. Papa will leave no stone unturned to prove that you are innocent. And, oh, Henry—this with a touch of tremor—"I do hope you are innocent!"
"Spoken like a true woman. There is some mistake here. As soon as I can untangle it I will come to you."
I kissed my hand to her as I was led away, but she was too uncertain to return it. I left her standing where we had been sitting, looking at me ruefully.
At my preliminary examination the next day the following paper found in my room was read:
"I tell you, Anthony, as I am a larrikin, for this deed done in the wilds of Australia I will follow you to the jungles of India, to the wilds of America, and wherever I find you you shall die."
"Judge," I cried, "somebody has been 'stealing my thunder.' That's the last words of a chapter to a novel I wrote before leaving the city."
"The paper was found in your room," said the judge. "The man murdered on the floor below was Anthony Hurd."
"And the villain of my story was Anthony Hurd?"
I was not long in convincing the court and getting a discharge. In my room I found mail from Australia containing my credentials. I hastened to Kathryn, explained all, read the letters to her, and we fell into each other's arms just as they do in book romances.

THE TELEGRAM'S GREAT PROFIT SHARING CONTEST!

$25,000
IN
500 CASH PRIZES
THIS IS FOR YOU!

I RECKON THERE WILL BE 15,841,444 VOTES CAST FOR PRESIDENT ON NOV. 8, 1904. WHAT DO YOU FIGURE IT?
$10,000
IN CASH FOR THE NEAREST GUESS.

1st Prize, $10,000, 2nd Prize, $5,000, 3rd Prize, $1,000
8 Special Prizes of $500 Each for Early Subscriptions

Every subscriber to The Daily or Weekly Telegram has an opportunity to share in these cash prizes. The subject matter of the interesting contest in which these large prizes will be paid is the Total Popular Vote to be cast for the office of President of the United States on the 8th day of November, 1904. Every man, woman or child in the United States should be interested in the Greatest Election the country has ever had.

Conditions of this Great Contest.

There are two plans by which you may participate in this great contest:
FIRST—By every paid in advance subscription to the Daily or Weekly Telegram. For every dollar paid in advance you are entitled to one fifty cent estimate.
SECOND—Estimates will be sold direct from this office at the rate of 40 cents each or three for one dollar.
These certificates will insure to him any prizes which his estimates will entitle him to claim. When you send us your subscription also send us your estimate of the Total Vote to be cast on November 8th, 1904, for the office of President. In making your estimates consult the figures below showing the total vote for President from Lincoln to McKinley. Write your name, address and estimates of the vote in the Subscription Blank below and mail the blank with your subscription to The Daily or Weekly Telegram. The paper will be sent to you regularly and we will mail to you certificates containing the figures of the estimates which you send us. These certificates will guarantee to you any prize which your estimate entitles you to. Keep these certificates until the prizes are awarded, so that you can compare your figures with the official figures at the close of the contest. The contest will close at midnight, November 7th, 1904, and no estimates received after that hour will be allowed. The official figures of the government showing the total vote cast for the office of President will determine who are entitled to the prizes and will be determined by a disinterested committee of prominent judges just as soon as the official figures can be ascertained. When the prizes are given every subscriber who holds a certificate in the Contest will receive a printed list of the names. In addition to the large general prizes there are Eight Special Prizes of $500.00 each for Early Subscriptions.
Act at once. It may mean a fortune to you. The money with which to pay the prizes has been deposited by the Press Publishing Association, in the Central Savings Bank, Detroit, Mich., and can be used for no other purpose. In case of a tie for any individual prize such prize will be equally divided between the contestants.

Participation in this contest is not confined to our readers, as the contest is being advertised in a number of other publications, the subscribers to all of which have an equal opportunity to share in the division of the prizes.
