The Teachers' Institute.

Harrison county is to be highly congratulated upon the success thus far of the teachers' institute and the teachers, instructors and county superintendent have just cause to be proud of the institute. It is made up of earnest people, mostly young people, who are devoting themselves to the work of the institute and giving an undivided interest in what is being done. They are there evidently for the purpose of learning and improving, and right here is where the instructors come in. Both Prof. Albert and Prof. Deah have already shown themselves worthy. Trained in the art of instructing, they bring that into full play, but they go farther by throwing their souls into the work, and as the result of this happy combination they have won the confidence, attracted the attention and promoted the desires of the teachers.

It is a state of affairs seldom attained and because of the fact that such a state is highly beneficial to the members of the institute, it follows that great good to the children of Harrison county of school age will grow out of it. It is a fine post-graduate course, we may truthfully say, and polishes the knowledge of the teachers, who will naturally let their light shine, when they take up school work this fall and winter. And as to the county superintendent. There are few persons, if any, who do not know that the cause of education is nearest his heart and has been ever since he chose teaching as his profession. Since he assumed the office of county superintendent, he has devoted his most earnest effort to the fostering and building up of the schools of the county, and, in doing that one of the principal features of his work has been to strengthen and encourage the teachers and to see that they put forth their best efforts, but he has not done this in an arbitrary way, but rather has used the initiative and persuasive, setting a good example at all times and using patience and liberality.

These conditions, especially characteristic of the present institute, are helpful to the cause of education and the people of Clarksburg should lend every possible encouragement to make the institute even greater than it is and to show a most hearty welcome to this representative body, whose labors are not as fully paid for as they really deserve.

Be a Man.

If every one followed out the Golden Rule—"Do unto others as you would they should do unto you"—this world would indeed be a happy one. But everyone does not and thus it is that hatred, malice, wickedness and sorrow become prolific and spoil the happiness and enjoyment that otherwise would prevail within this mortal coil.

A beautiful exemplification of the working of this holy precept occurred right in the city of Clarksburg yesterday and by it two men's hearts were made lighter and happier and the dozen or so others who became aware of it felt more inclined to work toward elevating the code of social ethics and building stronger the noble virtue of brotherly love. Not only that but they felt better and experienced the joyful inspiration of being men among men. And the end of it is not yet.

A gentleman who occupies the position of traveling passenger agent for one of the largest railroads of the country was a visitor in the city on business. While attending to some correspondence at a writing desk in one of the city hotels he pulled out his pocket-book to extract some papers from it. He laid it down upon the desk and after finishing his writing and while his mind was busily occupied with business affairs he walked away and left the wallet upon the writing desk.

So the wallet lay for some length of time. Then a man came along and sat down at the desk to write a letter. He found the pocket-book. The wallet contained besides some valuable papers a considerable sum of money and a dozen passes over as many different railroad systems. Did that man wink to himself slyly and put the pocket-book down in his trousers' pocket? Did he hold on to it with a miserly clinch and keep his mouth shut? Did he rush off to a daily newspaper office and advertise a "pocket-book found" with a reward proposition attached to it? No. He didn't because he was a man and when we say man we mean it in the highest sense of the term.

Instead of greedily anticipating a virtual windfall of money he looked into the pocket-book to see if there was anything contained therein that would lead to identification of its right and lawful owner. He saw the owner's name and by the railroad passes he saw what the man's occupation was. Leaving his work and his business affairs he went out on a hunt for the owner of the pocket-book. Common sense directed him to the city passenger agent's office of the railroad station. There he found that the man had stopped there and would soon return again. He left the wallet there with the railroad official, whom he knew personally and knew to be a man. Then he went on his way rejoicing.

The owner of the wallet, worried into a very unhappy frame of mind over his loss soon caught the happy information over telephone that his property had been found and in a short space of time he had his pocket-book in his hands again with the contents intact and not even the papers and other valuables disturbed nor moved from place.

That man merely did his duty. He let the incident drop right there and modestly went on his way. He is a man entitled to be numbered among the noble brotherhood of real men. A man who would even ask for a reward for the return of some article he accidentally finds is too little and mean to be accorded the respect and esteem that is due to a gentleman. He who would keep it is not considered a man but a thief. But, sad to relate there are many men of this stamp. And no one finds this to be only too true more than newspaper publishers who run a "Lost and found" department in their newspaper.

The Golden Rule is a holy, righteous, noble and beautiful thing. The episode here related in which the rule was applied shows that a little touch of humanity, a little display of manhood makes the whole world akin. That little incident worked a power toward good that is inestimable. The result of that power did not stop with the man who found the pocket-book nor the man who lost it. Its influence is yet felt and will still be felt.

Whether you find anything or not, be a man. And if you would be a man there is no thing, no power on earth that will help you to be more than that one simple, beautiful little rule:—

"ALL THINGS WHATSOEVER YE WOULD THAT MEN SHOULD DO TO YOU DO YE EVEN SO TO THEM."

The spluttering of the Democratic clique with the saliva of the silly running down the corners of its foul and sin-stained mouth says to the members of the parasites of the Democratic clique, "Don't talk local politics." We do not wonder at that, since the editor of that mongrel sheet is on public record as denouncing some of the clique's nominees and the action of the clique for making such nominations, but you can bet your bottom dollar that if the clique had seen the little fellow first there would not have been any thing said about the mistake made in the nominations, nor any such advice as that to repudiate the plan the clique had agreed upon not to talk national issues.

Joe and Jack and the Painter.
Joe and Jack went out to play, Each in a brand new suit. Jack was dressed like a sailor man, Joe's red coat looked cute.
Jack determined to be quite good, But Joe said: "Aber nit." He thought the day too fine by far Nonsense and fun to quit.
They met a painter hard at work, And on him played a trick. They showed him stunts in color schemes That really made him sick.
This tale in pictures you will see In Saturday's comic pages. You'll find it funnier by far Than a bunch of monkey cages.

Notice.
All persons participating in the grand Labor Day parade here Monday, Sept. 5, 1904, will conform with the intention of the Labor Council to make the same strictly non-partisan, and will therefore have nothing that would savor whatever of politics. The celebration here is for the purpose, and that only, of promoting the welfare of labor and laboring men, especially organized labor, and not to advance the interests of any political party or candidate. This is done merely to call attention to the character of the demonstration and not because there has been any indication that any one will undertake to avail themselves of the occasion, as one to advance any one's political interests.
