

MOUNTAINEER CAPTURED BY DEPUTY MARSHAL HUPP

Edward Wyatt, Illicit Retailer and Probably a Moonshiner, Run Down by the Officer--Saws Handcuffs Off During Marshal's Absence but Lat- ter Returns Just in Time to Keep Him from Fleeing.

United States Deputy Marshal E. D. Hupp brought Edward Wyatt here from Alpine, Randolph county, Wednesday evening and lodged him in jail on the charge of selling liquor without a government license. At the time of the violation he was at the home of his father one mile and a half from the Rich Mountain post-office. He confessed before United States Commissioner Thomas S. Spates Thursday morning and the commissioner fixed his bond at three hundred dollars for the federal court here in October. In default he was sent to jail.

The marshal had a peculiar experience with the fellow, who almost effected his escape. Shortly after the arrest the officer deputized a man to take charge of Wyatt, while he went in search of another violator.

The deputy was gone an hour and a half from the Rich Mountain post-office fellow, failing to find him. Imagine his surprise upon his return to find that Wyatt had gotten hold of a file and sawed the handcuffs off, which the officer placed on him before going after the other violator.

Wyatt was just finishing the task of sawing off the iron cuffs, when the officer returned and in a few seconds more would have fled to the mountains and doubtless have made his escape.

The officer kept an eye on him after that until he landed him in jail, taking no chances, whatever, with him. He regards the capture important as there is ground for the belief that Wyatt engages in moonshining.
