C., says: "For years my wife suffered intensely from dyspepsia, complicated with a torpid liver, until she lost her strength and liver, and became a mere wreck of her former self. Then she tried Electric Bitters, which helped her at once, and finally made her entirely well. She is now strong and healthy." Stone & Mercer and J. G. THE PENRHYN DIVERS

FEATS OF THESE RECKLESS PACIFIC OCEAN ISLANDERS.

They Are About the Most Daring of All Underwater Workers—Paralytic, Sharks and Sting Ray Are Among the Dangers They Brave.

Three native divers famous for their deep water feats came out in a pearling sloop with us one afternoon and gave a fine exhibition, saying a writer in the London Graphic. The boat over which we halted was about ninety feet under the surface. Our three divers stripped to a "pareo" apiece, and then, squatting down on the gunwale of the boat, with their hands hanging over their knees, appeared to meditate. They were "taking their wind," the white steersman informed me. After about five minutes of perfect stillness they suddenly got up and dived off the thwart. The rest of us nudged up and down the tiny deck, talked, speculated and passed away the time for what seemed an extraordinarily long period. No one, unfortunately, had brought a watch, but the traders and schooner captains all agree in saying that the Penrhyn diver can stay under water for full three minutes. At last, one after another, the dark heads popped up again, and the divers, each carrying a shell or board, swam back to the boat, got on board and presented their catch to me with the ease, grace and high bred courtesy that are the birthright of all Pacific Islanders.

As a general rule, the divers carry baskets and fill them before coming up. Each man opens his ova catch at once and hunts through the shells for pearls. Usually he does not find any. Now and then he gets a small gray pearl or a decent white one or a big, irregular "baroque" pearl of the "new" variety, and once in a month or so, Sundays he is rewarded by a large, gleaming gem worth several hundred pounds, for which he will probably get £20 or £30.

Diving dresses are sometimes used in Penrhyn, but in such an irregular and risky manner that they are really more dangerous than the ordinary method. The suit is nothing but a helmet and jumper. No boots are worn, no clothing whatever on the legs, and there are no weights to preserve the diver's balance. It sometimes happens, though wonderfully seldom, that the diver trips, falls and turns upside down, the heavy helmet keeping him head downward until the air runs out under the jumper, and he is miserably suffocated. The air pump above is often carelessly worked, in any case, and there is no recognized system of signals except the jerks that mean "Pull up."

"They're the most reckless devils on the face of the earth," said a local trader. "Once let a man strike a good time, and he won't leave it. He'll stick down there all day, grubbing away in twenty fathoms or more till he feels paralysis coming on."

"Paralysis?"

"Yes—they get it, lots of 'em. If you was to go down in twenty fathoms—they can do five and twenty, but anything over is touch and go—and stay 'all the day, you'd come up 'owling like anything and not able to move. And when they get some one to come along and splash sea water all night long, and maybe they dies, and maybe they're all right by morning. So they down they goes again, just the same as ever. Sometimes a man'll be pulled up dead at the end of the day. How does that happen? Well, I allow it's because he's been working at a big depth all day and feels all right, and then, do you see, he'll find something a bit extra below of him, in a hole like, and down he'll go after it, and the extra fathom or two does the trick. 'Sharks?' Well, I've seen you pop up at them from the deck of the Duchess, so you know as well as I do how many there are. Didn't 'it them when the fin was up? That's because you 'ave'n't greased your bullet, I suppose. You want to, if the water isn't to turn it aside. But about the divers? Oh, they don't mind sharks, none of them, when they've got the dress on. Sharks is easy scared. You've only got to pull up your jumpers a bit, and the air bubbles out and frightens them to fits. If you meet a shark, you can use your knife on him. The kara manua is the worst. The divers don't like him. He's not as big as a shark, but he's downright wicked, and he's a mouth on him as big as 'alf his body. If an onco comes along 'e'll bite an arm or leg off the man anyway and eat 'im outright if 'e's big enough to do it. Swordfish? Well, they don't often come into the lagoon; it's the fishing canoes outside they'll go for. Yes, they'll run a canoe and a man through at a blow easy enough, but they don't often do it."

"About the diving? Well, I think the naked diving is very near as safe as the machine, taking all things. Worst of it is, if a kara manua or an onco comes along, the diver can't wait his time till it goes. No, he doesn't stab it—not inside the lagoon—because there's too many of them there, and the blood would bring a whole pack about. He gets under a ledge of rock and hopes it'll go away before his wind gives out. If he don't, he gets eat."

THE EYE IN READING.

How Its Jumps Along the Printed Line Are Measured.

We know that an eye at ordinary reading distance takes in about one inch of a line at a time and that in reading a line of an ordinary book the eye makes five or six distinct jumps. But as the movements are so very minute and rapid how have they been measured?

A beam of light is thrown upon the corner of the eye, and this beam is reflected by the cornea on a photographic plate. As the eye moves in reading the reflected beam also moves, and upon a developing plate, which is also kept moving a zigzag line is formed. A study of such photographic tracing shows that the eyes in turning back to pick up the next line have some difficulty in so doing. The longer the line of the next line is better for an eye than a long one, and if the line be much wider than the ordinary newspaper column there is greater effort involved.—Jewellers' Weekly.

Australian Nicknames.

The Australian papers protest that the term "Cornstalks" is not proper a nickname for the inhabitants of the big isle of the south seas. English papers have been in the habit of calling the Australian cricket team its "Cornstalks." Of the Australian states New South Wales alone confers the title "Cornstalk" upon her sons. A Queenslander is a "Bannanlander," a Victorian a "Gum Sucker," a South Australian a "Crow Eater," a West Australian a "Sand Groper."

Thoreau's Deathbed.

When the forest haunting hermit Thoreau lay on his deathbed, a Calvinistic friend called to make inquiry regarding his soul. "Henry," he said anxiously, "have you made your peace with God?" "John," replied the dying naturalist in a whisper, "I didn't know that God and myself had quarrelled."

Croup is quickly cured, and whooping cough will not "run its course" if you use the original Bee's Laxative Honey and Tar. This cough syrup is different from all others because it acts on the bowels. You can not cure croup and whooping cough until you rid the system of all congestion, by working off the cold through a copious action of the bowels. Bee's Laxative Honey and Tar does this, and cures all coughs, croup, whooping cough, etc. No opiates. Sold by Stone & Mercer.

MALARIA UNDERMINES THE HEALTH

When the germs of malaria enter the blood the entire health is affected, and if the blood is not purified of these germs and microbes, Chronic Sores and Ulcers, Liver Spots, Chills and Fever, Bells, Aches and Pains, and a great variety of troubles manifest themselves, and soon the entire system is undermined, leaving the sufferer a prey to a most miserable, weak and nervous condition.

618 W. Market St., Louisville, Ky.

For several years I suffered with Chills and Fever, caused by Malaria in my system, and each autumn for several years I would have a relapse. Finally my physician prescribed F. S. S. I took a few bottles; this was about six years ago. It entirely cured me, and I have never been troubled since. I am sure no other medicine could have given me so complete and immediate relief, and I cannot speak too highly of F. S. S. My partner in business is now taking F. S. S. for an eruption of the skin, and a general run-down condition of the system, and although he has taken but one bottle, already commences to feel better.

I. SHAFER.

F. S. S. counteracts and drives all the poison from the blood and builds up the system by its fine purifying qualities and tonic effects. It strengthens every part, increases the appetite, helps the stomach and digestion, and by supplying the body with rich, pure blood, cures Malaria and all its disagreeable ailments. Unlike most blood medicines F. S. S. is purely vegetable. It does not contain a particle of mineral of any kind to work on the stomach, digesting and strengthening the blood, puts every part of the body in healthy condition. Look on the blood and any medical advice desired without charge.

THEATRICAL NOTES FOR PLAY GOERS

HI HENRY

DARE DEVIL DOROTHY

An attraction which is reported to be one of the few novelties of the present theatrical season will be one of the offerings at the Grand opera house. The plot and play are something new, as in the unravelling of the story every branch of stage work is represented by the characters in the play. For those liking action, there are strong melodramatic climaxes; for lovers of musical comedy charming scenes; admirers of rich comedy are well supplied, while those enjoying a bit of variety will revel in superior singing and dancing while a touch of vaudeville is given in the circus scene in the last act. The title of this unique attraction is "Dare Devil Dorothy," and is styled by its authors as a melodramatic musical comedy novelty. The scenes are located in England and Australia and are said to be exceedingly realistic.

"Dare Devil Dorothy" will be seen at the Traders Grand opera house, Sept. 23, matinee and night.

KING RICHARD THE III

The scenic and costume requirements of Shakespeare's "King Richard and The Third," as portrayed by John Griffith and his excellent company have been carefully looked after. All the scenes are new and fireproof. Copied from the best obtainable sketches. The costumes are rich and historically correct. No Shakespearean company in existence has any better. Many novel mechanical and electrical equipments have been introduced, that will add weird and sensational effects to the scenes requiring animation and extra embellishment. The audiences will realize a great deal more than is usual, for the appeal to the senses covers all the points that experienced management can invest. John Griffith as "King Richard The Third," Shakespeare's foremost tragedy role, will be here on Tuesday night, Sept. 19, at the Traders Grand opera house.
