THE GREAT WHITE DIAMOND

"The Great White Diamond," a melodrama of the most intense order, was the medium used for the exploiting of the talents of the Rosabelle Leslie repertoire company at the Grand opera house last evening. As a melodrama "The Great White Diamond" is "the goods," and as played by this company it lost none of its effectiveness. No one could cavil at the territorial scope if they would at the dramatic. "The Great White Diamond" takes you from London to Frisco, and from the top of the mountains to the bowels of the earth. Scenically the production was all that could be desired.

We haven't seen all the repertoire shows traveling and are free to confess that we don't want to, but we doubt if any "Rep." show extant carries a better scenic production than this company. Of course it is well known that Corse Peyton has the only fur coat in Brooklyn, but Mr. Sim Allen, the manager of Miss Leslie, says furs are vulgar and smell like moth balls, are stenchy so to speak, so he puts his extra 10's, 20's and 30's into scenery, and leaves the rest to John D'Ormond. The best illusion of a rapidly moving train ever seen on a small stage was shown last night. If the B. & O. trains only went as fast as this one nobody would care if the railroad company did abolish passes. "The G. W. D." displayed the entire force of this large company and all the performers were adequate and quite in the picture at all times.

Mr. D'Ormond came back to his own last night, and he looked a trifle repentant from his villainy of the night before. This is the kind of part for him, and besides, while we don't wish to appear jealous, if any one has to make love to the "Kid," we would rather it was Mr. D'Ormond. As for the "Kid," excuse us, Miss Leslie, she was pert, piquant and pretty, and like Topsy, she "just grew" from a girl into almost a woman right before your eyes. Miss Leslie in her Red Riding Hood hunting outfit, with the red "puss in boots" effect was simply stunning. The lady reporter is sick, so we can't describe the costumes. Miss Leslie grows more attractive at each performance. The character work of Mr. Lessig was superb. Mr. Lessig was a Nyclander, and also a very good actor. If we were he then wouldn't worry about that Nyclander affair. We have seen lots of people who could see diamonds in the dark and they weren't Italians either.

Mr. Williams, as Judge Brace, showed the most luxuriant crop of foliage, in the way of histrical embellishments that has been seen this fall. If "Bill Hefner" had all this fall. If "Bill Hefner" had all teen toupees out of it.

The ubiquitous Mr. Backaller bobbed up serenely. On this occasion he was a German. He had a dialect that couldn't be equalled by any Dutch musician that ever led a St. Patrick's Day parade. Mr. Backaller does Irish and German both so well that the Irish think he is German and the German think he is Irish.

Once again did Roy Phillips hang festoons of crepe hair on his profile. Won't we ever get another look at the beauty that enthralled us on Tuesday night?

Mr. Robisch, in a sort of Henry Dixie heel and toe part (that's going back some) had the Lunnon fog way down in his glottes. Blow me, the old chap must ha' kime from seven dials. Bet cher a quid he's heard the old bow bells.

Miss Edna Seicrist moved her boarding house from 38th street out to California. She didn't lose any flesh, in transit. Her disposition was as sweet as ever, but too bad, she took to drink. Maybe it was the company she kept—you know she married Backaller, and any one that trots with him—enough said, No wonder she burnt the hash.

The entire performance as said before was one of unusual merit from all points of view, and it was ably seconded by the bunch from the "alls" that filled in the waits.

Shields and Gail finished their act in the orchestra pit, thus giving a better view of their pole balancing. They received even more applause than usual.

Robisch and Childress appeared in a new act, making three distinct "turns" in a many nights.

Not to be impertinent, but, why not make one "big" act out of all three? You know there is always room at the top—even of a vaudeville bill.

Arthur Blackaller insisted on coming on, and it was shameful the way he spoke of our defenceless councilmen. The audience finally consented to let him retire, knowing that he would get his just deserts from Mrs. Loosfish, his estimable stage wife.

Tonight, with Miss Leslie in the leading role, will be presented "The White Caps," another thriller. At this performance there will be a bunch of bad actors let loose. A couple of "pearl eaters," namely, pigs, will be turned loose, and the person in the audience catching this actor can have him, but like all actors he will have to be supported. Looks like there will be some fun tonight.

MIGHTY HUNTERS HAULED HOME

One of the Clarksburg Transfer Company's largest drayage wagons was sent out Thursday evening to haul in the game a jolly party of hunters were expected to bag. In the party were T. A. Heneghan, "Bud" Skidmore, Dick Goodwin and one Moore. The wagon was going out as they came hoofing it in and though they had nothing to haul in as the result of their unerring aim, they welcomed the vehicle as one to convey their weary bones back home after a fruitless chase over mountain and through vale. It was better than a hay ride.
