ECZEMA SKIN RAW
AND FEVERISH-
ITCHING INTENSE

Eczeema is a tormenting, stubborn disease caused by an acid humor in the blood coming in contact with the skin and producing redness, inflammation and almost intolerable itching. An inactive state of the system and sluggish condition of the eliminative members leaves the waste and refuse matter of the body to collect and sour instead of passing them off through nature's channels of bodily waste. The blood in its efforts to purge the pores and glands of the skin. The acid humor seems to ooze out and set the skin on fire, the straw colored, sticky fluid drying and forming crusts, and the itching is intense. When these pustules are scratched off the skin is left raw and feverish and often a solid sore is formed and kept up by the constant escape of acids from the blood. Local applications of salves, powders, lotions etc. are desirable and should be used because they allay the itching and give the sufferer temporary comfort, but are in no sense curative, because they cannot reach the seat of the trouble, which is in the blood. S. S. S. goes down into the blood, cleanses the circulation of all acids and humors, builds up the thin, sour blood and by removing every vestige of the cause cures Eczema permanently. The irritating eruptions disappear, the itching and burning cease, and the acid-ferred skin, being fed by a fresh, cooling stream of blood, becomes soft and smooth again. S. S. S. is made of healing, purifying roots, herbs and barks that will not damage any part of the system. Book on skin diseases and any medical advice free.

A Case "Like Cures Like"

[Original.]
"Wirt, you are a fool!"
"Call me what you like, so long as you do not slander her."
"I have heard of, but never before seen, a man infatuated with—"
"Have a care."
"Will you listen to me?"
"No."
"Very well. Go and marry a woman who is a disgrace to her sex. More, she is a devil."
"Go you and choose your second, for tomorrow at dawn we meet to prove that you cannot blacken the character of one who is pure as an angel."
Winslow Manchester left the room in a frenzy at the terrible situation, and Wirt Dixey gave way to the violence he felt at the aspersions cast upon the woman who had not been in his room as hour when he received a visit from one who bore a challenge from his friend. He consented to a meeting to take place the next morning.

As soon as Manchester was alone, in stead of going to bed or in any way endeavoring to compose his nerves to meet what promised to be a tragedy he called a cab and drove to a house in one of the prominent avenues.
"Tell your mistress," he said to the servant, "that Winslow Manchester desires to speak to her on a matter of life and death."
A few minutes later a woman came into the room and stood facing Manchester. She was simply and tastefully dressed, without jewelry. She had once possessed physical beauty to a rare degree, but it was beginning to fade though she had not endeavored to hide the coming change by the use of cosmetics. From her appearance no one would have judged her to be what she was, an unscrupulous adventuress.
"I supposed," said Manchester, "when I last parted from you that it would not be necessary for me to meet you again. I paid a high price for having fallen into your toils, but I was content so long as you kept your contract and refrained from snoring me. Now you have bewitched my most intimate friend, and tomorrow morning he is going to shoot me for telling him what you are."
"And how does this concern me?" she asked.
"If you have a germ of womanhood about you go to him, tell him that I am right and prevent the meeting."
She turned and walked to the other end of the room, with her face averted. He knew that she was deliberating and hoped that she would show mercy. Her mind was soon made up.
"You had well for your own release," she said, "but you must pay more for the release of your friend."
"Name the sum."
"It is not a sum, but a person. There is one way only by which you can prevent a marriage between Wirt Dixey and myself. Marry me before your meeting with him takes place, and he will have no reason to protect me from your aspersions."
"You? I marry you! You marry me! Hell and heaven are not more deadly enemies."
"I have at my disposal two means of satisfying my enmity. I leave you to choose between them. If you fight Dixey one or both of you may die. If you marry me I will play with you during the rest of your life as a cat will worry a mouse."
"If I were able to fall I would prefer the former, and yet in that event you would carry out your purpose with Dixey."
Manchester knew the woman and understood the alternative. He spent the time that remained before the meeting deliberating and at the last moment chose the marriage. When the clock struck 5 he was the husband of this creature, whose object was not now money, but revenge. As soon as the ceremony was over they stepped into a carriage and drove to the place appointed for the duel. Dixey was pacing back and forth excitedly. He saw Manchester alight and hand out the woman he was to marry.
"Hear from her own lips," he said, "what you would not believe from mine."
"Wirt Dixey," said the woman, "I first made a fool of Winslow Manchester and bled him for $10,000. But he was not so great a fool as you and would not marry me. At last, however, through you, I have forced him to be my husband."
She paused for a moment and was about to proceed when she was interrupted by Dixey's second.
"Gentlemen," he said to those present, "you have heard this woman aver that she forced Winslow Manchester to marry her."
"And suppose they have?" asked the woman angrily.
"I am a lawyer, and with that statement, considering your character, I will engage to secure an annulment of the marriage."
Meanwhile Dixey had been taking in the situation and, grasping Manchester's hand, said bitterly:
"Winslow, can you forgive me? I can never forgive myself. As for you?" turning to the woman.
"Spare yourself any disagreeable words. I am comfortably settled in life, and anything you would say to me would not interest me."
"There being no further explanations in order," said Manchester to his wife, "I will bid you to your carriage. As for me, I will spend my honeymoon with my friend."
Manchester after making application to the courts for the annulment of the marriage went abroad. His wife died a few weeks after the granting of the decree.

Friendlyship Among Fishes.
The sea cucumber, with long body and mouth fringed with tentacles in a feathery circle, gives lodgings to smaller forms, which have been called its messmates, which actually live within its body and swim in and out at will, thus finding a welcome shelter and also feeding on the half digested food of their hosts. In similar way sea anemones, attached to a rock and furnished with a circle of feelers or tentacles, with which they catch and hold their food, make friends with little fishes which swim fearlessly within their grasp and are constantly infested for a few moments in what to the prey of the anemone would be a living tomb, but very soon the tentacles unclose and allow the playful little prisoner to escape at will. In similar fashion fish have been seen living and sporting within the arms of tropical starfish.

A Curious Oath.
The following curious oath was vouchered years administered in the courts of the Isle of Man: "By this book, and by the holy contents thereof, and by the wonderful works that God has miraculously wrought in heaven above and in the earth beneath in six days and seven nights, I do swear that I will, without respect of favor or friendship, love or gain, consanguinity or affinity, envy or malice, execute the laws of this Isle and between party and party as indifferently as the herring's backbone doth lie in the middle of the 'sh.'"

THE ART OF ACTING.
What Amateurs Who Would Become Stars Must Learn.

It is surprising to discover how very differently people who have played parts all their lives deport themselves before the footlights. I was acquainted with a lady in London who had been the wife of a peer of the realm, who had been an ambassador at foreign courts, who at the time had been a reigning beauty and who came to me longing for a new experience and imploring me to give her an opportunity to appear upon the stage.
In a weak moment I consented, and as I was producing a play, I cast her for a part which I thought she would admirably suit—that of a society woman. What that woman did and didn't do on the stage passes all belief. She became entangled in her train, she could neither sit down nor stand up, she shouted, she could not be persuaded to remain at a respectful distance, but insisted upon shrieking into the actor's ears, and she committed all the gaudieries you would expect from an untrained country wench.
But because everybody is acting in private life every one thinks he can act upon the stage, and there is no profession that has so many critics. Every man in the audience is a critic and knows all about the art of acting. But acting is a gift. It cannot be taught.
"You can teach people how to act, but you cannot teach them to act. Acting is as much an inspiration as the making of great poetry and great pictures. What is commonly called acting is acting acting.—Richard Mansfield in Atlantic.

Little Willie's Surprise.
Mr. and Mrs. Blank recently moved from the city to the suburbs. The first night in their new home their five-year-old son climbed into bed as soon as he was undressed.
"Willie," said his mother, "haven't you forgotten to say your prayers?"
"Why, mamma," he replied, "is God way out here too?"—Judge.

One More.
"Now don't ask any more questions. Little boys should not be inquisitive."
"What's inquisitive, pa?"

"HIS HIGH MIGHTINESS."

One of the Titles Proposed for the First President.

One of the embarrassments of the new office of president was in regard to title—how the chief magistrate of the United States should be addressed. The subject had occupied the attention of congress, and a joint committee from the two houses had been unable to agree. The newspapers had taken the matter up and discussed it freely. With some "his excellency" was thought the proper appellation, and not a few favored the appellation given to rulers in Holland—"high mightiness." It was finally decided to the satisfaction of all parties that Washington should be called simply the president of the United States.

While these controversies were at white heat Speaker Muhlenberg was one day at a dinner given in honor of Washington and was asked by the president elect what he thought of the title of "high mightiness."
"Why, general," replied Muhlenberg, laughing, "if we were certain that the office would always be held by men as large as yourself or my friend Wynnkoop (a large sized gentleman from Pennsylvania sitting at the table) it would be appropriate enough, but if by chance a president as small as my opposite neighbor should be elected it would become ridiculous."—Washington Post.
