AMUSEMENTS W. VA. FARMERS AT JAMESTOWN

MRS. TEMPLE'S TELEGRAM.
"Mrs. Temple's Telegram" will be the attraction at the Grand Oct. 17. This farce is clean, clever, and always brimming with mirth and funny situations. It is said to be without doubt the most emphatic comedy success of recent years. Sparkling, intricate and as clean as a red whistle, this uproariously funny comedy has won the endorsement of press and public wherever it has been produced.

"A RAGGED HERO."

Herbert E. Denton, who is the star of "A Ragged Hero" which will be seen at the Grand tonight, is acknowledged by critics and professionals alike to be a past master of the art of make-up. He has played many difficult parts where the accuracy of the make-up has a great deal to do with the proper presentation of the character he was to portray and has justly won the reputation he holds. In "A Ragged Hero" he plays a tramp and so natural is his make-up without exaggeration that he appears the exact counterpart of the "hobo," who often stops at the back door during the summer to beg for food or clothing.

"THE CLANSMAN."

New York City welcomed "The Clansman" uproariously. On the first night, in January, 1906, almost as many people were turned away as gained admission to the theatre. There wasn't a free pass in the house except the few allotted to the critics. For the very first time the temper of the audience showed itself. Ben Cameron's refusal to post the negro social equality proclamation was greeted with thunderous applause, and when a few moments later he crumpled up the vile document and flung it in the face of the Carpetbagger radical, the whole house rose to its feet and cheered madly. The later scenes of the play were followed with strained, eager attention; at the end of the third and fourth acts came dozens of curtain calls, mingled with Confederate war cries and loud demands for the author and "Speech! Speech!"

POWER OF CHEERFULNESS

The Way One Feels Matters Lightens the Burden of Life's Duties.
A man, weak and downcast, was sitting alone the other day. He seemed about to collapse. The proprietor assisted him into a chair and prepared a mild stimulant for him. The druggist's manner was so sympathetic that a little later he consoled him that he had not much longer to live.
"Heart disease?" inquired the druggist genially. "Why, I have heart disease myself; have had it for years. That's nothing. I don't worry myself about it. I don't look like a man with a load on his mind, do I? You probably think that you are liable to drop off any time. On the contrary, any doctor will tell you that the average person with heart disease generally lives to a good old age. The very care that a sufferer from heart disease takes of himself or herself is calculated to lengthen the years indefinitely. You see, a man with a weak heart naturally is careful of himself a bit. He doesn't commit any excesses, never overdoes anything, lives in moderation and thus keeps his vitality unimpaired. That's all you have to do—just take care of yourself. What's the use of worrying?"

The druggist's cheerfulness was infectious, the genial interest of his talk made depression appear foolish, and the girl soon began to look more hopeful and even smiled. After the druggist had gayly chatted with her awhile she rose and walked out of the store with a firm step.

This druggist, though he would scorn the idea if suggested to him, is a benefactor to humanity. He is a believer in the power of cheerfulness, and the good that he does in his peculiar way is not easy to estimate.

Not a day passes that he does not impart his message of the cheerful life to some despairing individual. He makes all other ailments his own and points out the uselessness of worry. A man will come in bent and suffering. Perhaps he confides to the druggist that he has kidney disease and fears his days are numbered. The druggist immediately informs him that there is no cause for alarm; he has had kidney trouble himself for, oh, so many years, and has no intention of dropping off. Not a day passes that he does not probably will acknowledge that he is afflicted with every ailment except household's knee. He makes every complainer feel better. He fairly radiates good cheer and optimism. It is his belief that half the sufferers in the world have complaints that bright spirits will overcome. But even when they have a real disease it is his theory that a little cheerfulness doesn't hurt and that the malady is only aggravated by constant depression. He makes it his mission in life to drive every depression and turn the thoughts of people toward brighter things. His cheerfulness is a tonic that never fails to act.—New York Press.

Test For Ready Boiled Lobsters.
Should ready boiled lobsters be purchased, test them by gently drawing back the tail, which should rebound with a spring. If the tail is not curled up and will not spring back when straightened the lobster was dead when boiled and should not be eaten. Choose the smaller lobsters that are heavy for their size, as the larger ones are apt to be coarse and tough. Lobsters weighing from one and a half to three pounds are the best in size. All parts of the lobster are wholesome and may be used, except the stomach, which is a small hard sack and contains poisonous matter and lies directly under the head, and a little vein which runs the entire length of the tail.

A Queer Wager.
There are men whose pride is in the staid endurance of acute discomfort. They insist upon doing unpleasant things in order to convince themselves that they can do them. At Oxford some years ago there was an eminent rugby football player whose passion was to discover the most uncomfortable things and then to do them. One evening a humorist suggested that—as it was January—it would be rather beastly to sit in a cold tub all night long. The footballer at once offered to wager that he could sit till morning chapel time in his cold tub. And he did it.—London Chronicle.

Ease and Fluency.
When Thiers was president of the French republic, he was about to issue some important manifesto and submitted the draft to a critical friend.

"Yes," said the critic, "the matter is clearly expressed, but I miss the ease and fluency of your usual style."
"Ah," replied Thiers, "I have not worked those in yet! The ease will cost me much labor, and the fluency I shall have to drag in by the hair of its head."

Never Recovered.
"You say you are a woman later, Mr. De Smith."
"Definitely so," he replied, "in my youthful days a woman made a confounded fool of me, and"

"You never got over it, I understand, Mr. De Smith."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The New Suburb.
