The Original

The idea of a Cough Syrup that will act on the bowels, and thus assist in expelling colds from the system is new and original in Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar. Nearly all other cough cures are constipating, especially those containing Opium. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar moves the bowels, contains no Opium.

DELIRIUM TREMENS.

Cause and Symptoms of a Dreadful Disease From Alcohol.

The conclusive symptom of chronic inebriety is delirium tremens, "the horrors," says Mr. Hilburn. None but the true inebriate gets it, and most inebriates get it sooner or later, though some escape the actual delirium that is its typical feature. It must not be confused with alcoholic insanity, the violent dementia brought on in some persons by amounts of alcohol often too small to cause intoxication. True delirium tremens is literally the result of soaking. It comes on when the tissues are saturated with alcohol. Usually it appears at the end of a long spree, or, in the case of a steady drinker, when he has been taking more than his usual allowance. But as alcohol remains in the tissues from three to eight days, the delirium may develop some time after the spree, whereupon the victim usually ascribes it to the fact that he gave up alcohol and took to water. It is a state of collapse, insomnia, trembling, acute terror and usually violent delirium, which lasts from two to five days. "Menagerie delirium," the vision of violet mice and iridescent snakes, generally supposed to prevail, is not very common, snakes being rarer than other animals.

The ordinary delirium centers about the usual occupation of the patient. Its violence can be judged by the degree to which his visions are independent of his will, and by the terror they cause him. A teamster, for instance, usually drives horses in his delirium. If they obey him, he will get well, but if they back against his orders or bolt, he is thrown into a state of extreme terror and is pretty certain to die. The delusions of a first attack are always terrifying, but in later recurrences the experienced drinker is often aware of his condition and watches his own hallucinations with a sort of impersonal amusement. The supposedly harmless malt liquors are slower in bringing on delirium tremens than whisky, but usually bring on uglier attacks. Contrary to general opinion, they are responsible for a considerable share of the inebriety of this country. Some years ago Dr. Charles L. Dana, at that time visiting physician to Bellevue hospital, recorded the form of liquor used by nearly 200 inebriate patients. A third drank whisky, nearly a third beer and whisky and a quarter malt liquors altogether. The rest took anything that contained alcohol. There are virtually no wine drinking inebriates in this country.—American Magazine.

House Painting Problem.

"Since we've moved to Jersey and lived in a wooden house," said the bride, "I've evolved a new theory as to house painting. I'm thinking of writing a book, 'Every Man His Next Door Neighbor's House Painter.' I think red with cream trimmings is the prettiest color for a house surrounded with green grass and trees, and we've had our house at Passlade painted that way. The neighbors, we find, all agree that it is hideous. Now, why should I, who comparatively seldom get a view of the outside of my own house, be allowed to inflict a nightmare on those who regard it as such, yet have to gaze at it by the hour perhaps? My next door neighbor, a poor, pallid invalid who ought to rejoice in red, loathes it, yet is obliged to see our house every time she looks from the sitting room where she spends her dreary life, while I, in turn, from the windows of my sewing room have to look directly at the cold, inhospitable gray of the house, which gives me the blues. We could enjoy their house if it were painted to suit us, and they could enjoy ours if it were according to their taste, so I'm going to start a reform, and everybody shall paint not his own house, but his next door neighbor's."—New York Press.

A ZULU LEGEND.

Old Story of the Origin of This Savage People.

The Zulus account for their origin, says a correspondent of the Country Gentleman (England), by a story of a talking elephant who fed upon children. He met a woman laden with an ax and bundle of fagots, accompanied by her child. Seeing the elephant, she guessed his intention and pleaded, "Spare my child, oh, elephant!" The elephant refused. "Then," said the mother, "if this evil must happen swallow me, too, oh, elephant!" So the elephant swallowed mother and child, and they found themselves with all the other children who were eaten previously. By and by the child grew hungrily, and the mother lit a fire with her fagots. She then with her ax cut away the elephant's flesh, cooked it, and they all ate. As the fire burned, its great heat filled the elephant with pain, and he ran and ran and ran till they felt the thunder of his hoofs racing over hill and valley. At length, exhausted, he dropped down dead. Using her ax, the mother chopped and chopped until she made an opening in the elephant's side. After this they crept out and became a new nation in a new country.

THE BEST INDIA INK.

It is Redolent of Musk, Bright With Gold and Very Costly.

"This India ink," said the clever Chinese art student, "has no more right to be called Indian than your American redskins have to that name, for India ink all comes from China, and India never produced a stick of it."

"Anhui, my own province, is the one where India ink is made. The best of the ink is kept at home for the use of the royal scribes and the official literati. It is only the lower grade that is exported. This lower grade sells at wholesale in Anhui for $1,500 a ton."

"The very best grade of India ink, the kind rich with gold, is worth $75,000 a ton."

"The constituents of India ink are colza oil, pork fat, lampblack, glue, musk, gold leaf and the oil of a poisonous tree, the beng, which grows only in the Yangtze valley."

"After the admixture of the oils the lampblack, the fat and the glue, the resultant paste is beaten for many hours with steel hammers upon wooden anvils, and during that long beating certain quantities of musk and of gold leaf are added, the musk to give the ink perfume, the gold to give it luster."

"Afterward the ink is dried for three weeks in molds. The stocks are then decorated, the most artistic scribes gilding them with very beautiful Chinese characters."

"There is no ink worthy to be mentioned in the same breath with ours, an ink redolent of musk and bright with gold."—Exchange.

THE RESTLESS MORO.

He is Never Happy Unless on a Marauding Expedition.

The Moro is brave to fearlessness, a born pirate and essentially a first class fighting man. He is never happy unless on a marauding expedition, and stealing from his neighbors, friends and foes alike. The chief who is the most successful thief is the most respected and the most powerful among chiefs.

The Moro trades with his neighbors on market days in the various coins of the realm and foreign moneys. At other times he is a free ocean rover, extending his trading voyages as far north as the islands of Negros and Sulu, south to the Celebes and Borneo and westerly to the Palawan. He is the most successful of smugglers, and a little net of piracy when chance offers goes without mention. The Moro is the most perfect of aquatic beings, the most skillful small boat sailor or large "prau" navigator extant. He can no more drown than can a fish. There is no record of a drowned Moro. He is as deep of from twenty-five to a hundred feet for the valuable mother-of-pearl shell, and his life is largely lived at sea from infancy. Along the coast many of the Moro villages are built over the water.—Colonel Owen J. Sweet, U. S. A., in Harper's Weekly.

Importance of Hobbies.

For the well being and stable balance of every mind it is normally necessary that every man should have some pursuit which shall be unconnected with his business, which he must pursue with absolute seriousness. The hobby may be a game, it may be a collection of some sort (even stamps) or it may be some artistic achievement, and whether a man scarcely attains mediocrity even in it matters not at all, provided he pursues it with the fixed idea that nothing else in the world matters.—London Queen.

Tree Snakes of Borneo.

The flying frogs of the Malays appear to be mythical, but the tree snakes of Borneo are credited with taking flying leaps from the boughs of trees to the ground. It is found that scales on the lower part of the body may be drawn inward so that the whole lower surface becomes concave. The result is that the air is thus greatly increased and experiments indicate that the snakes do not fall in writhing coils, but are let down gently in a direct line by the parachute-like action of their peculiar bodies.

The Cravat.

The cravat was once the name of a great military nation, the Croats, or Cravates, of the Balkans. It was their fashion to wrap large shawls or pieces of cloth around their necks and shoulders. About the middle of the reign of Louis XIV. he uniformed several regiments in the Croat fashion, with huge shawls about their necks. The fashion took, and the shawl diminished in size to the slight strip of cloth we still have with us.

Heavy Evidence.

"See here, Jekely, I'm surprised to find you writing such bitter, cynical things about married life."

"Well—Benedict, you see, the fact is—"

"Oh, don't apologize. It isn't that. What surprises me is how, not being married, you know all these things!"—Boston Transcript.

Friends.

"If a man is friendless it is his own fault."

"That's right. Why, there are five fellows standing on every corner who would gladly borrow money from him."—Pittsburg Post.

An Artist's View. One of the most remarkable and most artistic of twenty-four hour records stands to the credit of Sir Edwin Landseer, who had promised a picture for the spring exhibition of the Royal British Institution in 1845. On the day before the opening he was found standing in front of an untouched canvas. "I shall send that to the institution tonight," a finished picture," he declared to the astonished messenger who had been sent by the hanging committee to see if the promised picture was ready, "and have consequently given orders not to be disturbed." True to his word, Landseer put the finishing touch to his canvas and dispatched it to Pall Mall that very evening; and as "The Cavalier's Pets" it was one of the greatest successes of the exhibition.

The Change of a Word.

"Spanking" did not suggest chastisement originally. It was unknown to Johnson in this sense; to him a "spanker" meant "a person who takes long steps with agility." Rapid motion seems to be the root idea of the word "spank," which is not merely representative of the sound of the act, as "slap" and "smack" are. The low German "spanken," or "spanken," to run and spring about quickly, is close to the original meaning; hence a "spanking pace," a "spanking breeze" and a "spanker," in the sense of an active and sturdy person.

The Hudson Bay Company.

In 1670 Charles II. granted a charter to the Hudson Bay company, giving to that association the whole and sole trade and commerce on the waters lying within the entrance of the Hudson Strait and on the lands adjoining. After the cession of Canada to Great Britain in 1763 the Northwest Fur company of Montreal sprang into existence, and by its competition with the older corporation compelled an amalgamation in 1821.

Conclusion.

Insurance Solicitor—Well, doctor, have you examined this new claimant? Doctor—No. I haven't thought it necessary. You see, I've been treating him for the last seven years. Insurance Solicitor—That's enough. If he has survived that he must be a person of wondrous vitality.

The Arifal Squirrel.

You may find many a squirrel in the course of your tramp, but no two alike exactly in their method of attempted means of escape or concealment. The ways and means of the little rascals are legion. One may flatter himself against a gray patch on the back of a tree trunk, absolutely motionless, and unless in your earnest, steadfast looking you can detect an ear or a shoulder in relief against the sky you might as well abandon search. Another may lie along a bough flattened at full length, but here the telltale ears are more easily silhouetted. Still another may crouch down up in a fork, and here the thing to look for is the fluffy tip of that little signal flag which always works and waves and jerks and signals so bravely when danger is not in the air, or one may rather himself up in a bunch to imitate a knot or knob, and here he can very well tell when you have spied him out. He will catch your eye, even as you catch the eye of an acquaintance in a crowd and will instantly flash up for headlong flight, leaping from tree to tree, all but vanishing over the ridge.—Field and Stream.

Origin of the Cigarette.

The Aztecs, it is believed, are responsible for the cigarette. The Spaniards first got a whiff of the cigarette when they invaded Mexico under Cortes. The Aztecs then used tobacco in no other form, and the Spaniards learned from them how to roll the little packages into snokable shape. They introduced the cigarette into Europe, and by that route it found its way into America, though it was nearly 200 years reaching here. The Aztecs were also using cocoa and its product, chocolate, when Cortes conquered them, and it was not long until the whole of Europe was eating the various preparations of this bean. When the Spaniards first tasted it they named it theobromus, from the two Greek words meaning "food of the gods."

Mary, Queen of Scots.

Mary, queen of Scots, must have believed in phonic spelling, for she wrote to her son in 1570: "Deir son—I see th' berages to see sow and bring me word how ze do and to remember sow to learn in tyne to love, know and feir God, and next yat, conform to Godde commandment, and I ture, to remember ye dewtie anent hir yat he borne ye in hir sydes. I send sow a buk to learn ye sowyn, and I pray God sow may learn yat bebeginning, and that he will give sow myne, in help sow all deserve it quhan sow come to discrecion. Your loving and good moder, MARIE R."

Cured of Bright's Disease.

Mr. Robert O. Burke, Elnora, N. Y., writes: "Before I started to use Foley's Kidney Cure I had to get up from twelve to twenty times a night, and I was all bloated up with dropsy and my eyesight was so impaired I could scarcely see one of my family across the room. I had given up hope of living, when a friend recommended Foley's Kidney Cure. One 50c bottle worked wonders and before I had taken the third bottle the dropsy had gone, as well as all other symptoms of Bright's Disease." Sold by Sturm & Wilson.
