WHITENING CLOTHES.

A Harmonious Solution That Will Lighten Laundry Labor.

It is never necessary for harmful washing solutions to be used in order to facilitate the laundering of clothes, for there are several things that can be added to the water which will quickly eradicate dirt, besides making the washing easier, and will not injure the fabric.

Kerosene is one of the best clothes whiteners and is perfectly safe to use. It is especially good for clothes that have been hanging for some time and become yellow.

For ordinary purposes use but a tablespoonful of kerosene to a gallon of water.

In the event of garments becoming very much soiled an emulsion made from equal parts of kerosene, clear lime-water and turpentine shaken until creamy is invaluable.

Only one cup of the mixture should be added to a boilerful of clothes. They should be kept over the fire for half an hour.

In the case of men's jumpers, overalls, working shirts or children's stockings or trousers this emulsion is invaluable.

Make a very hot soap-suds and add a small portion of the emulsion to the water. Allow the clothes to remain for about five minutes in the water and rinse with hot water thoroughly. In the latter case when the emulsion is used so strongly it is quite necessary that every particle should be removed.

Borax soaps which are free from alkali are good for laundry purposes.

CHICKEN A LA KING.

Recipe From One of New York's Big Popular Hotels.

A favorite dish served in one of the big popular hotels of New York is chicken a la king. The recipe as given by the chef of the fashionable establishment is as follows: Cut into small pieces the white meat of a cold roast chicken. Make a sauce with two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan over the fire. When the butter melts stir in two heaping tablespoonfuls of flour which has been well sifted. When the flour and butter are mixed to a cream pour in slowly a pint of hot milk, stirring constantly to keep from lumping. Allow the same to boil up once, then add a teaspoonful of grated onion, a saltspoonful of salt and the yolks of two eggs. Stir them briskly through the sauce, add two truffles and two mushrooms cut in small pieces and fried lightly in butter.

After seeds have been removed and a generous tablespoonful of capers chopped and just a suggestion of grated nutmeg. Last of all, add the chicken, stir all together and allow it to cook a minute. Chicken a la king is usually served in a chafing dish.—New York Post.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Milk taken before and after a bitter medicine will absorb the taste very quickly.

For a sore mouth try a wash of one teaspoonful of peroxide in a half glass of water.

After cutting a corn peroxide should always be applied to prevent any possibility of blood poisoning.

Gouty persons should avoid eating sweet food, but the practice of eating a dozen walnuts a day is recommended by physicians.

A cup of hot water will relieve a sick stomach, and for those who cannot take it plain try a little lemon juice, a lump of sugar or a pinch of salt.

When you suffer from heartburn take half a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda stirred in half a tumblerful of cold water. One doctor advises that a few bleached sweet almonds be eaten. They should be thoroughly masticated.

The Plain Girl.

The plain, quiet, apparently unattractive girl should be taught to make the most of herself, and who can teach her this so well as her mother? If your daughter is growing up too quiet and seems never to be anything to say, exert yourself to draw her out. Lead her into general conversation at every opportunity. Let her feel that her thought and opinion about different matters are of some weight and importance. Do not let her sink into that state of mind which is content to let other people take the burden of conversation while she sits by in apparently stupid silence.

It is a habit which will grow upon her, and which will only become the more deeply fixed if referred to in any way. Some day her chances of a happy and useful life may be ruined by it.

Hydrogen Peroxide.

Hydrogen peroxide is usually associated with golden hair of a suspicious hue, but it really is a most useful household drug. As it is benzylic, it is an excellent and harmless bleacher, besides this it is an excellent disinfectant. One would hardly look for it in a mouth wash, but it is even so. A solution of one-fourth or one-fifth hydrogen peroxide makes an effective antiseptic. It is often used diluted in open fresh wounds and, used with a syringe to stop the flow of blood, has proved very healing.

To Clean Glass.

Place pulverized pumice stone between the layers of a folded piece of soft muslin and stretch around the edge to prevent the powder from spilling. Wipe lamp globes or window panes with this dry cloth, and they will be clean and sparkle almost instantly. Enough powder will remain on the cloth to be used many times.

If you like coffee but dare not drink it, try Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee. It is true that real coffee does disturb the stomach, heart and kidneys. But Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee has not a grain of true coffee in it. Being made from parched grains malt, etc., it forms a wholesome, food-like drink, yet having the true flavor of Old Java and Mocha coffee. "Made in a minute." Call at our store for a free sample. Sold by all dealers.

A RIDE FOR LIBERTY

(Original.)

Kentucky is famous for its pretty girls and fine horses. This is a story of both. The horses would not be interesting without the girl, and without the girl there would be no story.

Charlotte DeForest is the girl in question, and she was the belle of the blue grass region. She could ride and shoot and dance and flirt and was a constant terror to her father and mother.

She would ride and get shot while hunting or, worst of all, make a match with some undesirable party. Her father, however, gave her a free rein in everything except marriage.

So long as Charlotte was fancy free her father's statement did not interest her, but one day came Hall Dangler, a young Tennesseean who had every trait to make him unacceptable to old people and every trait to make him acceptable to the young.

He had inherited a plantation near Murfreesboro, with a fair bank account, besides stocks and bonds. This he was proceeding to run through as rapidly as possible and had already got away with a full quarter of it. He was handsome as a picture, reckless, generous, brave—in short, just the man to capture a girl of nineteen.

Dangler made short work with Charlotte DeForest's heart. But Charlotte, knowing that her father would disapprove of him, said nothing about her love and would not permit her lover to ask for her hand. Her parents took flight the moment Dangler appeared on the scene; but, as he put in no claim for their daughter and their daughter did not admit any partiality for the young suitor, there was no excuse to keep the two apart.

The best the parents could do was to make a new rule that Charlotte should not in future leave the premises with any young man without other company.

Against this Charlotte protested without avail. Both she and her lover knew well that it was directed against them, and from that moment they acted as prisoners eager to secure liberty.

They began by deliberately breaking the rule: riding away together. Mr. DeForest sent a servant to recall them. Mr. DeForest would not come so far that Charlotte would disobey, but it was not long before she knew that certain of the household had been deputed to watch her. Then she learned that her father had so far perfected a system of espionage that it would be impossible for her to get away with her lover even if she desired to do so.

Just as soon as she discovered this she made up her mind to break through the cordon placed about her at the first opportunity.

One morning Mr. DeForest was in a field near the house trying some horses. His stablemen were showing their paces before him. Charlotte and Hall Dangler went over to take a look at the stock. Charlotte had her own saddle brought out and insisted on trying one of the horses. When she dismounted, Dangler asked permission to mount another. Then the two made motions to mount at the same time, but Mr. DeForest ordered his daughter to desist, and Dangler rode off alone.

More than an hour was spent trying the horses. Dangler mounted a number in succession and under pretense of testing their speed rode them till they were well exhausted. Miss DeForest after having been checked by her father would not mount again, but stood pouting, looking on, holding her horse by the bridle rein. There was one horse called Simon that Dangler pronounced incapable of any speed whatever, and the animal was left with his bridle rein, thrown over a fence post.

Ernestly after a few minutes words between the lovers, Charlotte mounted and rode toward the house. All except Dangler were too preoccupied to notice that she passed the house and was soon lost to view down the road. Then suddenly Dangler mounted Simon and dashed after her.

"Mount! Quick!" shouted Mr. DeForest. "Five hundred dollars to the man who catches them!"

There were three stablemen and six horses, all in the stable having been held out. Two of the horses being saddled, two of the men mounted and rode away, while the remaining man saddled one of the remaining horses. This Mr. DeForest mounted himself. He was too old to join in the race, but wished to follow. The two men in advance pushed on with fair speed for awhile, but it was not long before they discovered that their horses' girths had been worn out by Dangler in his pretended efforts to test their speed. Miss DeForest's horse had not been used at all, and Simon, ridden by Dangler, was fresh as a daisy. The plan, which was not premeditated, had simply been to show the old people that they could not control the young one's movements. The only premeditated thing about it was Hall Dangler's wearing out the horses so that the couple could not be pursued to advantage. First one follower lagged, then the other, and when Mr. DeForest came up he found both out of the race. The couple had gone free. The old man rode on a short distance and saw the young couple halted, facing each other, Dangler talking earnestly.

Here was a crisis. Had the father anticipated his equanimity all might have been well. Instead he hurried anathemas at Dangler and threatened to shoot him if he ever came near his home again. Then he reproached his daughter in no paternal terms. Dangler seized his companion's bridle and drew her away.

The couple were eventually forgiven. GERTRUDE GOWAN.

ENTERPRISING BOTANIST.

Success of the Great Revival of the Sixteenth Century.

In the great literary and scientific revival that took place in the sixteenth century botany made a fresh departure. The discovery of America had brought a vast number of new plants to Europe, and their study doubtless stimulated the more complete study of those of the old world. The great commercial activity of the century must also have had its influence. Ships were bringing new products from all parts and among these plants were not forgotten. But from whatever cause it came, the great impulse and renewed activity in the discovery and study of plants was quite remarkable. They produced a large body of students, whose labors were unwearied, and a wonderful amount of botanical literature.

Among those students were such men as Linnæus, L'Obel, Casalpina, L'Herne, Martini, Caspar and John Bauhin. Conrad Gesner, Pona, Leonard, Fuchs, Prosper Alpinus, DeCandolle and many others. And these men were not stay at home botanical students. They were great travelers, whose delight was to collect and examine plants in their native countries.

Bauhin collected them in Germany, France and Italy with great labor and danger ("quod præcipuum erat; plantas locis insalubribus inspiciendo nullis laboribus, nullis molestiis, nullis sumptibus peperimus"); L'Obel collected them in Spain, Hungary and Bohemia; DeCandolle searched Mount Pilatus and John Pona Mount Raitus; Leonard Rauwolf made a long journey to the east in search of them and Prosper Alpinus examined those of Egypt—London Standard.

Florida's Indian War.

Osceola's Half-Breed Wife Brought About the Conflict.

In 1835 a young woman, with a party of Indians visiting Fort King, was captured and carried off as a fugitive slave to the ground, that her mother was an escaped slave who had taken refuge with the Indians many years before. That her father was an Indian and she had been raised an Indian did not count for anything. Legal claim of ownership in the mother embraced her also. That was law at the time.

Naturally the young husband, untutored save that he was, could not recognize its justice. Proving both eloquent and brave, he soon had every Indian in Florida on the warpath, nor was it long before his name, Osceola, was heard with terror in the exposed white settlements. There ensued a war, long, costly and bloody, out of all proportions to the number engaged. It is probable the Indians did not number 1,500 warriors, but in the four years required to conquer them 1,500 white lives were sacrificed.

With the Indians it was a battle of attrition. They had many wrongs to avenge, which lost nothing in the fervid coloring of Osceola's eloquence. Defeat meant transportation to an unknown country far toward the setting sun. Osceola claimed to have been the friend of the white man until white treachery and cupidity culminated in the seizure of his wife. In digging up the tomahawk he preached a war of extermination till every white man was driven from Florida or his Indian died in the attempt.—Lippincott's.

Fair-Rosemond's Bower.

Henry III's chief garden was at Woodstock, but he was not the originator of it, as there had been a garden there in the time of the second Henry. It was the labyrinth which concealed the "bower" made famous by the tragic fate of the fair Rosemond. A halo of romance and mystery hangs around this hiding place, but in reality labyrinths were by no means uncommon. There is evidence of the existence of labyrinths in very early times, and they presumably suggested the maze of more modern date. The first labyrinths were winding paths cut in the ground, and the survival of them is still traceable in several places in England. Of these Saffron Walden, with its encircling ditch, is the most striking example. Camden describes one existing in his time in Dorsetshire which went by the name of Troy town or Julian's bower.—A History of Gardening in England.

Tobacco in America.

Caricaturists in depicting a German are in the habit of putting a big pipe in his mouth. The pipe is national indeed, but the Germans as a nation are far from being the greatest smokers. They do not smoke more than Frenchmen, Russians, Swedes or Hungarians. The men of the United States and the men of Switzerland are the most inveterate smokers in the world. In these two countries the consumption of tobacco per head is three times greater than in Germany.
