A REGAL HEAD

How often do we hear or see the expression used in describing a beautiful woman!

Denude that head of its hair and instead of a queenly, royal bearing you have a fright. The hair makes all the difference. To have that glorious abundance of radiant hair which always crowns "a regal head," one should use Newbro's Herculicide.

Herculicide represents the last word in scientific hair culture. It destroys the dandruff germ, checks falling hair, corrects generally, diseases of the hair and scalp.

The positive results and its delicate but refreshing odor recommends Newbro's Herculicide to ladies of refinement everywhere.

Send 10c in postage for sample bottle of Herculicide and booklet to The Herculicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

One dollar size bottle sold and guaranteed by all druggists. Applications made by the best barber and hair dressers. WELLS & HAYMAKER, BURKE'S PHARMACY, Special Agents.

Bargains In Real Estate

To whom it may concern: As I am retiring from active business and already arranged for a home in the South, I will offer at private sale all of my real estate and personal property, consisting of four beautiful blue grass farms and two pieces of town property, as follows:

Farm No. 1—of 285 acres. One among the best blue grass farms of Ritchie county, with good dwelling cellar, barns, all necessary out buildings, fine fruit and well watered.

Farm No. 2—of 123 acres all in blue grass and meadows, with new two-story dwelling, new cellar, new large barn, plenty fine fruit and well watered.

Farm No. 3—35 acres all in blue grass and meadows, fair house and good out buildings, good fruit and well watered.

All above farms are in one block and one and one-fourth mile from railroad depot.

Farm No. 4—35 acres, three and one-half miles from depot, all in blue grass, fair house and fruit. Also one-half interest in fifteen acres in Bonds Creek oil field.

Lot No. 1—A nice cottage home and one extra lot in Harrisville.

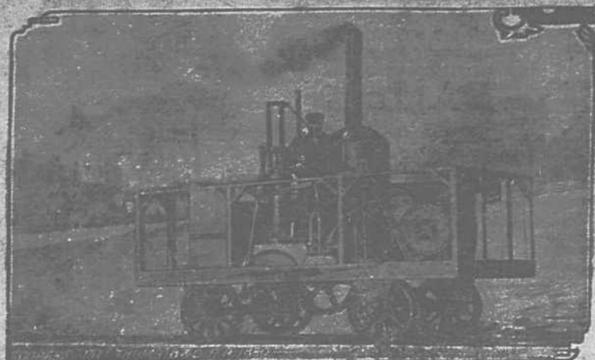

Lot No. 2—Consisting of nearly two acres with 3 dwellings, feed store, supply store, good stable, two large gardens, cow lot, extra good cellar and cellar house, good out buildings, two good wells, wash house, bath room, and new wagon scales.

All above land is under lease. Farm No. 2 has a producing well, dwelling plumbed and using tree gas. All oil, gas and coal rights go with this property. Will sell all stock and farming utensils. Bank stock in two of the leading banks of Ritchie county.

All of the above property must and will be sold by January 1st, 1911. Will be sold cheap and terms reasonable. Call or write at once.

D. M. YERKEY, Elkton, W. Va.

FIRST AMERICAN LOCOMOTIVE

Cooper's Tom Thumb, pictured above (1830), and the DeWitt Clinton (1831), were the first successful steam locomotives ever operated. Both will be shown at the Ohio Valley Exposition, Cincinnati, Aug. 29, to Sept. 24.

SPECIAL INTERESTS

judiciously observe a distinct tendency on the part of our opponents to cloud the issue by raising the question of state as against federal jurisdiction. We are ready to meet that issue if it is forced upon us. But there is no hope for the plain people in such conflicts of jurisdictions. The essential question is not one of half-splitting legal technicalities. It is simply this: Who can best regulate the special interests for the public good? Most of the predatory corporations are interstate or have interstate affiliations. Therefore, they are largely out of reach of effective state control, and fall of necessity within the federal jurisdiction. One of the prime objects of those among them that are grasping and greedy is to avoid any effective control either by state or nation; and they advocate at this time state control simply because they believe it to be the least effective. In the great fight of the people to drive the special interests from the dominion of our government, the nation is stronger and its jurisdiction is more effective than that of any state. The most effective weapon against these great corporations, most of which are financed and owned on the Atlantic coast, will be federal laws and the federal executive. That is why I so strongly oppose the demand to turn these matters over to the states. It is fundamentally a demand against the interest of the plain people, of the people of small means, against the interests of our children and our children's children; and it is primarily in the interest of the great corporations which desire to escape all government control.

The Conservation Fight. One of the difficulties in putting into practice the conservation idea is that the field to which it applies is constantly growing in the public mind. It has been no slight task to bring before 100,000,000 people a great conception like that of conservation, and convince them that it is right. This much we have accomplished. But there remains much to be cleared up, and many misunderstandings to be removed. These misunderstandings are due in part at least to direct misrepresentation by the men to whose interest it is that conservation should not prosper. For example, we find it constantly said by men who should know better, that temporary withdrawals, such as the withdrawals of coal lands, will permanently check development. Yet the fact is that these withdrawals have no purpose except to prevent the coal lands from passing into private ownership until Congress can pass laws to open them to development under conditions just alike to the public, and to the men who will do the developing. If there is delay, the responsibility for it rests, not on the men who made the withdrawals to protect the public interest, but on those who prevent Congress from passing wise legislation, and so putting an end to the need for withdrawals.

Abuses committed in the name of a just cause are familiar to all of us. Many unwise things are done and many unwise measures are advocated in the name of conservation, either through ignorance, or by those whose interest lies not in promoting the movement, but in retarding it. For example, to stop water power development by needless refusal to issue permits for water power or private irrigation works on the public lands inevitably leads many men, friendly to conservation and believers in its general principles, to assume that its practical application is necessarily a check upon progress. Nothing could be more mistaken. The idea, widely circulated of late, that conservation means locking up the natural resources for the exclusive use of later generations, is wholly mistaken. Our purpose is to make full use of these resources, but to consider our sons and daughters as well as ourselves; just as a farmer uses his farm in ways as to preserve its future usefulness. Conservation is the path to national efficiency, and it stands for ample and wise development.

But in spite of these difficulties, most of which are doubtless inevitable in any movement of this kind, conservation has made marvelous progress. I have been astounded and delighted on my return from abroad at the progress made while I was away. We have a right to congratulate ourselves on this marvelous progress; but there is no reason for believing that the light is with us in the beginning of the special interests, who are our chief opponents in the conservation fight, paid little heed to the movement because they neither understood it nor saw that if it won they must lose. But with the progress of conservation in the minds of our people, the light is setting sharper. The nearer we approach to victory, the bitterer the opposition that we must meet, and the greater the need for caution and watchfulness. Open opposition we can overcome, but I wish you especially against the men who come to congresses such as this, ostentatiously as disinterested citizens, but actually as the paid agents of the special interests. I heartily approve the attitude of any corporation, interested in the deliberations of a meeting such as this, which comes hither to advocate, by its openly accredited agents, views which it believes the meeting should have in mind. But I condemn with equal readiness the appearance of a corporate agent before any convention who does not declare himself frankly as such.

The congress is a direct appeal to the patriotism of our whole people. The nation wisely looks to such gatherings for counsel and leadership. Let that leadership be sound, definite, practical, and on the side of all the people. It would be no small misfortune if a meeting such as this should ever fall into the hands of the open enemies or false friends of the great movement which it represents.

Conclusion. It is our duty and our desire to make this land of ours a better home for the race, but our duty does not stop there. We must also work for a better nation to live in this better land. The development and conservation of our national character and our free institutions must go hand in hand with the development and conservation of our natural resources, which the Governors' Conference so well called the foundations of our prosperity. Whatever progress we may make as a nation, whatever wealth we may accumulate, however far we may push mechanical development and production, we shall never reach a point where our welfare can depend in the last analysis on anything but honesty, courage, loyalty, and good citizenship. The homely virtues are the lasting virtues, and the road which leads to them is the road to genuine and lasting success.

What this country needs is what every free country must set before it as the great goal toward which it works—an equal opportunity for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness for every one of its citizens. To achieve this end we must put a stop to the improper political domination, no less than to the improper economic domination, of the great special interests. This country, its natural resources, its natural advantages, its opportunities, and its institutions, belong to all its citizens. They cannot be enjoyed fully and freely under any government in which the special interests as such have a voice. The supreme political task of our day, the indispensable condition of national efficiency and national welfare, is to drive the special interests out of our public life.
