THE FORTUNE HUNTER

Novelized by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE From the Play of the Same Name by WINCHELL SMITH

Copyright, 1910, by Winchell Smith and Louis Joseph Vance

At the conclusion of the meal, which endured throughout two interminable hours, the elder men folk withdrew to the garden and the lawn. Nat was left to Josie, who conducted him to the side porch, out of sight of everybody, and planted herself in a baggy hammock there. She was gay, even brilliant within her limitations, arch, naive, coquettish, shy, petulant, by turns, animated by a sense of conquest. She supplied the major part of the conversation, chatting volubly on the thousand subjects she didn't understand, the dozen she did. In the most ingenious manner imaginable she held herself open to advances, not once, but a score of times, and when he failed to respond according to the code of Radville and the wit to mask her chagrin, did she feel any. Very probably she laid his lack of responsiveness at the door of his shyness (a quality he was wholly without) and liked him the better for it.

It was on this day that she extracted from him his promise to join the choir. He acceded through apathy alone.

"I don't care whether you can sing or not," she confessed, with a look. "But I do want somebody to walk home with me that I like."

"That's a nice way of putting it," Duncan considered without emphasis. "Roland Barnette's always walked home with me, but I think he's just tiresome."

"Why?" inquired the young man, with some interest.

She averted her head, plucking at the strands of the hammock. "Oh, you know," she said diffidently.

"Oh?" Nat was enlightened. "Then I'm sorry for Roland."

"Why?"

"I can't blame him, you know." He couldn't help this. The time, the place, the girl, inspired—indeed, incited—one to banality.

"Why?" she persisted.

"Oh, you know." He caught the intonation of her previous words precisely.

She had the grace to blush and hang her head, but he received a thrilling sidelong glance.

paying minute attention to the lace insertion of her skirt.

"About Roland?"

"Yes; I mean— You know what I mean, Mr. Duncan?"

"I assure you I do not, Miss Lockwood."

"About not walking home with him any more. I don't want to. I wish you'd commence tonight instead of choir practice night. I'd most rather walk home with you."

"After evening service, you mean?" She nodded. "It'll be a great pleasure."

"Really?" She gave him her eyes now.

"Really," he assured her. "Ah, I don't believe you mean that!"

"But indeed I do."

It was not until nearly 5 o'clock that he was given a chance to escape. He had even then to refuse inflexibly an invitation to stay to supper.

Minta Lockwood—an expansive woman, generously convex—almost smoothed him with appreciation of his thanks. She held his hand in a large, moist palm and beamed upon him, saying, "Now't you know the way, Mr. Duncan?"

"Yes," Bluky, insisted, blinking regularly, "drop in any time. Take pot luck. We're plain people, Mr. Duncan, but allus glad to see our friends. Drop in any time."

Josie accompanied him to the front gate, where etiquette required him to linger for a parting chat.

"Goodby." The girl gave him her hand. "I'm real glad you came—at last."

"The pleasure has been all mine," insisted the gallant bromide, fishing the trite phrase desperately from the gray vacancy of his thoughts.

"You won't forget?"

"Forget what?"

"About tonight."

"Do you imagine I could?" Josie returned to the family conclave, to interrupt a symposium on Duncan's qualities.

Duncan wrote, to Kellogg in his room that night after church. "I don't want to go to church, but it looks as if

I want somebody to walk home with me."

How to Tell if Your Hair is Diseased.

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. 95 per cent of the people head a hair tonic.

Pull a hair out of your head; if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want every one whose hair requires treatment to try Keelley's "33" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything, if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and cure baldness.

It is because of what Keelley's "33" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold only at our store—The Retail Store, Sturm & Wilson, 344 West Main street, Clarksburg, W. Va.
