Davis with his little 'M. & M.' as he finished second and was not recognized as any chance for speed, but some who had money against him realized that the "midget" was not a funny rider as he finished second, had speed and took the dangerous curves weighing only about 150 pounds and like a professional.

While there is no certain number of entries in the race today, there will undoubtedly be two if not three more than yesterday, as Brooks and Jenkins will be ready for the fight today.

Mr. Jenkins has secured Mr. Fessler, of Grassell, to ride his machine and if he eats speed up on the track like he does on the road, somebody will be wonderfully surprised on the little Pope. It is a direct chain drive, and weighs only about 150 pounds and

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Try as you will after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful.

THE LOVE STORY OF A GRAY JACKET

er comprehend the facts which must influence our present relationship. I have sent forward Sergeant Craig with the message especially entrusted to me for delivery, and thus, if he fails to reach its destination, I have laid myself open to the charge of a grave military crime. In doing this I have not only periled my own future,

"Let Me Go With You."

but the lives of my comrades and the faith of my commander. Yet I have deliberately chosen to do so because I feel the impossibility of leaving you here unprotected, and because I was unwilling to trust you alone with my companion. I dare not permit you to traverse these roads alone. The mountains all about us, deserted as they now appear, are filled with wandering bands of desperate and hunted men whose tenderest mercy is death. Any rock may be the hiding place of an outlaw, any dark ravine the rendezvous of as wild a gang as ever murdered for plunder.

"But the Sergeant said there was a Federal picket post at the crossing of the White Briar."

Her voice trembled as she spoke.

"He merely supposed there would be; but even if it were true, we have no positive means of knowing that the men stationed there would be of the regular service. Doubtless those thieving, murdering bands—such as that headed by Red Lowrie, of whom you may have heard—are sufficiently organized to keep patrols posted, and may indeed be utilized at times by both armies for that purpose. Were you to go to them you might be simply walking into a den of wolves."

"But could you not go with me?"

"I smiled at the naive innocence of her query.

"I wish you to feel that I have never thought so much about my own danger as about yours." I returned quietly. "But would it be a pleasure even to you to behold me swinging from the limb of a tree, hung as a spy without trial, merely because I ventured to walk with you into a Federal camp?"

I could see her eyes now resting full upon me, and much of the hardness and doubt seemed to have gone out of them as she scanned my uncovered features in the dim light. I scarcely think I was ever considered a handsome man even by my friends, but I was young then, frank of face, with that about me which easily inspired confidence, and it did me good to note how her eyes softened, and to mark the perceptible tremor in her voice as she cried impulsively:

"Oh, no! Not that!"

"Your words yield me new heart," I replied fervently, determined, now that ice was partially broken, to permit no excuse for its again forming, "for if you but once fully realize our situation you will certainly feel that I am merely endeavoring to perform my plain duty."
