For the Children

A Fourth of July Parade of Children in Masks.

The old time noisy, firecracker celebration of the Fourth of July has happily gone out of fashion. Powder and fire are too dangerous for young folks to handle. A masked parade is a jolly way for children to show their patriotism on Independence day. The more grotesque the masks and costumes are the greater will be the fun. Another good plan is to have a colonial parade and perhaps tableaux in the schoolhouse or on some convenient field or lawn. The youngsters, dressed up to represent George and Martha Washington, Miss Columbia, Uncle Sam and the men and dames of colonial times, can be grouped to form many pretty and interesting pictures. It is greater fun, too, than being burned and otherwise injured by firecrackers.

A Fourth of July Game.
Another good Fourth of July game is called "stars and stripes." To arrange for this take a large number of cards and paste a gilt star on each. On another bunch paste a red strip of paper on each, and on another paste a strip of silver on each.

The cards are dealt, one to each player and one to the pool, until all are disposed of. The cards are held figure side in. Each player examines his cards to see whether he has enough stars and stripes to make up the American flag. If he has the correct number and over he counts them out, and after showing them to the table he lays them aside. Perhaps he may have two flags. When no player can form further flags from his own cards the drawing begins. Each player borrows from his left hand neighbor and endeavors to make a flag. If any player gets out of cards he still may draw. The person on the right of the one out of cards draws from the pool. The pool is only used when absolutely necessary. No one is allowed to answer any question as to the flag during the game, and much fun will be made by the players displaying their ignorance as to the correct number of stars and stripes of our emblem. When a player lays down his hand with a wrong number of stars and stripes to make up one flag those cards go to the pool, but no one must tell him in what way he erred or the others will be helped. The one making the most correct flags wins a prize.

Good Road Helpers.
Don't be jealous of the automobile owner, for if he doesn't happen to own land in your township he is paying taxes in some other place and thus contributes his share toward the making of better roads, and in many instances he is advancing money to aid in road construction. If a road is made better for an automobile it is also made better for a buggy with a load of eggs in the back end.
