UNCLE SAM

Successfully Fights Disease in Philippine Possessions of This Country.

MOHONK LAKE, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Colonel L. M. Maus, medical corps, United States Army, delivered an address here before the Laks Mononk Conference of Friends of the Indian and Other Dependent Peoples. His subject was "Sanitary Conditions in the Philippines" and he said in part: "Little attention was paid to sanitation by the Spanish authorities during their control, and Manila at the date of the American invasion resembled European cities in the sixteenth century. Health matters as late as 1898 were administered by a third-class official, one of whose principal duties was collecting fees for death certificates. The archipelago was frequently visited by Asiatic cholera, which swept off hundreds of thousands of the natives, and it is said that in 1888 three thousand of the inhabitants died daily in Manila during the epidemic. The habit of the natives of eating with their fingers out of a common family tray or bowl was a great factor in spreading disease. Soon after the arrival of the Americans, municipal, provincial and insular boards of health were established, and health laws passed. Vaccination against smallpox was made compulsory, and over 3,000,000 of the inhabitants were vaccinated. A census was made of the lepers of the islands, a leper colony established and their segregation effected. Bubonic plague was present in Manila in 1900. A crusade was inaugurated against the rats of the city in 1901, and hundreds of thousands of rats were killed. The dead rats were labeled and sent to the laboratory for microscopic examination, with the number of the house from which they were obtained. All premises on which diseased rats were found were closed for occupancy until disinfected and put into habitable condition. By this means several thousands of the old stone houses were placed in sanitary condition. One of the most productive causes of disease formerly was a bad water supply, taken from surface wells which were badly contaminated with amoeba and other parasites. To remedy this artesian wells have been driven down throughout the islands and now parasitical and intestinal diseases are rapidly disappearing.

THIRTEEN YEARS OF EXPERIENCE

Has taught us the chattel loan business requires more attention to detail, more human kindness, and more good judgment to successfully operate and build up a satisfied clientele than does any other line of business. We strive to give our patrons perfect satisfaction, but never lose sight of the fact that to continue this policy it must be honest, courteous, conservative and accommodating at all times.

Stability depends, in a large measure upon able, clear management and the ability and willingness to advise and help customers when that help is consistent with good business principles. These features we have successfully carried out without detracting in the least from our conservative and well-balanced plan of conducting the loan business in the best interests of the people. We make more loans than all our competitors combined. There is a reason.
