MOBILE

Is Visited by the Managing Director of Southern Commercial Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Dr. Clarence J. Owens, managing director of the Southern Commercial Congress, returned here today from Mobile, Ala., where he went to make arrangements for the fifth annual convention of the congress, which will be held in Mobile coincident with the opening of the Panama canal, September, 1913. Dr. Owens conferred in Mobile with Albert P. Bush, director of the congress, who will be the official host of the convention, and with William H. Ambrecht, president of the Mobile chamber of commerce. Three big features were decided upon as part of the convention, which will have as its general theme the relation of the South to the Panama canal, Latin America, and world commerce. There will be a great water pageant in Mobile harbor, which will then have twenty-seven feet of water, participated in by ships from the gulf ports and vessels of the United States navy; an excursion of many of the thousands of delegates to the convention to the Panama canal; and after the convention a tour of about a hundred delegates through the principal South and Central American capitals where they will be guests of officials of the chambers of commerce of these countries.

The fifth annual convention, which will be attended by more than 10,000 leading business men of the South, will be international in scope. Secretary of State Knox has invited the Pan-American countries to participate in the convention, and John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American Union, has officially endorsed the congress and the convention. Diplomatic representatives of the Pan-American countries will make addresses at the convention. Governor O'Neal of Alabama, has issued a proclamation announcing the fifth annual convention. Dr. Owens has just finished a tour of the southern states in the interest of the congress. He says the South is fully awake to the immense impetus to American trade that will occur when the canal opens, and that the business men of the South are preparing for this great expansion.

Commenting on the opportunity awaiting the South, Dr. Owens declared that from Baltimore to Brownsville, Tex., the South has four miles of seacoast as compared with one of the North Atlantic states, and two miles to one, as compared with the Pacific coast states. As an illustration of the preparation for the canal Dr. Owens said that Birmingham is preparing to cut a $20,000,000 canal from the Birmingham district to the Warrior river, to secure water transportation by way of Mobile. Of 27,000 miles of navigable streams in the United States Dr. Owens said that 24,000 miles lead to South Atlantic and gulf ports.

FUNEREL

Of Oliver Thompson, Who Died at Staunton, is Held at Fairmont.

FAIRMONT, Jan. 25.—Funeral services over the body of Oliver Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Perry J. Thompson, of Elkins, were held Saturday morning at 11 o'clock at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Dickerson, in the Fifth ward. The Rev. William M. Long, of Clarksburg, of the Christian church, conducted the service and interment was made in Woodlawn cemetery. Mr. Perry Thompson arrived home Friday with the body of his son, whose death occurred at Staunton, Va. The body was taken to the home of his grandparents. Mrs. Thompson and son, Henry, arrived here Thursday night from Elkins, and Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Hornor, of Clarksburg, came down Thursday evening. Other friends and relatives arrived here last night and today for the services.

An Effective Dose

By ELSIE MATTESON

There are large cities like New York or London parts of which it may be dangerous for one to go about without protection, but the city of Naples is all bad.

Edward Pierce, a young American who had graduated in medicine, during his term of hospital service caught a disease which left his health impaired. He went abroad to re-establish it and whenever he left it he sank again into an abnormal condition. He determined therefore to remain there permanently and practice his profession. Finding an opening in Naples, he chose it for his field of labor. He acquired the Italian language readily.

The duties of a physician called him out at all times of day and night. Dr. Pierce knew of the dangers from the lower classes, or, rather, the criminal classes, but he also knew that he was taking his life in his hands whenever he entered the room of a patient suffering from a contagious disease and felt that the physician, like the soldier or the clergyman, must not hesitate to go where he can be of service no matter how great the risk. Friends advised him to go armed when he entered some of the most degraded parts of the city, especially at night. But he said that if an Italian was bent on killing him no time would be given him to defend himself. He preferred to take his chances unarmed, for he was obliged to carry the paraphernalia of his profession and disliked adding a revolver, which he might lug about with him for years without the necessity for using it.

One night Dr. Pierce was called up by telephone to go to the house of one who was a stranger to him. He ordered his vehicle, took up a large case of instruments and another of medicines and sallied forth. His destination was on the heights back of that part of the city that lies on the bay, and after following winding streets he stopped at the home to which he had been called. It was a fairly good stone villa, not among other houses, the nearest being several hundred yards distant.

Pierce was admitted by a man who as soon as he had entered shut the door behind him and told the doctor to follow him. He did so, but realized immediately that he had been called to the house for some evil purpose. He was taken into a chamber where a young girl was in a frightful state of nervous agitation. She was evidently of a much higher class than the man who admitted the doctor and another man, whom he found with the girl.

"Give her something to put her to sleep and stop her infernal howling," said one of the men.

It was all plain now. The young lady was held a prisoner, possibly for ransom, and, being in hysterics, the men dared not permit her to continue in that state and had called a doctor. But, having felt obliged to call him, would they let him go out to inform the police of what they were doing? Pierce knew they would not. Something must be done to effect his exit and if possible to release the girl. He gave her something to quiet her and while doing so formed a plan.

The doctor did not regret not being armed, for there were two men to oppose who were doubtless far more adept at handling ordinary weapons. But he had another idea. He fumbled in his medicine bag and looked over his medicines, finally selecting a bottle containing a powerful acid. Taking another containing one having much the same effect as red pepper, he made a dose of the two. Then from his case of instruments he drew forth a silver syringe and loaded it with the dose he had concocted.

"What are you going to do?" asked one of the men.

"Inject morphine," replied the doctor. "It will put her to sleep, and she will give you no further trouble. One of you get over on the other side of the bed and the other stand at the foot, to be ready to hold her if she struggles."

They did as he directed, and the doctor, having the syringe in his hands, quick as a flash squirted the fiery dose first into the eyes of the man opposite, then into the eyes of the one at the foot of the bed. Both gave a yell, and both put their hands to their eyes. But this was of no advantage to them or the doctor, for it was not likely that they would ever see again.

In an instant Pierce had taken up the girl in his arms and hurried toward the door. He had little fear that the men, whose eyes he had burned out, would follow him. Both the agony they suffered and their blindness would deter them. Nevertheless he lost no time and, reaching the door, with one hand threw it open, while with the other he supported the girl. But by this time she realized what he was doing and, standing on her feet, walked, or, rather, ran with him to his vehicle.

The young lady, it turned out, had been that afternoon walking on the sea wall, when she was seized by two men, put in a cab that stood near and hurried to the house where the doctor had found her and where she was to be held for ransom.

Pierce did not take the trouble to inform the police of his rescue. What became of the men he had blinded he never learned. The young lady was an Austrian tourist. She and her family offered to do anything in their power for Dr. Pierce, but he accepted only a token of their regard.

One of Many

Mrs. G. H. Williams, of Lynchburg, Va., writes: "It is six years since my health gave way. I had female trouble and all the doctors I employed (three) said I would die. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had not taken but one bottle when I found it had done the good. I took in all five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and now I am able to do all my household and have gained fourteen pounds. I advise all women who suffer from female trouble to try 'Favorite Prescription.' It's the only medicine on earth."

LIVED ON RAW EGGS

Mr. Richard's Experience With Different Diets. Peaches and Buttermilk for Three Years.

Cecilton, Md.—Mr. George Richards, of this place, during the past 12 years, has probably tried more different diets than the average person would ever use in a lifetime.

What he has to say about his experiments, must therefore be highly interesting to anyone suffering from indigestion or stomach troubles of any kind.

He says: "For more than 12 years, I suffered with stomach troubles, and paid hundreds of dollars for doctor bills and medicines. I was also operated on for piles.

I lived on dried peaches and buttermilk for nearly three years. The only thing that would not give me pain was raw eggs.

I was a physical wreck. I could not sleep, and was as near crazy as a mad dog would be.

I must say that after taking two 25-cent packages of Theodor's Black-Draught, it did me more good than all I ever spent for other medicines.

I have been working daily on the farm ever since, and I am as hard as iron. This purely vegetable remedy has been in successful use for more than 70 years. Try it. But be sure that it's Theodor's."

Cured of Liver Complaint.

"I was suffering with liver complaint," says Iva Smith of Point Blank, Texas, "and decided to try a 25c. box of Chamberlain's Tablets, and am happy to say that I am completely cured and can recommend them to every one." For sale by all dealers.—Advertisement.
