An Evening Echo. In the ocean of life how many there are who are drifting to an unknown destination—that indistinguishable multitude, who are only "floating to live, and living only to die" who drag on through a weary life, with their eyes half open; lacking principle, generous resolves, or even the slightest ambition; whose lives are purposeless, aimless, defenceless; and who live more from mere indolence than from calculation.—JAMES ELLIS.

An Agricultural Awakening. Starting a few years back as a direct result of the report of the National Country Life Commission, given a forward impetus by the establishment and rapid growth of agricultural institutions and organizations, and constantly stimulated by the ever increasing costs of farm products; the movement toward better things agriculturally has grown from the preachings of a few prophets here and there a decade ago, to a systematic propaganda—a national awakening—at the present day.

West Virginia, plunged in the midst of a great industrial development lagged grievously behind for a time. Then followed a period of preparation and gathering of strength and now, at the present moment West Virginia is about to take her rightful place with the fore front in agricultural affairs. Her orchard areas are already among the largest in the East. Her proximity to eastern markets makes dairying and trucking particularly lucrative. The reigning high prices of beef are re-stocking her excellent pastures with beef animals of highest type. Good roads are being projected in every section. Her agricultural institutions are making rapid forward strides and are taking a leading part in national affairs. Her representatives are found on the Foreign Agricultural Commission, at the National Corn Show, the National Conservation Congress and the National Association Meetings.

A team of students from the College of Agriculture is competing at the National Apple Show and another year a similar team will be sent to the National Dairy Judging Contest. On every side agricultural affairs in West Virginia seem to be taking on a definite, systematic, organized movement which should mean much for the permanent prosperity of the state.

Compulsory Saving. "Economy, whether public or private, means the wise management of labor; and it means it mainly in three senses. Namely, first, applying your labor rationally; secondly, preserving its produce carefully; lastly, distributing its produce reasonably."—Ruskin.

It is human nature to dream of success. Some persons turn visions into realities. Others keep on dreaming. In the matter of getting ahead in the world financially, systematic saving is the most practical method of turning dreams into actualities. The savings habit will increase your income, provide for your future, establish your credit, enhance your daily comforts, promote your general prosperity, and give you a better outlook on life.

Notwithstanding all these advantages of saving many persons will not save unless in some way they are compelled to do so. For instance, if you are buying your own home and have monthly payments to meet, you will take care of them first before you spend all your income in other ways. Or if you have life insurance to keep up you will not take chances by letting the date for payment slip by without taking care of that obligation. It is possible to put yourself in a position where you feel that you owe a savings bank account at least a certain amount every week or every month. And compelling yourself to maintain such a systematic plan of thrift will be a good thing for you in every way. The results at the end of the year will surprise you if you have never tried this plan before. The installment plan of home building or home furnishing works best when the installments are first paid into a savings bank account. Then cash and the interest earnings increase your buying power. When you buy first and save afterwards you are burdened with the interest you have to pay, in addition to the purchase price. Regular and systematic saving helps you to resist the temptation to ill-advised spending, and it develops the capacity of turning the capital saved into remunerative channels for your benefit.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

History Repeating. Nero fiddled while Rome burned. Wilson plays golf and Bryan lectures while waiting to hear from Huerta.—Charleston Mail. Well Spent. The impeachment of Sulzer cost $150,000, but as it contributed to the overthrow of Tammany New Yorkers may consider it money well spent.—Wheeling Register.

Timely Apology. We hereby apologize to the Ohio river for all these harsh criticisms of the past few weeks. Nice little river—good little river—best little river we ever had.—Wheeling News.

Saved the Administration. Straightway as if to show that Postmaster General Albert Sidney Burleson didn't have his dates mixed when he sent out a call to the people to mail their Christmas presents early, it showed snow.—Grafton Sentinel.

Adds Another. By way of an attractive national ticket, ex-President Taft suggests William Sulzer for President and Harry Kendall Thaw for Vice President on a platform upholding "The sacredness of the oath and the sanctity of the home." Jack Johnson would make a good secretary of state under such an administration.—Parkersburg Sentinel.

Permanent Telephones. The present storm teaches a lesson, especially to those who operate transportation lines. In the future it is most likely that far more attention will be paid to putting in the telephone lines more permanent, assuring service under all conditions. This is a day when the transportation of messages is just as necessary to such public service concerns as the maintaining of power wires and the keeping up of locomotives.—Fairmont Times.

A Chronic Knocker. Lily Young Cohen, whoever she is must have been born in an off year. In Neale's Monthly for October she dismissed Henry Sydnor Harrison, Sir Gilbert Parker, and most of our leading novelists, as being unworthy of mention. This month she has an article entitled "Justin Huntley McCarthy, Plagiarist." It must have been Lily that said Edgar Allen Poe out of the Hall of Fame. "What's the matter with you honey?"—Charleston Gazette.

No More So. President Wilson will please kindly note the newspapers have not been any more sensational in the Mexican matter than he has himself. What the most of them have done is to tell what he has been saying to old Huerta and what Huerta has been saying back. The State Journal has even gone so far as to ask if the Mexican man would not comply with the Melican man's demands what the Melican man was going to do about it was the opposite of sensation.—Parkersburg State Journal.

Huerta's Latest. Huerta, that one man who has been able to do as he likes at any and all times has thrown another fit. This time he is openly open to Mexico was illegal and that in his opinion it is about time to hold another, that is, it will be time, say after three months. If this isn't a streak of diplomacy worthy of a Bismark or Gladstone we will quit. The question now is: Will President Wilson and the American Congress fall for the cratty Dictator's last play for time?—Sistersville Review.

DOCTORS

In the South Are to Gather in the City of Lexington Next Week.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 13.—The approaching meeting of the Southern Medical Association at Lexington, Ky., on November 17-20, is claimed, will be the most remarkable gathering of physicians ever assembled in the South. The program shows that every one of the sixteen southern states is represented by a number of its most distinguished physicians. The subjects to be discussed cover the whole field of medicine and surgery but throughout the program subjects of particular interest to southern physicians preponderate. West Virginia is well represented on the program. Any association that doubles its membership every year must have good reasons for its existence, particularly when it lacks the elements of selfishness that underlie so many other organizations. The Southern Medical Association has made that phenomenal record. Three years ago it had only 300 members, two years ago it boasted of 600 and one year ago the membership had reached 1,200. One thousand new members have been added to its roll since last November and it is confidentially expected that before the coming meeting at Lexington the record of doubling its membership each year will be maintained. Yet this organization is entirely devoid of financial, political or social inducements to join its rank. It is purely a scientific body and is composed of physicians who are the leaders of their profession in every southern state. The inevitable result is that the papers contributed at the meeting and the discussions thereon are of an unusually high order. It is believed by those interested that this meeting will prove an epoch in southern medicine. It will demonstrate beyond dispute that the representatives of the medical profession in the South are the equals of any others without exception, that the work they are doing for the advancement of medical science is as thorough and important as is being prosecuted anywhere, and that there is no occasion for going out of the South for the best of everything in medicine and surgery.

But there is an element connected with the work of the Southern Medical Association that is not always appreciated, and that is its influence upon public opinion for public welfare which extends to the remotest neighborhood in the South. By leading the opinions of its members in such a way as to arouse their interest in questions of hygiene and sanitation it has been a powerful agent in supporting the remarkable revival of public attention in such matters. So that everywhere we see the people wide awake to necessity of local sanitation. Since the organization of the Southern Medical Association and the publication of its official organ, the Southern Medical Journal, this revival has swept the southern states with a power that is without precedent in such a cause. Since the South has suffered more than its share from unsanitary conditions there can be no doubt that the interest in the prevention of disease that is being fostered by the Southern Medical Association and its Journal will prove of material value in the wonderful industrial development that is every where seen in our favored Southland.

Newspaper Advertising Brings the Dollars!

All advertising is good but some is better than others. Newspaper advertising is best of all because it brings the best immediate results for the least expenditure of money. People regard the newspaper as timely. An advertisement in a newspaper suggests quick action and generally brings it. Manufacturers are finding the newspaper the best gateway to immediate results. It is a two-edged weapon for sales victory. It stimulates both the consumer and the local dealer. People believe in newspapers, believe in dealers who advertise in newspapers and believe in manufactured products brought to their attention through the advertising columns of local newspapers.
