ORDER OF PUBLICATION.
STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA.

TRYING

have practically reached that point where, so far as West Virginia is concerned, they are holding out for nothing but a separate ticket so that the actual Progressive party strength in the state may be ascertained for the first time and once for all. They do not seem to care whether the same congressional candidates appear on both tickets, but they want three tickets. They want to know, they say, just how many simon pure third party votes they can get in the state. If this program is satisfactory to them, it is not likely to be strenuously opposed by the Republican management. Leastways by the present Republican congressmen who expect to be re-nominated. They haven't any fight with Progressive principles. They regard the principles of both parties as virtually the same, and they look upon themselves as just as progressive as the lamentably few representatives in Congress who term themselves that, but prefer it spelled with a capital "P." In proof of their contention they file their record roll calls and all. Each of that party makes it less likely that a satisfactory agreement between the two factions can be prevented.

In that event it spells gloom and disappointment to the dominant faction in control of the Democratic party. They count strong on two separate and distinct tickets, with different candidates on each ticket. So sure are they of it that their plans for the forthcoming campaign take that into account. So sure of it are they that they are sending more good money into the cause to prevent an agreement and do not consider it in the light of sending good money after bad. The Watson-Chilton organization is still willing to finance the split handsomely, and without any particularly embarrassing proviso with the faction with which they deal.

The representatives of the Democratic party who have official connection here make no bones about it; they are counting on the split in the Republican ranks to continue through this coming election. They list that as their most valuable asset. That is what gives Major Neely and "Junior" Brown such feeling of assurance that they will succeed themselves, either these two or anybody else hopes for the split to continue beyond this year, but they are cocksure that it will last long enough to split the strength of their opposition and return them to the House as "minority" victors next November.

To bring this about—to have the chance of securing a larger congressional representation than they now have—the Watson-Chilton leadership, it is said, is willing to pretend to "lay down" on the legislative ticket. This would not be such a large price to pay as it might appear to many on the face of the thing. There is absolutely no chance for the Democratic party to get control of the next legislature. They might elect a majority of the lower branch, but they have not one in a million chances of securing a majority in the state senate. There are far too many Republican holdovers for that. Of course, it must be conceded that the Watson-Chilton organization would like to get the legislature if they could, for it would help them build up their spoils organization and enable them to fulfill many promises that they have long since made to large corporations that feel themselves aggrieved at the modern tax laws and other governmental reforms introduced by the Republican party for the supervision of their conduct. But the machine knows that these promises will have to hang on for a while longer. There is not a chance of the next state senate being anything other than Republican. In view of this statement of the situation, it is not a thing to be surprised over that the present Republican congressmen and their friends view with some degree of indignation any action or argument tending to indicate that the legislature is any more important than trying to secure a solid delegation for the party in the next Congress. They are not to be blamed for being alert and resentful of anything that looks like sacrificing them in a more or less questionable way, and to many experienced politicians unnecessary, temporizing or compromising with the party's opponents in a more or less doubtful effort to "save the legislature." Another fact that is bothering the national leaders of the Progressive party is lack of funds to maintain their organization and prosecute anything looking like a sure-enough campaign. They are out of money. They admit it, but declare that they feel sure it will be forthcoming, but from whence they confess they do not know. Their faith, however, as to this seems to be entered in George W. Perkins. He is about the only large "producer" left. Charles R. Crane, of Chicago, is now lined up with President Wilson, and Frank A. Munsey, who was, indeed, an "angel" when it came to financial backing, has quit, and let the public in on the knowledge of that fact months ago. The only hope is that Perkins will stay and not desert the floundering ship and will find them. As a fat-fryer there is official testimony to show that he has had no mean success in the past.

The latest report here—how it started and who started it is beyond us, is that Roosevelt is going to settle the party split when he returns. After looking things over the story goes that the colonel will dissolve the party he created, and proceed to lay the ropes to head a reunited party in 1916. To effect the union before the congressional campaign of this year would tend to heal up the wounds he is held to be responsible for inflicting, but to go on through the campaign about to be entered would so aggravate said wounds as to make any likelihood of his election to the presidency an iridescent dream, or words to that effect. The story is given for what it is worth. The only merit it appears to possess is that so many really sensible politicians have believe in the truth of it.

CITY POPULATION

Within Corporate Limits Now 11,000, An Increase of 2,000 in Four Years.

(SPECIAL TO THE TELEGRAM)
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 27.—If Clarksburg had forty-five more people it would be as large as Fairmont according to estimates of population given out today at the census bureau. SPEAKEASY RAID

At Binghamon Results in a Desperate Encounter between Officers and Italians.

FAIRMONT, April 27.—When a half dozen county officers Sunday afternoon raided an alleged speakeasy conducted by Italians in a small store at Binghamon a desperate fight resulted. Three Italians, charged with conducting the place, were arrested and a cask of wine and several samples of other drinks brought here as evidence.

Fully thirty Italians gathered about the store when the raid was made. As the officers brought the three men out on the porch Sam Quinto started a fight and was joined by one of his companions. The other Italians crowded in and tried to help their friends. They were beaten back by the officers. During the fight the third man secured a Winchester rifle from under the counter of the store but was prevented from using it. For magazine was filled with shells. For a time it looked as if the officers would be overpowered by the men, but finally fought off the men and captured their prisoners and confiscated goods and took all to the county jail.
