An Evening Echo.

As my life today has been determined by the way I lived yesterday, so my tomorrow is being determined by the way I live my today.

Two Heads Better Than One. Have you worked out today's Summer Pastime picture? If not, this is the moment to start in.

Utterances Will Rebound. The Exponent's hypocritical love for the Progressives along with that shown by other Democratic newspapers may yet bring that newspaper to grief.

Scramble Is On. Recently the Telegram said "the scramble is on" among Democrats for the county offices and spoils.

The Story of the Stars and Stripes. The American flag is a growth rather than a creation. Its history can be traced back to the twelfth century, or nearly 600 years prior to the first "Flag Day," June 14, 1777.

What Other Editors Say. Poor Boy. Kermit Roosevelt was lassoed Wednesday and hog tied Thursday.

A Corking Time. "Carranza May Bottle Up Huerta." This would enable him to have a real corking time.

Fine Men. We are glad the bankers have been here. Bankers are nearly all fine men, of the salt of the earth, upright, able, progressive, likable and admirable.

Fleekle Woodrow. Once again we have stopped the shipment of arms to Mexico. One day we permit and the next day we don't.

Not New. A West Virginia business men's organization wants to cut the legislature down to thirty members and abolish one of the houses when the initiative and referendum is adopted.

Appearances Count. One of the reasons why advertising has grown so enormously of recent years is that merchants realize that a business to succeed must carry an atmosphere of prosperity.

Do You See It! Mr. Speaker Clark, Mr. President Wilson by his side, and with the Baltimore convention in mind, nudges Mr. President Wilson, points to Mr. Secretary Bryan, reposing in the distance, and says, says he: If you want a nut for president of Mexico, why not let Bryan select him?

Coming Events in Clarksburg. Saturday, September 26.—Football, West Virginia Wesleyan vs. Carlisle Indians, Union Park.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE. GRAFT. Socks, socks, socks; They cost a lot of "rocks," Some will fade And some are made With fancy work and clocks.

Italy's Next King To Be "HARDENED". The body of J. H. Manley, who was killed last week by lightning at Fulton, near Wheeling, was laid to rest at Gee Lick cemetery, near this city, Sunday afternoon.

The Better Babies Movement. Under the slogan "Better Babies" propaganda of health and sanitation have been started in many localities.

the troops in Massachusetts declined to march under this flag and the military commissioners were forced to design other flags for their troops which adopted has not been preserved.

In 1815 a mint was established in Boston. Money coined in this mint had the pine tree stamped on one side of it. The pine tree design was also used on New England flags, certainly by 1704 and possibly as early as 1635.

At the outbreak of the Revolution the American colonies had no flag common to all of them. In many cases the merchant marine flag of England was used with the pine tree substituted for the Union Jack.

Massachusetts adopted the green pine tree on a white field with the motto: "An Appeal to Heaven." Some of the southern states had the rattlesnake flag with the motto "Don't Tread On Me" on a white or yellow field.

This flag had been used by South Carolina as early as 1764. Benjamin Franklin defended the rattlesnake device on the ground that the rattlesnake is found only in America and the serpent emblems were considered by ancients to be symbols of wisdom.

In September, 1775 there was displayed in the South what is by many believed to be the first distinctive American flag. It was blue with a white crescent, and matched the dress of the troops, who wore caps inscribed "Liberty or Death."

The colonies desired to adopt a common flag; but they had not yet declared independence and were not at first seeking independence. They took the British flag as they knew it, and made a new colony flag by dividing the red field with white stripes into thirteen alternate red and white stripes.

This is known as the Cambridge flag, because it was first unfurled over Washington's headquarters at Cambridge, Mass., January 1, 1776. It complied with the law of 1707 by having the Union Jack on it; it also represented the thirteen colonies by the thirteen stripes.

As the colonies gradually became converted to the idea that independence from the mother country was necessary, they began to modify the flag, first by leaving off the Union Jack and using only thirteen horizontal stripes.

The modified flags were not always red and white, but regularly consisted of combinations of two colors selected from red, white, blue and yellow. The final modification was the replacement of the Union Jack by the white stars on a blue field.

The stars are the only distinctive feature of the American flag. The charming story which credits Betsy Ross with making the first flag of stars and stripes is still accepted by historians. When Washington suggested the six-pointed star, she demonstrated the case with which a five-pointed star could be made by folding a piece of paper and producing one with a single clip of the scissors.

Some writers are of the opinion that both stars and stripes in the flag were derived from the coat of arms of the Washington family, but this theory is not generally held. The official adoption of the first flag was in 1777. On June 14 of that year the Continental Congress passed an act providing that "the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white on a blue field, representing a new constellation. The thirteen stars were arranged in a circle to symbolize the perpetuity of the union of the states.

Vermont was admitted to the union in 1791 and Kentucky in 1792. It was felt that these two new states ought to be recognized on the flag, so in 1794 Congress passed an act making the flag fifteen stars and fifteen stripes.

This remained the flag of the United States throughout the War of 1812, until, until there were twenty states in the union. In 1818 an effort was again made to modify the flag so that all the new states would be represented on it. To be continually adding stripes would make the flag very awkward in shape and appearance, so after arguing the matter for two years, Congress decided to return to the original thirteen stripes and one star for each state. Congress has never determined the arrangement of the stars nor the shape and proportion of the flag, and there has been great variation, especially in the grouping of the stars. There are still many who believe that the symbolic circular grouping of the stars should be restored.

When James VI of Scotland ascended the throne of England as James I, he combined the two flags, and issued a proclamation requiring all ships to carry the new flag at their main masts. At the same time the vessels of South Britain were to carry at their foremasts the red cross of St. George and the ships of north Britain to carry the white cross of St. Andrew.

The new flag was known as "Kings Colors," the "Union Colors," or the "Great Union," and later as the "Union Jack," and was the one under which the British made all their permanent settlements in America. It was the flag of Great Britain only by proclamation, however; not until 1707 did Parliament pass an act definitely uniting the two countries and their flags. In the same year the government issued regulations requiring the navy to use what was known as the white ensign; the naval reserve, the blue ensign; and the merchant marine the red ensign. Owing to the fact that the British merchant vessels were everywhere, the colonists in America came to look upon this red ensign as the flag of Great Britain.

The people in the New England colonies were bitterly opposed to the cross in the flag. In 1635 some of organization wants to cut the legislature down to thirty members and abolish one of the houses when the initiative and referendum is adopted. When that day comes there will be no use for a larger legislative body. This idea, however, is not new with business men. It has been proposed and agitated in a number of states.—Bluefield Telegraph.

Appearances Count. One of the reasons why advertising has grown so enormously of recent years is that merchants realize that a business to succeed must carry an atmosphere of prosperity. The man who enters a business office with soiled clothes, and face unshorn and muddy boots, is not apt to get a job. This may be due to superficial judgments, but people have to make the best use they can of exterior indications.—Morgantown Post-Chronicle.

This is a cartoon reduced to print. Do you see the point?—Huntington Herald-Dispatch.

Take Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil and Keep Healthy. MOST sickness comes from the bowels getting clogged with poisonous impurities. Gently cleanse and lubricate these organs from time to time and much sickness and suffering will be avoided.

An Ideal Cathartic is Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil. It is but the pure oil of castor beans with the bad taste, so offensive in common castor oil, entirely removed.

Easy to take. Works perfectly. No gassy effects. Cleanses, heals, lubricates. Perfectly safe—no over-dose can hurt you. Far superior to common castor oil.

Buy a bottle of Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil to-day and always keep it on hand.

WESTON. (SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE) WESTON, June 15.—Mrs. P. A. Hitt has been taken to St. Mary's hospital at Clarksburg, as the result of a serious accident sustained Saturday when a horse ran over her at the corner of Main and Second streets.

Mr. Hitt came around the corner just in time to get in front of an animal ridden in another direction by Audie Weber. He was riding at a rapid gait and saw the woman too late to check up the horse. She was knocked down and one hip was dislocated. She is a woman of some fifty years, prominent in church and temperance work and her many local friends hope for her recovery.
