Little Old New York
By Wm. J. Mayne

NEW YORK, May 28.—Charles Blakesley, of the Kansas City Star, recently went to a Broadway show with a friend. It was a musical comedy and the chorus was, to say the least, thinly gowned. Blakesley showed little interest in the performance.

After two acts he turned to his friend and asked how he liked the entertainment.

"Ripping," replied the friend.

ice is shown in the reviews.

A great and vital question is now being settled among the southerners in New York. Not long ago Miss Edith Taliaferro, an actress, said "he all" in the course of a conversation.

Some southerners defended her, but most of them did not. A young lady from Tennessee has just written the following poem, which seems to settle the subject:

Some say "isn't,"
Some say "ain't,"
Some say "it is not,"
Many say "it ain't."

Just lots of us say "you all."
And hastily, sometimes, "we all."
But never in all my life
Has a southerner said "he all."

Dan Groesbeck, the Chicago artist, was revisiting his haunts in Gotham last week. His friends recalled the days when he had a high class commercial studio in one of the finest buildings on Fifth avenue.

One morning a silk-battered frock-coated gentleman, who looked like ready money, stepped in and said he had been paying a dollar a piece for pen and ink sketches and he thought the price was too high.

He said he had heard of Groesbeck and thought that he might take the work on account of the number, there being three or four sketches a week, a trifle cheaper.

Groesbeck hung on every word with apparent interest. Studied over the problem seriously and finally admitted that it was tempting, but that was so tied up he couldn't do the work just now. He, however, knew a first-class man, who could. The name he wrote on a card and handed to the caller was "C. D. Gibson."

They are also telling a new story on T. A. Dorgan, "Tad." It seems that Mrs. Tad purchased a very fine spring suit and when "Tad" saw it, he acted as though the price shocked him dreadfully. Mrs. Tad was on the verge of tears.

"You know I am Tad's wife," she said, "and I have got to dress accordingly."

"Well," said Tad, "look at this suit I've got on and I am 'ad.'"

The songs they sing on Broadway this week are: "Down Among the Sheltering Palms," and "If We Can't Be the Same Old Sweethearts, We'll Just Be the Same Old Friends."

To Have Beautiful Hair Nourish the Scalp

Dandruff must be removed and the hair roots nourished to stop falling hair and itching scalp. It is unnecessary to have thin, brittle, matted, wispy or faded hair. No matter how unsightly your hair, how badly it is falling, or how much dandruff, simply rub Parisian Sage well into the scalp and it will be all that is ever needed. The hair roots are nourished and stimulated to grow new hair. Even all dandruff is removed with one application; itching scalp and falling hair cease; the hair becomes soft, fluffy, seems twice as abundant, and radiant with life and beauty.

Parisian Sage, a daintily perfumed liquid, is one of the most pleasant, invigorating and refreshing hair tonics known, yet perfectly harmless and inexpensive. After the first application you will be surprised and delighted with Parisian Sage, for there is nothing that will so help to double your present attractiveness as Jururiant, glorious hair, and this tonic treatment is all that can possibly be desired.

Be sure to get the real Parisian Sage from Wells-Haymaker, or at any drug counter, as there is no other so effective.—Advertisement.

Serbs Use Captured Guns and Franz Joseph's Troops Make a Blunder.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Lieutenant Milovot Lozanitch, of the Serbian army, in a letter to his sister, Miss Helen Lozanitch, now in the United States assisting the Serbian Agricultural Relief Committee of America, tells of an attack made on the Austrians in an hour and a quarter's duration, in which half of his company was killed and wounded.

"This day, as you can imagine, was a most exciting and disastrous one for us," he writes. "One of the shrapnels exploded so near me that I was in the smoke, and my clothes smelt of the powder. That was the day that I used the Austrian guns for the first time instead of the Turkish. You know I had two guns which were captured from the Turks during the Balkan war.

"The use of the Austrian guns created great confusion among the enemy. As you have seen yourself in Belgrade, the smoke from the Austrian guns is reddish-yellow, while the smoke from the Serbian guns is white; consequently when we began firing on their infantry, they thought it was their own guns and stopped firing. An Austrian officer, who was taken prisoner by the Serbians, told us that in one day three commanders were dismissed because of mistakes like this.

"One day we saw that the Austrian had left a battery imbedded in the mud, and immediately we brought up our oxen and, with the help of other soldiers, dug the guns out with all the necessary ammunition. The very next day we were firing at the Austrians with their own guns, and that was just at a time when our own guns were out of order.

"The Serbian army has had the most peculiar experience of all in this European war. Before the invasion, our army was short of everything, even ammunition. Now that the Austrian invasion is over and we have fought our many battles, we are better prepared than at the beginning of the war.

"On the way to Belgrade I passed over a thousand wagons, left by the Austrians, filled with tea and coffee. For over a fortnight our soldiers ate chocolate and smoked Havana cigars. We got beautiful uniforms and shoes, and I have a fine German rug for my horse. Near Shabat, the Austrians left 250,000 kilograms of coffee and 25,000,000 rounds of ammunition. This is just twice as much as we used during the whole Turkish war. Up to now we have captured 193 guns and 60,000 rifles."
