SIX TIMES GREATER THAN THE OLD DEBT WOULD BE COAL LOSS

Every Year if the Proposed Advance of Freight Rates Goes Through.

(By G. C. McIntosh.) Claiming that the loss to the state would amount to six times more each year than the full sum of the Virginia debt, Colonel J. W. Dawson, of Charleston, presented a startling array of facts before the state board of trade at Fairmont last week.

Colonel Dawson made some other comparisons for the purpose of showing the wide extent of the coal business and the terrible and instant havoc that would follow in the wake of the railroad program to increase the freight rates on coal.

The coal industry brings to the state annually, about one-half as much cash as all the money on deposit in all of the banks combined. And if the shortage of money was responsible for the panic of 1907, what would happen to the banks of $75,000,000 annually, or $250,000 daily, should be hereafter cut off.

The present coal crisis affects 450 operating companies employing "80,000 mine laborers, 250,000 women and children-families of mine laborers, other laborers in all walks of life, the farmer and his laborers, wholesale and retail merchants, and last, but not least, the state as a whole through its taxation.

Fifty-five million dollars per year would be the direct loss to the mine workers. It would affect thousands of railway employes. It will reduce the demand for farm products. The wholesale and retail merchants will be affected by the withdrawal of the present wage rolls, amounting to $75,000,000 per year.

Mr. Dawson also showed that if West Virginia could market its coal on as favorable conditions as Pennsylvania, the values of coal lands would grow from $100 to $200 per acre, their present values, to $1,500 to $2,000 per acre, the values that obtain in Pennsylvania. He showed that there had existed for years a deliberate plan and campaign on the part of Ohio and Pennsylvania to destroy the West Virginia coal industry, and quoted from public records to prove it.

Against the coal industry in this state, Dawson declared to be illegal. He showed, furthermore, that besides trying to keep West Virginia coal out of the northern and western markets, the Pennsylvania railroad had succeeded up to this time, absolutely, in keeping our coal away from New York and other eastern markets.

"If by chance," said Mr. Dawson, "the coal operators of West Virginia could continue doing business under the advanced freight rate, it would be necessary for them to decrease the amount of wages paid their employes, and curtail expenses in every other way to absorb this fifteen cents advance in rate, and thus if they continue to ship coal in the same quantities as at present there would be an annual loss to the state of this fifteen cents a ton or about $11,000,000."
