An Evening Echo.

The name American must always exalt the just pride of patriotism.—WASHINGTON.

St. Louis is waiting that the Democratic party still owes $15,000 for convention expenses in that city. This is another broken promise.

Vox pop wants to know what effect a general railroad strike would have on President Wilson's "single-track mind." It would depend somewhat on his terminal facilities.

It is probable that the president will find a way to get the members of the militia from the southern states home in time to vote. Seems like those fellows down south always get what they want when a Democrat rules in Washington.

Early in the days of the administration Mr. Bryan was very solicitous about positions for "deserving Democrats." The list of contributors to the Wilson campaign fund of 1912, as read on the floor of the Senate by Senator Penrose, clearly shows that Mr. Bryan's "deserving Democrats" were the contributing men of his party.

Tempting Providence. Mr. Hughes's survey of the immediate past challenges our future. We have muddled along, but our gratitude for such immunity as we have enjoyed should be directed to Providence.—Chicago Tribune.

Yes; but another four years of Wilkins Micawber's watchful waiting in the White House might be a tempting of Providence that would lead to a sharp lesson in the precept that the Lord helps them that help themselves. The country blundered innocently into Woodrow Wilson, a minority president in 1912. Providence has been kind, and tempered the wind to the shorn lambs of business and labor with a passing and fortuitous spell of seeming prosperity. The country can best show its gratitude to Providence by declining further trial of Mr. Wilson, now that it has got acquainted with him, says the Milwaukee Sentinel.

He Will Win the West.

Mr. Hughes will decisively win the West. Those disheartened with the drift of national affairs will take on new hope under the banner of the country's new leader; those concerned with the future of the country in the keen competition that is to come after the war will find reason and logic in the Hughes economic policies propounded on his campaign tours that vast numbers of business men who see nothing but certain calamity in the Democratic principle of taxation of the American, while foreign goods are permitted entry into this country without proper assessment, will enter into the election of Mr. Hughes heartily because it will mean a return of the country to a protective policy. It is well that we have a change in administration to meet new conditions after the war, and Mr. Hughes has made a splendid start toward victory, says the Baltimore American.

Industrial Education.

In 1908 Governor Hughes approved an act for the establishment and maintenance of general industrial and trade schools in cities and union free school districts in the state of New York. This act contained a somewhat novel clause. It provided for the creation of an advisory board to counsel with and advise the board of education in relation to the powers and duties vested in such board with reference to the establishment, management and supervision and control of industrial and trade schools. Membership on this advisory board was restricted to persons representing "local trades and industries."

This law attracted the attention of labor men and they have given the subject of industrial education under its terms very cordial support. They were quick to grasp the significance of the "advisory board" clause. This gave them opportunity to safeguard industrial education against exploitation by any selfish interest; it gave them the right to speak with authority in regard to teachers, courses of study, industrial school shops and all their equipment.

In Albany, N. Y., by virtue of this act there has been established a school of printing. In the establishment of this school, Albany organized labor in general and the typographical union in particular has a definite part. The board of education and the members of the trade came together and agreed upon the purposes to be attained and the methods for their attainment. Moreover, the man selected to assume charge of the school, Charles H. Whitmore, was and is an honored member of the Albany Typographical Union.

The school has been running since March, 1915, and is doing most satisfactory educational work. To Governor Hughes all must accord the credit for this valuable contribution to social progress. He had the vision and broad outlook necessary to a realization of the possibilities of the plan as a means to popularize industrial or trade education. This is another illustration of his confidence in the men of labor; he knew that they were absolutely sound and patriotic and that the training of young people for life's work could be entrusted to their keeping. Moreover, the approval of the act and of the appropriation for its administration show conclusively that the governor believes in extending every educational opportunity to all who are minded to avail themselves of them.

As president, Mr. Hughes may be expected to favor such measures as the federal government may properly adopt for furthering the educational interest and opportunities of all the people.

Canadian Competition for Farmers.

The embargo on the exportation of hay from Canada, which was put into effect last year, was raised June 1, according to a report of the United States consul at St. Stephen, New Brunswick. He states that this has had some effect on the hay market in that district, and probably throughout the province. The Canadian department of agriculture writes from Fredericton that "large quantities of old hay are held by the shippers and farmers, who have been unable to ship to the United States heretofore on account of the embargo."

The Democratic tariff reduction on hay will now put in some good legs for the Canadian grower. That bill reduced the Republican duty from $4 to $2 per ton, and during the first ten months of its operation hay imports (practically all from Canada) increased fifty per cent compared with a similar ten months under the Republican law. Then the war came along and the Canadian hay was needed in the war zone.

The order raising the embargo indicates that Great Britain and Canada find their troops with a supply of hay adequate for war purposes for some time to come, and Canadian growers are now at liberty to turn their attention to the American market.

Canada's total exports of her products to us during the fiscal year 1915, ended last June, amounted to $244,000,000, compared with $129,500,000 for the fiscal year 1914, under the Republican tariff law, or an increase of seventy per cent. Of course a large percentage of Canada's products consist of farm products, the bulk of which, under the Democratic law, are on the free list, but our farm products have to pay to get into the Canadian market. Under our present near-free-trade policy, Canada can devote a large part of her energies to the European war and still nearly double her sales in the American market.

That great protectionist, James G. Blaine, once said, referring to Canada: "We will treat them as neighbors and in peace as friends, but I repeat that I don't love them and I would not invite them to sit down at our hearthstone and take part of that which belongs to our own fireside and our own children." That charity which the Democratic party shows to our foreign competitors in presenting them with the American market should begin at home, but before it does, the Republican party will have to assume control.

"Not particularly," said Clarke. "I can think of thousands of more engaging topics," said Mobray Speer. "Then I'll tell you, by all means," smiled the colonel suavely. "I caught Bernard in a water pipe while I was visiting relatives in southeastern California. I knew by a certain expression about his eyes that I had captured an owl with intelligence, though with how much intelligence I did not begin to suspect till after I started to train him."

"Meat Takes Another Jump"

—a familiar headline in your daily newspaper. But why worry about the cost of something you don't need? The most expensive foods are generally the least nutritious. In Summer health and strength come from a meatless diet. One or two Shredded Wheat Biscuits, heated in the oven, covered with berries or other fruits and served with milk or cream, make a complete, satisfying, nourishing meal at a cost of five or six cents. All the meat of the whole wheat made digestible by steam-cooking, shredding and baking. Made at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

negotiations began two weeks ago. The hope of the president and administration leaders was in the possibility of getting the brotherhood men to give more time to continue the negotiations.

The four brotherhood heads issued a statement replying to President Roa of the Pennsylvania, who last night made an announcement that rather than give up arbitration the roads preferred to face a strike. The statement charged the Pennsylvania with inconsistency in that two years ago it fought the efforts of its shop men to organize and arbitrate. It also declared that as the controlling interest in five smaller roads it has refused them representation on the managers' conference committee and that if arbitration were agreed upon it would not apply to these roads.
