Strike Sympathizers Lurk on Roof Tops and Throw Brick and Bottles.
CAR WINDOWS SHATTERED
Several Passengers Are Injured in Sixteen Attacks Reported by the Police.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Repeated threats of a great general strike to help the striking street car employes caused all branches of the city government, charged with enforcing the laws, to prepare Friday for outbreaks of mob violence. Mayor Mitchell's notice that he stood ready to invoke all the civil and military power at his command to suppress disorder was followed by greater police activity and a warning that persons convicted of engaging in strike riots would receive heavier punishment. The police department told the traction companies that they could re-establish night service as soon as they were ready under assurance of adequate protection. Thus far 6,700 policemen have been disposed at strategic points. This police guard includes a patrol of fifty automobiles and 100 motorcyclists along the most exposed car routes. The early morning bombardments of elevated trains were resumed, however, strike sympathizers lurking on roof tops, throwing brick and bottles, which shattered car windows. Several passengers were injured in sixteen attacks reported by the police.

HOUSEWIVES

Are Called Upon to Attend Mass Meeting to Fight Increase of Foodstuff Prices.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Housewives of Chicago were called upon Friday to attend a mass meeting at which organizations will be perfected to fight increases in the prices of foodstuffs.

The announcement that bread is to be advanced from five to six cents a loaf resulted in the call for the meeting. Miss Florence King, president of the Woman's Association of Commerce, under whose auspices the meeting is to be held, urged that housewives boycott dealers or refuse to purchase supplies which have been advanced in price.

"Men are interested in buying and selling for a profit. It is, therefore, folly to expect them to take any action," the call reads. "Women must put a stop to unwarranted increases and we alone can stop them."

HUGHES GIVES ATTENTION TO LIND MISSION

Republican Candidate Tells of the Treatment to Smaller State.

RICHMOND, Ind., Sept. 22.—Instructions said to have been given by President Wilson to John Lind, his personal representative in Mexico, during Huerta's time, was cited in speeches by Charles E. Hughes at Fort Wayne and here in support of Mr. Hughes's denial that the administration sought to deal with small states in the same spirit as with large states.

"I have only recently received the authentic information of the actual instructions that were given with respect to the government of Mexico, such as Mexico then had," Mr. Hughes said. "John Lind was authorized by the executive to state this proposition to a minister of another government, namely: 'Huerta will be put out if he does not get out. That is the preference of the president that it should be accomplished by domestic means, if possible, but that if it cannot be done by domestic means, other means for the purpose will be resorted to.'"

"There is no basis for that in the recognition of small states," Mr. Hughes added. "There is no basis for that in the recognition of the sovereignty of our neighbor. There is no basis for that in a true and correct American policy. We departed from an American policy and left our citizens to suffer from the barbarity which resulted when all government was destroyed and anarchy was supreme in Mexico. It is a deplorable record."

Refers to "Dinner Pail."

In a dozen speeches today, most of them as rear platform addresses, of only a few minutes each, the Republican nominee for president outlined his views on Americanism, protection of American rights, the protective tariff, and the other party policies, in one address, at Delphi, Mr. Hughes referred to "full dinner pails" placards plastered on bill boards at Lafayette by Democrats.

"As I was going through the streets of Lafayette," Mr. Hughes said, "I saw a campaign placard which had been put up by our friends on the other side. That placard bore this statement: 'No idle men. Plenty of work. A full dinner pail.'"

"I thought 'what an extraordinary tribute to the memories of the American voters.' How was it in 1914 and in the early part of 1915, after the passage of the Underwood bill? Was there plenty of work? Were there then no idle men? Were there then full dinner pails?"

"If we have no idle men today, it is not due to the policies of our friends on the other side, but in spite of their policies and because of the European war."

Mr. Hughes again declared for the protection of American rights, including lives, property and commerce.

For Pure Americanism.

"We are not here for this nation, of that nation," he said, "for this side or that side. So far as I am concerned, if entrusted with executive responsibility, I shall, to the utmost of my powers, maintain American rights on land and sea throughout the world. With respect to all nations, I stand here for the right of Americans, four squares to the world."

In most of his addresses Mr. Hughes again assailed the administration for the enactment of the Adamson law.

At Lafayette, another stop, Mr. Hughes referred to the protective tariff as an American doctrine, rather than a partisan prejudice.

"Henry Clay called the policy of protection the American doctrine, and so it is," Mr. Hughes said. "It ought not to be a partisan doctrine."

The future of the United States, Mr. Hughes told several audiences is "full of nothing but agitation and disturbance unless reason rules our force."

"I can see the United States embroiled in the most serious social controversies," he said. "I can see a certain course of action taken that would lead us perilously close to civil war. I tell you, my friends, we've got to have vision and justice, open mindedness and care, and do all that we can, not to remove controversy—that is impossible—but to see alive the sense of justice and have each remedial efforts put forth that all will be content, because we find the great ideals of the Declaration
