

THE DAILY TELEGRAM

The Leading Newspaper of Central West Virginia.

Published Every Week-day Evening and Sunday Morning by CLARKSBURG TELEPHONE COMPANY, Clarksville, W. Va.

Entered at the postoffice at Clarksville, W. Va., as second class mail matter.

MEMBER OF ASSOCIATED PRESS.

TELEPHONES: Editorial Rooms, 157; Business Office, 157; Consolidated, 157; Bell, 330.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: By Carrier, Daily, per week, $5.00; Sunday, per week, $2.50; Daily and Sunday, per year, $50.00.

By Mail, in Advance, Daily, per month, $1.50; Daily and Sunday, per year, $15.00.

By Mail, in Advance, Daily, per month, $1.50; Daily and Sunday, per year, $15.00.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS: When changing address, give old as well as new address.

All communications must be signed, or they will receive no attention whatever.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1916.

An Evening Echo.

Every man depends on the quantity of sense, wit or good manners he brings into society for the reception he meets within it.—HAZLITT.

Safe-Guarding the Wife.

Frequently in the United States there appears an advertisement by a husband warning tradesmen against giving credit to his wife, says the Washington Post. Sometimes this is preliminary to a divorce and sometimes not. The husband may be merely cantankerous or the wife may be merely extravagant. There are no rules or regulations governing such matters except in some states, where it is provided that a husband may disavow responsibility for the wife's debts by giving fair notice to the public.

Brazil, in its new civil code, adopted recently, has taken cognizance of a similar tendency among husbands in South America. The new code, which definitely guarantees the property rights of authors, artists and scientists and establishes increased rights for landowners, gives equal importance to the definition of the relations between husband and wife. A married man is prohibited from giving in bond or otherwise alienating without the expressed consent of his wife property which they hold in common or which is necessary for the subsistence of the family. This is similar to the usual state laws in this country. Brazil, however, has gone further and adopted a more modern plan for safeguarding the interests of the wife. Under the new civil code a man may no longer stop his wife's credit at shops where she purchases articles necessary in the actual conduct of her household, nor may he prohibit either her or the vendor from dealing upon a credit basis in articles which are necessities of family life.

Planting Bulbs Indoors.

At the same time that bulbs are being planted out of doors, bulbs of the same and other sorts may be prepared for growth in the house. The housewife who is to grow flowers in this latter manner has several possibilities open to her. She may grow many of the bulbs in soil in window boxes or pots, in moistened fiber or moss, or among pebbles, and may grow hyacinths in water alone.

If soil is selected for the growing medium, the boxes or pots should be provided with a layer of coarse drainage material such as pebbles and broken pots, and then filled with light soil. Three to five bulbs may be placed small end up in a medium-sized pot, and should be covered with one inch of soil. After planting, the box or pot in which hyacinths or narcissi are placed should be placed out of doors and covered with about four inches of ashes or sand. The bulbs so planted should be left out of doors for from three to six weeks until a quantity of roots have formed. If it is considered more desirable, the pots or boxes may be placed in a dark, cool room or in a cellar, without covering, and left until the bulbs have formed a mat of long roots. If they throw up sprouts from two to three inches high before the roots are formed they have been kept too warm. The soil must be kept well moistened, but not over-moist. After the root-forming period is past, the pots or boxes may be taken to a light, moderately warm room for flowering. If the room is to warm the stems will be long and weak.

If the bulbs are to be grown in a house of pebbles or moss, or in water, they should also be set in a cellar for root formation to take place before being taken to the room in which they are to bloom.

Alliums, scillas, and the like need to be kept in a light, warm place from the time of planting. Tulips are hard to grow in the house and should be attempted except by experienced plant growers after receiving special instructions.

A Scientific Language.

Idealists in language still dream of a more perfect vehicle for the transmission of thought; that is, a more perfect vehicle with respect to its mechanism. Hence these remarks by the Washington Times:

"Speakers before the Federal Schoolmen's Club painted a gloomy picture of our spelling habits about the average schoolboy about the average spelling reformer got simplified spelling the average pupil will be ready to petition them to set about systematizing our grammars.

"Language is one of the survivals of our tribal life. Academically it is easy to point to the need of an international mode of communication, the grammar of which, like Esperanto, any diligent person could learn in a few hours. Language, however, promises for a long time to be one of the things that are not born out of things, and efforts alike to simplify Dr. Johnson and Mr. Murray have been caviare to the general public, which keeps right on talking and spelling as its forefathers did.

"How much lost motion is incurred in the effort of a child to learn its own language, not to mention that consumed in learning other tongues, the scientists may figure out to their heart's content. The average English-speaking citizen will go blithely on opinion that the language of Shakespeare and Milton, and our Bible is good enough for him.

"The professors are altruistic enough about the matter, for if their language and spelling reform had their way, the philologists would be out of jobs, there would be no need for experts to recall the exceptions and to rule on fine points.

"Sophisticated as we are, and as highly developed as are our means of communications, the question of grammar and spelling reform recalls that most of us still spend our time in one locality.

When we go down East ward, our Boston enunciation, our down-South drawl, our Western exclamatives, our Bowery slang, and our cockney dialect with us. So it is with every other tongue. He who would talk with all mankind not only must learn many tongues, too many for one person to master, but must know all the dialects of those tongues.

"Even the most advanced programs of simplified spelling only make a beginning on the things one could do in that field, and the 'perfect' language, made to order, are not yet beyond the nurture of societies and clubs.

Home Materials for Roadbuilding.

When a competent engineer is engaged to look after roadbuilding and maintenance one of the first economies he makes in many cases is the utilization of local materials previously neglected or undervalued.

Sometimes plans for road-building are prepared without proper investigation of local materials supposed to be abundant, and after the work has commenced it is discovered the plans must be changed because the quantity or quality of the materials was overestimated. Gravel and crushed stone are very heavy and their transportation is costly, and every endeavor should be made to ascertain whether suitable materials can be obtained locally before they are imported at heavy expense.

The surfacing of a road costs more than most people believe. In the case of eighty-seven gravel roads, the grading and drainage cost thirty-seven per cent and the surfacing sixty-three per cent. In fifty-three bituminous macadam roads, these proportions were twenty-seven and seventy-three per cent. These figures show that more than half the cost of a surfaced road is general spent for the materials and labor employed in surfacing the graded and drained road.

The good judgment that comes to an intelligent highway engineer through experience will often show him that instead of using local materials exclusively, as originally proposed before he was employed, the annual cost of the road to the taxpayers will be reduced by bringing in some material by rail. What he can accomplish in this way will depend on the knowledge of local materials which he can acquire. Usually he is too busy to do much searching himself, but he can obtain much assistance if the local authorities will make systematic endeavor to ascertain the location of all ledges, sand banks and gravel beds in their neighborhood. These are public resources or real importance, and should be a matter of record. In some communities school children have been encouraged to search for them, and in many places local amateur geologists and mineralogists have done a public service while riding their hobbies.

There can be no question that the lack of complete knowledge of this nature needlessly increases the cost of road construction and maintenance in many parts of the country.

The Cuban Election.

Considering the closeness of the relations that exist between our government and that of the Cuban republic, far too little public interest on our part is displayed in the affairs of our neighbor. The following editorial from the New York Evening Post deals in an intelligent way with the issues involved in the recent Cuban election. It is worthy of careful reading by all citizens of this country who are students of Spanish-American affairs:

There is no reason to doubt that General Mario Garcia Menocal has been re-elected president of the Cuban republic. On the face of the returns he has a fair lead, and these returns are complete except for the province of Oriente, at the extreme eastern end of the island, which is a Conservative stronghold. There a full count is expected to emphasize his victory. For the time being, however, it is in the light of anything to wonder at in the election in compiling the vote, or in the claims made in behalf of Dr. Alfredo Zayas. A complicated ballot and the difficulties of communication on the one hand, and the temperament of the Liberal leader on the other, are the explanations; and the confirmation of the Liberal defeat may be read in the offer of arbitration and the threat to force American intervention. Only one counsel of desperation could have suggested either of these measures to the President. Gomez, the real boss of the Liberals, for whom their candidate for the presidency is a mere figurehead, having been vice president under Gomez, and his candidate for president in 1912. Gomez is not the kind of man to arbitrate. He acts first, and tells why afterwards—when it suits his convenience; and he is perfectly aware that the idea of a third intervention is full of terror to the average Cuban, who believes that if Americans again take possession of their government it will be a permanent occupation, and who cannot be made to see that annexation is a last resort, as repugnant to Americans as to the Cubans themselves.

To speak plainly, it is the baleful influence of Jose Miguel Gomez that American lovers of Cuba fear not Dr. Zayas. In 1908 Gomez defeated Menocal for the presidency. Both men had earned enviable reputations in the war of liberation, but Menocal was a Conservative by nature as well as by party affiliation, a representative of the aristocracy, having large industrial interests. Gomez catered to the mob, and governed on the Jacksonian theory that to the victors belong the spoils. Naturally, he made a record of administrative inefficiency. But a splendid palace on the Prado is a monument to his business ability in matters not of public interest.

The Cuban government is modeled as closely as possible on that of the United States, and Menocal has always been a student of American politics. Of a distinguished family, which included Aniceto Menocal, an engineer in the United States navy, Raimundo Menocal, the surgeon, and Armando Menocal, the painter, he took a preparatory course at Chautauque, then at the Maryland Agricultural College, and in 1888 was graduated from Cornell as a civil engineer, with the highest honors. A major general at the end of the war, he served as chief of police in Havana under General Ludlow, and later organized the Cuban Lighthouse Service. He aimed during his first term to give a clean, business-like administration of public affairs, and has though thwarted in certain plans for public improvements and economies by a Liberal coalition in Congress. He is determined, as told in a recent interview in the Evening Post, to reap the fruit of these efforts for the common weal during the next four years.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

local, the painter, he took a preparatory course at Chautauque, then at the Maryland Agricultural College, and in 1888 was graduated from Cornell as a civil engineer, with the highest honors. A major general at the end of the war, he served as chief of police in Havana under General Ludlow, and later organized the Cuban Lighthouse Service. He aimed during his first term to give a clean, business-like administration of public affairs, and has though thwarted in certain plans for public improvements and economies by a Liberal coalition in Congress. He is determined, as told in a recent interview in the Evening Post, to reap the fruit of these efforts for the common weal during the next four years.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.

Meantime, the Cuban youth is enjoying the advantages of compulsory education, with a course in English beginning in the grammar grade. And with another four years of peace and plenty in which to advance their knowledge of politics as citizens of a republic, the Cuban manhood may be depended upon for all time to come to preserve the liberty which cost so many years of sorrow and of bloodshed. All that Americans ask of Cuba is the continuance of the present cordial friendship between the peoples, its sugar, its tobacco, and the privileges of playing in the delectable island in the winter; and for all these things, save friendship, Americans are glad to pay the highest market price.