

Adamston's Model New Church

Dedication services will be held at Adamston July 4 in connection with the formal opening of the new Methodist Episcopal church there. The services will be auspicious in a number of particulars. That community will have the honor of the presence of the Rev. William F. Anderson, of Cincinnati, a bishop of the denomination, who will officiate and formally dedicate the church. The Rev. Dr. Besseger, of Buckhannon, district superintendent, will also be in attendance and participate in the service. It is also expected that Bishop Earl Cranston, of Washington, D. C., will be on the program. The Rev. A. S. Wolfe, pastor of the church, and the official board as well as many of the leading members will actively engage in making the day a decided success. It is expected that the day will mark the largest assemblage in the history of that town.

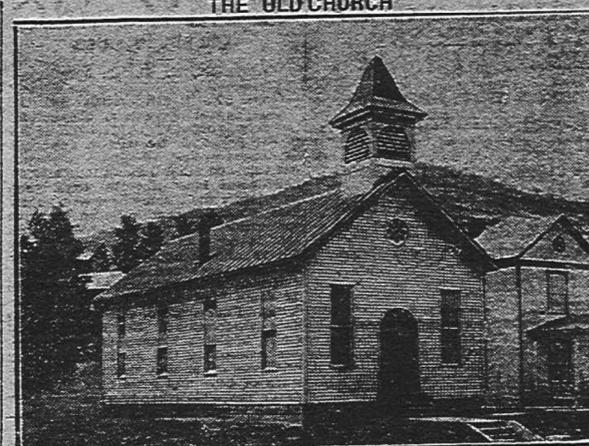

Ground Floor.
The ground floor consists of a spacious Sunday school room, which has three entrances from Pike street and there are also interior stairs leading to the main entrance, vestibule and auditorium. There are seven large Sunday school class rooms, connected to the Sunday school room by a series of folding doors, by means of which is created an immense floor

The structure is an imposing edifice of Tudor Gothic design. It is situated on the southeast corner of Pike and Church streets. The main entrance is at the tower approach on these two streets and the cost of the building is $15,000. The trimmings are of Indiana blue limestone punctuated by Gothic windows, all of cut glass, and in keeping with the design.

THE NEW CHURCH
The structure throughout is heated and ventilated by a battery of warm air furnaces located in the basement and it can boast of having the most modern and efficient system of its kind.

First Floor.
The main entrance of the first floor is at the tower corner of Pike and Church streets. The tower forms a spacious vestibule leading to the auditorium and Sunday school room and the entrance to the auditorium is opposite the pulpit and connected by a center aisle leading to the same.
The auditorium seats 400 and there is a large lecturing room adjoining with a seating capacity of 100, bringing the total seating capacity up to 500. These two rooms are connected by a rolling partition occupying the entire width of the lecture room and form one large floor area. Also on this floor are the rector's study and choir's retiring room, each also having an outside entrance.
The interior design and treatment are in Gothic effect and all the appointments are carried out in Gothic in minute detail. Three generous sized cut glass windows are in the auditorium and an elaborate pipe organ is proposed to be installed in the near future.

The seats are furnished by the Cleveland Seating Company, of Cleveland, O., light and fixtures by the Parsons-Souders Company and the decorating by A. H. Haubrick of this city.
Due credit must be accorded the Rev. A. S. Wolfe, pastor of the church, whose complete sympathy and untiring efforts in this worthy piece of work raise it far above the ordinary.
Hombrook and Lafferty, of this city, were the architects of this beautiful building. John Patton, of this city, the contractor, and Thomas Shaw, of this city, the supervisor of construction. The corner stone was laid in August 1914, under the auspices of the Masonic order with Judge Charles W. Lynch, masterful worshipful grand master of the state of West Virginia officiating.
The building committee consisted of Carl Drummond, J. W. Finagan, W. V. Hutchinson, S. S. Kirkpatrick, F. H. Scanes, William Carr, William Westfall, Lloyd Lumbers, A. V. Upson and Ray Compton, whose faithful work deserves the praise of all the members of the congregation.

Captured Murderer is Native of the County

Sketch of His Life Shows Him to Be a Desperado of the James Stripe.
CHARLESTON, May 29.—After a career of crime which began to create notoriety last February, W. Holy Griffith, who traveled also under the name of S. F. Rose and F. S. Rose, charged with the murder of Constable Jeff Goff, in Wirt county, February 28, and General Ord Thompson, chief of police of Gassaway, April 26, was brought to the city jail here this week, and is being held to await the payment of rewards offered by the governor of the state and sheriff of Braxton county. The two rewards amount to $500 while it is said that officials of Harrison county also offered a reward for his capture.
The fugitive was found at East Youngstown, O., after being located there through information from a local bank by Chief McCowan and Captain Will Herold, of the Charleston police force, and Detective Rufus Clendennin brought him to Charleston. Griffith made no resistance when arrested, and is said by the officers to have admitted that he is the man who shot Thompson. He claims he did it in self defense, however, saying that Thompson first shot him through the left hand. He has the mark of a bullet on his hand.
"I supposed Thompson was after me, not for forgery, as it was afterward shown, but for shooting another man," asserted Griffith. "Had I known he wanted me on the forgery charge I should have submitted to arrest, but I didn't want to take any chances on the murder charge, so I began shooting and finally got away."
"I tell you, but the closest I came to being captured was when the posse had me surrounded, and I joined the men who were searching and helped them look for the murderer. Say, I cussed myself to those other fellows then, and it was a long time until I got away, and they didn't have any more chance to capture me than they had of flying."
Griffith a Young Man.
Griffith is only past the age of 25 years. He is married, and his wife and his one child are living at Spencer, Boone county now. He formerly lived in Harrison county, but spent his early days in the upper end of Wirt county and was especially well known on Reedy creek and about Oregon, a little town on the Little Kanawha river about forty miles above Parkersburg.
It was just below Creston that Griffith was being sought by Constable Goff late in February. It is said that when the officer was close upon him in the woods the fugitive turned and fired, inflicting injuries

Kitties Born In Bird Nest

Male Parent Appears to Be in Favor of Home in Tree-Top.
EUGENE, Ore., May 29.—Fifteen feet from the ground, in a tree standing on the premises of a fruit grower here, there is a bird house, but there are no birds in it. Instead, the owner's home cat built a nest up there and in this lofty place her family of kittens first saw the light.
The mother cat and her mate, old Tom, previously had carried excelsior and other soft material up the tree to the nest. When the kittens came the mother took them down to terra firma, fearing they would fall out and be killed, but old Tom carried each one back up the tree. Again the mother took them down and to a small outbuilding near the owner's dwelling, but the alert Thomas seems to be watching for an opportunity to again restore the kittens to their home in the bird house.
Normally, Griffith weighs about 185 pounds, but now his weight is about 150. He has been exposed to all kinds of weather and treatment since he became a fugitive the last time, and for days at a time got nothing to eat except when he could steal eggs, or surreptitiously milk some farmer's cow in the night time.
Often during the heat of the chase Griffith said he could hear his pursuers, and on several occasions he escaped by climbing a tree and watching the posse looking about below him. He said that at no time did he feel that he would be captured, for he knew just about how the disgruntled pursuers would operate. Of ten, he said, he heartily laughed when they sought, but failed to find him while he was within a stone's throw of them.
He was amused, he said, at the antics of the so-called bloodhounds which were on his trail. He said several times he was within a few hundred yards of where the bounds were sniffing, but that they never once offered to follow his trail.
Don't Want a Lynching.
It is the hope of the local officers who have Griffith in charge that he can be taken to Braxton county without fear of his being lynched, and it is said that he will be held here until all the excitement is over there.
The prisoner says he is willing to stand trial and that he will give the officers no further trouble, for he expects to establish self defense in the about the shooting of Goff or about the charges against him in Ritchie county for buying an automobile under false pretense. It is said that his first trouble arose over the fact that he got an auto without giving the owner anything of value in return for it.
Griffith spent some time in Putnam and Mason counties, and was in Charleston after the shooting of Goff, but not until after the Gassaway shooting was it known he was here. The local police found a rifle he left in Putnam county on one of his trips and it arrived here by express. He had two guns when arrested. One

Gets $250 For a Kiss

Asks $10,000 from Dentist but Jury Decides It is Too Much.
NEW YORK, May 29.—A jury before Supreme Court Justice Delaney valued at $250 a kiss which was appraised by the young miss of 17 who received it at $10,000. The plaintiff, Alice Bennett, sued Louis J. Chase, a dentist, on the ground that he employed her in his office on February last and after giving her 50 cents carfare he demanded a kiss. She refused and the dentist threw his arms around her and took one anyhow, so she went home and told her mother. Then she sued.
One of these is a Colt's automatic with which he is said to have shot Thompson. He also had two boxes full of cartridges.
The arrest of Griffith is considered one of the most important in which the Charleston police have been instrumental in years. The police expect to get the rewards and will retain the prisoner until payment is made.

GWENDOLYN LAYS SOME QUEER EGGS

Black Minorca Surely Supplies Her Owner with Cause for Amazement.
BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 29.—F. E. Shurtlein, a bricklayer who keeps a chicken farm near here, just to have some one else laying for him, has an amazing pullet in Gwendolyn, a black Minorca, which lays puzzles and seems to be a natural coop shell worker.
For days, Mr. Shurtlein has been undecided whether to toss of Gwendolyn or knock her head off, but again she has laid a ten-inch mystery. The letter course would seem to be reasonable and pardonable.
For a considerable time Gwendolyn has been kept in a separate coop, to see if it were possible to get her mind on her work. Each day Mr. Shurtlein has hurried home from work to see what had developed—expecting at most anything.
He has found gray eggs, eggs with mosaic work on them, diamond shaped eggs and two cylinder eggs, and he has been waiting patiently to discover one plump lined, with a bit of stationary in it or a note from a lost sailor.
One day this week he discovered a ten-inch egg in Gwendolyn's apartment, and on breaking it, he found instead of a yolk, another perfectly formed egg of smaller diameter, with a heavy shell. By this time Mr. Shurtlein was willing to break and throw, including Gwendolyn's neck, so she broke the new obstruction and found—no, not a fattion, as one might expect, but a regular egg yolk.
Mr. Shurtlein has no idea what is the matter with Gwendolyn, or why she persists in overdoing everything, but he is determined that she shall do more reading of heavy literature or war news. He believes her merely inattentive to her regular business, or terribly absent minded.
