

CAPITALISTS MAY BUY POTTERY PLANT

At Grafton, and It is Inspected by Some of Their Representatives.

GRAFTON, Feb. 12.—An inspection of the pottery plant of the Consolidated Manufacturing Company was made this week by representatives of eastern manufacturing concerns and assurance has been given local people that the plant is desired by the capitalists to manufacture several styles of pottery ware. This plant, which is valued at $200,000, has been idle over a year. The company was declared bankrupt this week, but its schedule has not been filed.

Having secured judgment against the bondsmen of the Grafton Bank, which closed its doors recently, for the full amount of its deposit, the city of Grafton took action this week to collect the amount. The claim was bought in and the city paid the full amount of slightly over $4,000.

After an unusually happy wedded life of more than 58 years, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Guseman, of near Reedsville, Preston county, died this week with twenty-four hours of each other. Both deaths were due to pneumonia. A large number of relatives live in this and adjoining counties.

After the decision of the court her, sustaining the side of the defense in the case of Charles R. Durbin, the Grand Juror official, and thus quashing the indictments against both Durbin and Colonel John T. McGraw, a special grand jury was ordered for next Tuesday to reconsider all the matters brought before the last grand jury, which was held to be legally constituted. Much interest has been shown in this community in the Grafton bank cases and excitement is at a high pitch at present.

Engineer W. G. Wolf, of Grafton, was seriously injured this week on the Cheat River grade of the Baltimore and Ohio lines east of Grafton when he leaped for his life down the mountain when the freight train of which he was engineer, got beyond control and dashed down the steep grade. The train miraculously stayed on the track, though traveling at a frightful speed, and stopped of its own accord at the foot of the grade.

Illegally constituted. Much interest of Belington, died this week. He was a banker and merchant and was prominent in Masonic and Odd Fellow circles. He is survived by the widow and son, Ernest and four brothers and five sisters. He is prominently known through this state.

Walter Evans, of West Main street, a Baltimore and Ohio railroad man was badly hurt this week when he fell across a switch point while at work near Mannington. He was removed to a Fairmont hospital.

Steve England, on being convicted of violating the Yost prohibition law, was given a heavy sentence of six months in jail and a $100 fine. Two other men, charged with similar offense, were tried today.

An additional patrolman, W. V. Miller, has been appointed by the police commissioner. This gives Grafton only four officers and for a time but two were on duty. This gives an idea of the difference between "dry" and "wet" regimes, Grafton having required double this police force when the town had saloons.

Mrs. George W. Lowther has been appointed matron of the Grafton General hospital and will take charge at once. The hospital, which is recently purchased by the city, is being repaired and will be opened about March 1.

The Grafton high school, being constructed as a cost of $100,000 and said to be one of the most modern buildings in the state, is nearing completion and will probably be turned over to the board of education for use about March 15.

After the distribution of mail in postoffice boxes on Sunday had been discontinued for several years as a result of agitation against Sunday work, the Sunday distribution has again been resumed, after instructions to this effect were received from the postmaster general.

Mrs. Rachel Murdock, aged 60, died at her home at Kingwood from burns received when her clothing caught fire from an open fire. The death of Eli McWilliams, aged 75, took place at his home at Webster on Tuesday. Mrs. Elmore Bartlett, aged 65, wife of Miner S. Bartlett, died of pneumonia at her home on Fanny street. Mrs. Sarah Moran, aged 77, died Tuesday at her home in the outskirts of the city. Mrs. Louisiana Hanser, of this county, died at Philippi this week after a brief illness.

The local water supply, which comes from the Tygarts Valley river was pronounced impure this week by the state bacteriologist. Heavy rains during the last month are supposed to have washed much refuse into the stream, which caused pollution of the waters.

Two restaurant keepers were fined this week by the state hotel inspector for keeping unsanitary premises.

MAN THAT NO ONE REMEMBERS HELD FOR OLD MURDER

Prisoner Must Show Name is Not Bush and is High or Stand Trial.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Feb. 12.—A man, about 32, in jail at Cordell, is likely to be tried soon on a charge of murder for the killing of a man fifteen years ago, unless he can prove that he is not Alexander Bush and can establish his identity as William Earl High. But no one hereabouts seems to remember him clearly as either Bush or High.

A number of persons who could recall the murder have thought that the prisoner was Bush, but they were not at all sure about it. Friends who, the man said could identify him as High are no more among the living or have moved away. There was a little sweetheart, he said, who was 14 years old when he went away from this part of the country. She knew both Bush and High, but after looking at the prisoner, she failed to recognize him as either Bush or High.

On the other side the authorities are unable positively to identify the man as Bush. There is in their hands a photograph of Bush at the age of 17, but no one is able to say positively that this is a photograph of the man now being held.

Fifteen years ago, on August 28, a number of farmers of German descent and their families give a picnic near Cordell. The young people were playing games. Bush was one of the two boys turning a jumping rope for the girls. One of the girls was tripped on the rope.

Tony Jenik accused Bush of having tripped her purposely. "Well, who are you going to do about it?" Bush is said to have said. Jenik slapped him in the face.

Bush mounted his horse, rode to the farm where he was employed, a few miles away and came back with a revolver.

When the outing was over Jenik started across a pasture alone. Bush rode after him and fired several shots, but did not hit him. Jenik ran. Bush soon overtook him and placing the revolver against Jenik's body killed him. Next day Jenik was arrested by Sheriff Neal Morrison and put in the Cordell jail.

A few hours after Bush was placed in jail a number of men demanded that the sheriff turn the prisoner over to them. The sheriff refused and stood at the jail door for several hours with a revolver in each hand. The crowd, after making threats, finally went away.

Bush was about 17 years old then and well known in the community. A few days before his case was to be tried he, with other prisoners, escaped on November 8, 1900.

Recognizes a Deputy Sheriff. The murder charge against him was continued from time to time for fifteen years, and although no particular search had been made for him in recent years, there was a vigorous hunt the first two years after his escape.

Last August Barlow Coe, of Cordell, who had been a deputy sheriff under Morrison at the time Bush was held in jail on the murder charge, was in New Mexico on a prospecting tour. He visited the jail at Clovis, N. M., and when walking through the corridor with the jailer one of the prisoners called to him, "Hello Barlow!"

Coe looked at the prisoner and thought he recognized the man as Alexander Bush, though he said his name was High. He was in jail for fighting.

The prisoner, still denying he was Bush, was brought to Cordell. He admitted knowing about the murder of Jenik and explained that he was in jail with Bush at the time of Bush's arrest after the murder.

"Why, I can prove my identity in two hours," he said, "everybody will remember me." But no one remembers him positively as either High or Bush.

"My name is William Earl High," the prisoner declared. "My mother lives at Chickasha and people all over the state know me. I was in Washita county in 1900. There was a robbery at Mountain View. Deputy Sheriff Jesse Morris arrested me and brought me to Cordell, where I was in jail several weeks. It was at that time that Jenik was killed. Bush was a boy about my age and we were in jail together several weeks. "Bush told me he had killed Jenik, and, of course, there was no use for him to deny it, for several persons had seen the murder. I was in jail when the mob came to take him out, and saw Sheriff Morrison stand the mob off. I remember all of it very well.

"I don't recall just how long I was in jail, but I remember that my grandmother and a man named Craig came and got me out. I went back to Mountain View and worked for Craig a while, and while I was there I heard that Bush and a horse thief had broken out of the Cordell jail.

"There was nothing done with the case against me. I went to work later for an oil mill at Chickasha and, after that, I worked in Oklahoma City. Since then I have worked for the Rock Island at Clovis and for the Santa Fe at different places in New Mexico. At every place my name will be found on the pay rolls as William E. High. I have never been known by any other name."

"Of course, his mother and other relatives will say he is High," said a county official. "If he can find some of his old friends, they may be expected to swear to the same thing. He will have to prove it, however, or stand trial for murder."

There is nothing in the records to show that William E. High was ever held in jail at Cordell. Some of the old officials, though, among them Barlow Coe, remember that a boy was arrested at Mountain View for robbery and held in jail a while, but they do not recall his name.

"If this man is Bush it would have been easy for him to take the name of High," said Coe. "It would have been possible for him to live in all the places he says he has lived under the

POLITICIANS HAVE A RED LETTER WEEK

In Ritchie County, Where Judge Robinson is the Favorite for Governor.

ELLENBORO, Feb. 12.—The candidates swooped down on Ritchie county in full force this week, during the opening of the February term of circuit court, and if the voters of this section are not fully alive as to the respective merits of the different candidates for office, it is not the fault of those who aspire to fill the offices. Ex-Governor A. B. White delivered an excellent address on Tuesday afternoon, Judge Woods kindly adjourning court for the occasion, and Hon. H. Roy Waugh, of Buckhannon, also told the voters why he should be sent to Congress. In the evening Attorney General Abraham A. Lilly, candidates for governor, ably assisted by "Uncle Jim" Hughes, of Huntington, told the people why he should be nominated for chief executive of West Virginia, and apparently won some friends by his talk, although Judge Ira E. Robinson, of Taylor county, is considered the favorite in this county. E. G. Rider, of Sutton, was also on the ground looking after his political chances, as well as "Deacon" Houston G. Young, who desires to act as secretary of state for some four years.

It was a red-letter week for politicians, but as yet no casualties have resulted from the onslaught, and the voters are prepared for other attacks of a like nature. Gas for operating purposes has been secured from the Imperial Oil and Gas Produce Company for the test for oil to be drilled on the J. H. Smith farm, three miles south of town, and work will start at once.

Mrs. Cornelia Hickman, wife of James Hickman, a prominent citizen of Pennsboro, died on February 4, and was buried at Duckworth Summit on last Sunday. Services being conducted by her pastor, the Rev. H. S. McCully. Mrs. Hickman was fifty-seven years old, and is survived by her husband and two daughters.

Mrs. Wanda Prunty, of Pennsboro, has returned to Clarksburg, after a brief visit with her parents.

The many friends of Festus H. Martin, one of the pioneer residents of Pennsboro, regret to learn of his critical illness at the home of his daughter, Mrs. S. P. Smith, at West Union.

"General" Boyce, an aged resident of this county, died at his home near Pennsboro, on Thursday. He was eighty-nine years old.

The Rev. Amos Wittercraft is conducting a series of meetings at Cowan W. Va.

Mrs. Henry D. Martin, of New York City, is the guest of his sister-in-law, Mrs. H. B. Morgan, near Highland.

Baltimore and Ohio Agent W. A. Harrison, of West Union, spent last Sunday with friends at Pennsboro.

Edward Cummins, who claims Harrisville as his home town, is in custody in Cincinnati, O., charged with negotiating a fraudulent draft for $100, drawn on the Peoples Bank of Harrisville, and drawn through the Fifth-Third National Bank of Cincinnati.

The big failure of the extensive firm of A. and R. C. Hardman, the well known farmers and stock dealers of near Grantsville, Calhoun county, has been the topic of conversation in local circles for days. The Hardmans were extensive breeders of pure blood Hereford cattle, owning a farm of some 1,200 acres of the best river valley land in Calhoun county. Their liabilities are said to exceed $72,000, and their indebtedness is largely held by banks located in Parkersburg, Spencer, Walton and a couple in Grantsville. A judgment was recently rendered against the firm for some $15,000 in the courts of Wood county, and an attachment made on the personal property of the firm, which is advertised for sale on March 2.

John M. Hamilton, former member of Congress from the old Fourth district, who resides at Grantsville, is reported seriously ill, and has entered a Parkersburg hospital for treatment.

H. Roy Waugh, of Buckhannon, a prominent candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Third district, has been interviewing the voters of Ritchie county this week.

Miss Della Hulderman, of Harrisville, has returned from a pleasant visit at Parkersburg.

Coleman Yock, of Pike, is reported seriously ill at his home, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Allen, of Elkins, who is visiting at the Yock home, is reported convalescent.

Mrs. Effie B. Campbell and two children, of Fairmont, are guests of Mrs. M. D. Queen, at Harrisville.

Charles Estrand, of New York City, the head man of the new refinery proposition at Cairo, is here arranging to start the new gasoline plant in full operation.

Miss Gertrude Scott, who has been visiting her parents at Clarksburg, has returned to Cairo, and taken up her school duties.

Henneghan and Hanlon, the gas and gasoline producers on an extensive scale in Ritchie county, are installing some large engines at their various stations throughout this county, and a familiar sight is a ten horse team hauling one of these ponderous pieces of machinery from

Observation of Road Building in County

OBSERVATIONS... I... (By a Citizen.)

Harrison county, as a great farming section of West Virginia with one of the leading cities in the state, at the center of the county, with millions of dollars of wealth, has done little on its part toward building permanent roads.

The writer wishes to call the attention of the reading public to a few matters which he deems of vital importance and of much interest to all. The roads that have been built by the county court in different parts of the county, known as tarvia roads are, and we believe it will be conceded by all who have attempted to use them, except automobilists, profound failures for the general public's use. For example, the tarvia road built from Broad Oaks to the Fair Grounds, when in good condition will not last through four days of constant use during the county fair. The writer is informed that the county court has spent as high as $1,000 in re-surfacing the road above mentioned just prior to the meeting of the fair association, and that at the close of the fair we find the road entirely worn down to the rock bed. Is this a practicable, sensible road for a community like ours to construct—even with convict labor? We say, positively, No!

Further, the tarvia road is an absolute total failure so far as use to the farmer or the dairyman, who uses horses as their mode of transportation, is concerned. The rebuilding of a part of the old Northwestern turnpike between Salem and Clarksburg and east of the city of Clarksburg about one half way to Bridgeport by means of old McAdam construction is, in our judgment, a success, for the reason there is little heavy traffic upon the road.

There has been but little concrete road built in this county, but, we believe that the roads that have been constructed will prove to be very successful. After a concrete road has been used for many years, and we believe that it will take many years to wear concrete down until it will become thin and worthless, the base beneath it wears too thin, can be used for Ellenboro to the location in the field.

Judge James Newman, the lawyer, has gone to Cleveland, O., to consult a specialist about his health.

Mrs. James Johnson is seriously ill at her home on Main street.

Glenn Meats, of Cairo, who entered the United States training station at Great Lakes, Ill., is spending a few days with his home folk, before going to New York to take advanced instruction in wireless work, which will be his vocation when he finishes his course.

Thomas Fitzpatrick, of Cairo, was a business visitor at Cleveland, O., last week.

A quartet of musicians with a harp and other string and wind instruments, gave a very creditable entertainment at the school house, on Monday evening.
