A Morning Motto.

TOMORROW may never come to us; we do not live in tomorrow; we can not find it in any of our title deeds. The man who owns whole blocks of real estate and great ships on the sea does not own a single minute of tomorrow. Tomorrow! It is a mysterious possibility, not yet born; it lies under the seal of midnight, behind the veil of glittering constellations.—E. H. Chapin.

What is Farm Management?

FARM management as a branch of agricultural science is defined as follows in an address recently delivered in New England by one of the United States Department of Agriculture's specialists:

"The farm management investigator gets his information direct from the farmer. The solution of many of the practical problems of agriculture are found to have already been solved generations ago by large groups of farmers; particularly is it true of farm management and organization. Every farmer is of necessity more or less of an experimenter. The results of thousands of such experimenters gathered by the farm management investigator, classified and interpreted in their bearing on the community's problems and on the individual farm's problems, yield not only many fundamental broadly applicable principles of good farm organization, but also show in more or less detail in just what respect a successfully operated farm differs from one which is a failure or only moderately successful.

"In previous decades the agricultural investigator largely concerned himself with the study of how to accomplish certain ends. How best to feed a pig or cow; how best to raise potatoes or fruit. The farm management investigator is concerned with determining whether to keep cows or pigs; whether to raise fruit or potatoes; and, if an industry be found to be desirable, to what extent it should enter into the farm organization, and with what intensity it should be pursued. All of these problems have in the aggregate been solved by the farmers. Farm management is merely a science for classifying and interpreting the collective experience of the farming people as to what constitutes business efficiency in farming.

"Farm management considers farming as a business. It attempts to analyze the various factors having to do with the success or failure of that business as it is found conducted on the individual farm, and in so far as possible to determine the broad outstanding factors for efficiency which admit of general application for a region."

Great Meeting for Road Men.

EVIDENCE accumulates indicating that the sixth American Good Roads Congress will be the most important and the most largely attended by actual road builders of any similar meeting ever held.

A large number of governors of states and mayors of cities have already appointed delegates or announced their intention to do so than has previously been the case so soon after the issue of invitations. Some of the governors and mayors have expressed their intention of attending the congress in person.

The demands for space in the good roads show have been so great as to require an expansion of the area devoted to the exhibition. The space originally allotted to the machinery section, especially, was found inadequate. New arrangements provide ample space.

The sixth American Good Roads Congress, which includes the thirteenth annual convention of the American Road Builders' Association, and the seventh national good roads show, will be held at Pittsburg, during the week of February 23. The program is confined to subjects pertaining to road and street construction, maintenance and administration. It deals with practical problems exclusively, and on those problems the highest engineering and technical knowledge has been brought to bear.

An especially large number of road and street contractors from many states have communicated their intention to be present at the congress. One of the important papers to be presented and discussed will consider the relations between contractors, engineers and inspectors in securing the best results; and the exhibition will suggest many economical ideas regarding labor saving equipment.

Rarely has every interest and influence in connection with practical road and street work been so thoroughly combined to produce a successful good roads congress as those which have been assembled in the preparation of the Pittsburg meeting.

Some of the features of special interest to cities will be the discussions on "Stone Block Pavements"; "Pavement Openings," and "Street Railway Tracks." For country roads are the subjects of "Roads at Low Cost for Moderate Traffic," "Brick Roads," and "Concrete Roads." A number of subjects will be of interest and value to both street and road builders, while the subject to be selected by the congress for discussion at some designated session is expected materially to add to the interest and value of the congress.

Practice Cottages in Home Economics Teaching

HOUSEKEEPING cottages, in which the students obtain actual practice in household work, are a prominent feature of current progress in home economics, according to a report issued by the federal department of the interior through the bureau of education.

"The practice house is as distinctly a legitimate part of the equipment for teaching home economics as the sewing machine, ironing board, or individual desk with its cooking utensils," declares the report.

"Home economic departments in schools and colleges are not all so fortunate as to have residences in which to instruct in home management and in housewifery. There has been some hesitancy among school officers because of the initial expense of a practice house. But as it is recognized that these houses are quite as necessary as are good laboratories and that the maintenance costs are not excessive, more departments are being thus supplied. These houses offer opportunities for experimental studies in household administration, make practice in home furnishing possible, and afford excellent places for studies in nutrition."

The report shows that home economics is now a recognized course of study in all agricultural colleges to which women are admitted. Thirty-one state universities offer regular courses in home economics, and most of the private and denominational colleges and universities now offer similar instruction. So important has the subject become in state public school systems during the last two or three years that now practically every state normal school has a course in home economics for prospective school teachers.

Summer schools are coming to play an especially important part in home economics teaching. The bureau of education received announcements from 192 schools that were offering courses during the summer of 1914; in 1915 the number reporting had increased to 230, and a still further increase is already assured for 1916.

Twenty-three states report an outline of lessons in home economics for statewide use. A state manual of study for the public elementary schools of Alabama contains an outline for lessons in cooking and suggestions for the teaching of sewing in the grades, with lists of equipment and references for domestic science teachers in the grades. In California each county or city board of education prescribes its own course of study in home economics. An outline for a course of lessons in home economics has been prepared for the common schools of Illinois. This is made use of particularly in the rural schools. The domestic science section of the high school conference of Illinois has recently completed a comprehensive outline for lessons in the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades, thus taking an important step in helping to unify the courses offered in home economics below the high school.

When to Prune Ornamental Plants.

A LITTLE early care given to the pruning of ornamental trees and shrubs during the early part of March will do much to control their growing and flowering habits, and enable the home owner to have well formed plants and well trained hedges of boundary plantings. The pruning of ornamental trees and shrubs is, in fact, one of the first duties that may profitably be performed in the home garden. The amateur, however, should not make a ruthless assault with shears of pruning knife upon everything in his yard. Flowering trees and shrubs that bloom in the spring or early summer should not receive radical pruning at this time, according to the garden specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Of course, if on these plants there are dead or weak branches, these should be taken out, and any crossing limbs that are rubbing and seriously interfering with the growth of the bush should be removed. The tips of the limbs, however, should not be cut off nor should any young wood that does not interfere with the growth of bush to be removed. It must be borne in mind that the blossom buds for this year's flowering were formed last year, and every shoot removed takes off that much of the prospective blossoms.

Trees and shrubs that bear their flowers in midsummer and which were not pruned in the fall may be pruned at this time. Plants of this sort are the rose of Sharon and the shrubby hydrangea. Where the largest possible mass effect is desired, these plants should be pruned but little. If the aim is to secure the largest possible trusses or blossom heads, last year's growth should be pruned back to two or three eyes to a stem. Such severe pruning, however, is not conducive to the most attractive development of shrubs.

Climbing roses should not be pruned at this time except for the removal of surplus or interfering branches. Every bit of wood removed now reduces the amount of bloom the plant will bear during the coming season. Roses used in border planting should be treated in exactly the same way as other shrubs, except that many of these species will be improved by having all their old wood cut away once in every five or six years. This would mean cutting all the old canes off within three or four inches of the ground and forcing the bush to throw up entirely new wood.

Roses used for cut flowers, like the hybrid perpetuals, the hybrid teas, and teas, should be severely pruned. The hybrid perpetuals may be cut as soon as freezing weather is past. Pruning of the hybrid teas and teas, however, should be left until the young growth has started. In both cases the plant should be cut to within six inches or one foot of the ground. Four or six eyes to a stem is about the proper amount of wood to leave.

Public Health Service Hospitals Gurb Trachoma

THE establishing of small trachoma hospitals in localities where this contagious disease of the eyes is prevalent presents the best solution of the trachoma problem, according to the statement contained in the annual report of the surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service. The service now has five trachoma hospitals in the three states of Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia, and so great has been the number of applicants for treatment that a waiting list has been established. In the last fiscal year 12,000 cases of trachoma have been treated, the larger proportion of which were cured, while those in which a cure was not effected have been greatly improved and rendered harmless to their associates. The great majority of these trachoma patients were people who lived in remote sections far removed from medical assistance, and who, but for the hospital care and treatment provided would have remained victims of the disease practically the remainder of their lives.

"When it is considered," the report of the service states, "that thousands of persons suffering with trachoma, a dangerous contagious disease, would otherwise remain untreated, it is realized how far reaching results have been obtained through these trachoma hospitals and the other public health work done in this connection. It would be impossible to estimate with any degree of accuracy the number of people who have been saved from contracting this communicable disease by thus removing these thousands of foci of infection."

In addition to treating persons with the disease the hospitals have been used for educational work. Doctors and nurses have visited the homes of the patients and have explained how to prevent the development and recurrence of the disease. One thousand three hundred and eight such visits were made during the year in Kentucky alone. "It has taken some time," the report continues, "to educate the people afflicted with this disease to the importance of cleanliness and the use of simple hygienic measures in their daily life." That results have been obtained is evidenced by the noticeably better observance of hygienic precautions by those among whom the work has been done.

In addition to the hospital work, surveys were made in sixteen counties in Kentucky, especially among school children. Eight thousand and sixteen people were examined, seven per cent being found to have trachoma. Similar inspections in certain localities of Arizona, Alabama and Florida resulted in finding the disease present in from three to six children out of every hundred. Periodic examination of school children for the disease and the exclusion of the afflicted from the public schools, are two of the recommendations the public health service lays emphasis upon.

One of the special features of the trachoma work was the giving of lectures and clinics before medical societies in various counties where trachoma hospitals could not be established. Patients were operated upon in the presence of physicians and the most modern methods of treatment demonstrated. Throughout, the purpose has been to stimulate local interest in taking up the campaign to eradicate trachoma.

Sketches of Little OLD NEW YORK by M. M. Intyre. Telegram Bureau: Rooms 121-125 Hotel Majestic, West seventy-second Street.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—One of the rarest treats afforded by high life in New York, an experience without which all the phantasmagoria of a winter's night on Broadway would be incomplete, was to see Diamond James Brady give an exhibition tonight shortly after midnight the other evening. Diamond James is built along the graceful lines of the Hippo and to see them both at play is one and the same thing. It was reported that the manager of Murray's had offered Brady 1,000 lovely simoleons to give an exhibition dance. His performance was delayed by a beefsteak dinner of the Undertakers' Association, but he finally made good the rarest treat afforded by high life in New York, an experience without which all the phantasmagoria of a winter's night on Broadway would be incomplete, was to see Diamond James Brady give an exhibition tonight shortly after midnight the other evening.
