Capital Is Now Seeking Southern Oregon as a Good Field for Investment.

The mines at Enterprise, Butte County, are doing very well these days.

There is some prospect of the old Morgan mine, Calaveras County, which has a record of $4,000,000 gold produced, being soon started up again. The proprietors are reported as settling their differences by compromise.

Both copper and quicksilver locations

Yreka, Siskiyou County, now has a custom mill. This should cause more prospecting and development of the numerous quartz ledges in the Humbug range on west side of Yreka, also at Hawkinsville and vicinity on the north, and at Greenborn, Cherry Creek and Deadwood on the south.

At Scott River, Siskiyou County, several new and rich discoveries of gold mines have lately been made, and good times are anticipated this summer.

Never in the history of Southern Oregon was the outlook for the mining industry so promising as now. Capital from outside of the State is coming in considerable quantities to develop mines, prospectors were never so abundant, and the output of the precious metals is steadily increasing. About sixty miners are at work in Steamboat district, Oregon, opening up placer mines, and the prospect is good for turning out considerable gold.

All the mines are not that way, however, as the writer visited one, not far from Weaverville, near Junction, where they had nine Giants, none smaller than 6 inch, two of 9 inch and one of 11 inch each. There are very few mines in the State with such an equipment, and 11-inch muzzles are exceptionally scarce. At the mine referred to a suspension bridge, costing $30,000, carried the pipe across the river.

Superintendent of the Mint John Daggett has gone on a short visit to his mine, the famous Black Bear, in Siskiyou County. His son, Ben Daggett, is now superintendent of the mine.

There is a great mass of literature on the cyanide process now being brought out, but the London Mining Journal says "it is difficult to see that the very exhaustive and complete description in the Bulletin of the California State Mining Bureau from the pen of Dr. Schiedel leaves room just at present for papers by others.
