

Mines and Mining

LATEST INFORMATION CONCERNING THIS IMPORTANT INDUSTRY.

The Gottschalk mine, about one mile west of San Andreas, which has been under bond for a year, is again in the hands of its owner, Judge Gottschalk, who has refused to extend the time on the bond.

There are signs of a mining revival in Del Norte County, but it is mainly confined to copper claims at Low Divide for the present.

Prospectors in Mariposa County continue to file for record large numbers of new mine locations.

The mining camps along the border line of California and Nevada are all looking up just now. At Bodie all the miners are busy, no idle men being found there.

A Riverside county man, F. S. Griffin, has denounced the 211 placer claims at Jurez, Lower California. These placers will probably be the scene of great activity during the coming winter, and the amount of gold extracted there only seems to be limited by the supply of water.

Miners working underground in the Santiam mines, Oregon, are paid $2 a day and expenses, seven days a week.

Camp Floyd, Utah, is more active at present than has been the case for many years.

The new gold camp in the Twisp River country, Okanogan County, Wash., known as Camp Gilbert, is attracting considerable attention.

Some San Francisco street contractors have joined together to prospect for a good deposit of bituminous rock near Oak Park and Corral de Piedra, San Luis Obispo County. Each one represents a different paving company in this city.

The New Idria quicksilver mines are now giving employment to fifty men.

Come district, Nev., ten miles east of Dayton, at one time years ago had a population of 1800, but recently there have been only eighteen men in the whole district.

The Comolodge was located in 1860 and within the next year great numbers of men prospected the region. Rich ore was taken from the mines, but when water level was reached all the claims were given up.

Harshaw, the old silver camp twelve miles southeast of Crittenden, Ariz., is coming to life again. There are reports of rich claims being worked.

The mining company recently organized at Hollister, San Benito County, has acquired the Sycamore mine on Humboldt and Grant, Boston and Colorado, Philadelphia, Arkansas Valley and Union—make statements showing their ore purchases during the first half of this and last year.

By and by the Eastern States will discover that our deposits of asphalt and other street-paving material are superior to the imported, and then large areas in California will become more valuable than at present.

The shaft of the Gwin mine, Calaveras County, is now 220 feet deep.

There are about 150 men at work in the Salmon Mountain and Sixes River district, Or., and most of them are doing well this season.

The Nevada County Miners' Association held its annual meeting last week, but according to the local papers only about thirty of its 1200 members were present. The association president, J. H. Smith, the Miners' Association was not carrying out the ideas for which the county association had been formed and was attending to more side issues than the main one, viz.: that of the resumption of hydraulic mining with its injury to the farmer.

It is proper that those interested in the miners' cause should be reminded that the president and vice-president of the Nevada County Miners' Association are both members of the executive committee of the State association, but neither one has attended any meetings for a year or paid the slightest attention whatever to the proceedings.

How much the railroad company had to do with this discussion it is of course impossible to say, but here are a few facts for consideration. At the last Miners' Convention Nevada County had the largest delegation. It appointed 135 delegates and 130 were given credentials.

It is thought there will be a revival in the mining region around Julian and Banner, San Diego County, owing to the rich ore recently taken out of the Ranchita, a recently discovered mine between these two camps.

The Elvada is another mine lately found which is paying well on the surface. The mines at Julian were found in 1870 and the Elvada shortly after.

The First United Presbyterian Church, at the corner of Golden Gate avenue and Polk street, was crowded yesterday by members of the congregation and other friends of the pastor, Rev. M. M. Gibson.

WATT TELLS HIS STORY.

Testimony of the Co-respondent in the McLean Divorce Case.

The Rev. George Watt, evangelist, who is accused by Anthony McLean of winning away the affections of Mr. McLean's wife, was the principal witness in yesterday's session of the divorce trial.

He did not tell anything that was new, and in the entire day he did not give as much testimony as any one of the detectives gave in half an hour.

Mr. Watt admitted that he had been a visitor at the McLean residence. He admitted that he and Mrs. McLean had been very friendly, but he denied that there had been anything improper in their relations.

He admitted that they had walked together on the City streets at times, but he contradicted the detectives about the frequency of the meetings and the amount of the rambling.

In regard to many of the statements made by the detectives he declared that he could not fix the time in his memory, and so he could give no positive testimony.

He questioned as to the date of the dancing party, and whether it was in the nature of a good-by on both sides, as Mr. Stoddard, who has spent a delightful vacation in his old home on the Pacific Coast, leaves this week for Washington, D. C., and Mr. and Mrs. Austin took their departure on Monday evening for Castle Craig.

Major and Mrs. Gould were invited last Friday to an early dinner at Mrs. A. G. Booth's at which were present Sir Knighs, A. H. Vail, and while they were being entertained there the ladies and Sir Knighs took possession of the home, 904 Van Ness avenue.

At about 9 o'clock a telephone message returned to Mr. and Mrs. Gould to return home. As Mr. and Mrs. Gould were ascending the steps of their home the double doors were thrown open, and the orchestra, stationed in the rear of the hall, struck the waltz music.

The dancing party was given on Thursday evening last by Miss Anita Massey Brown to a number of her young friends at the Baldwin Theater. In the party were Miss Anita Spadina, the violinist of Philadelphia, and the pianist, Miss M. M. Gibson.

GREAT BOXING CONTESTS.

The Olympic Club's Proposed Carnival. Turner and Gallagher Are in Good Condition.

The Olympic Club is now figuring on a great boxing tournament, which may be held in the near future between the representatives of the leading athletic clubs of the country. If the consent of the Chief of Police of this City can be got the big athletic carnival will be held in the Pavilion. Some of the champion boxers of New York's athletic clubs have signified their desire to visit this coast and box against the best fist talent of the Olympic Club.

Unless something very unforeseen happens to either Billy Gallagher, the pride of the Acme Athletic Club of Oakland, or Charley Turner, the colored pugilist of Stockton, the sporting fraternity which has a particular desire to witness contests between boxers will certainly witness a good mill at Colma this evening.

Both men are physically in good condition, and the result of the bout will decide a question of skill and pluck. Neither pugilist can play his defeat to lack of condition. Both men are in good fettle, and Turner can use his "dukes" as cleverly as in the days of yore he should certainly stand a very excellent chance of drawing down the long end of the purse. He fights in the manner of a champion, and he is a stayer, and will take a good punching before he will show any signs of distress. Turner's weak spot is his stomach, which he has always protected by clever side-stepping. Both men are in the prime of their manhood, and Gallagher, although he is a stayer, and will take a good punching before he will show any signs of distress. Turner's weak spot is his stomach, which he has always protected by clever side-stepping. Both men are in the prime of their manhood, and Gallagher, although he is a stayer, and will take a good punching before he will show any signs of distress.
