sacredness. Some of the old landmarks have been erected, yet the former existence of the old made it possible for the new. The mosaic laws only purported to be a means to prepare the people for something in the future. Christ walked forth from the old and established the new, which contained all the virtues of the old, fitted for the new condition in which was contained all the essentials of man's redemption. The first was given to the house of Israel only, while the latter is unto all the world.
 "There were no serious questions raised against the Holy Scriptures until late centuries, but if we are to believe only what we see we will believe but little. Thomas Leslie's argument to the Duke of Leeds, who wished a plain and simple vindication of the Scripture, was that the Scriptures consisted of facts and doctrines, the one depending on the other, so that if the facts are true the doctrines must be, and that matter of fact must be attended by marks of genuineness. These marks are four in number. It is required:
 "First, that the fact be a sensible fact, such as men's outward senses can judge of; second, that it be notorious, performed

THE NEW BOAT-WOMAN.
 A Ladies' Annex Is Now Attached to the Pioneer Rowing Club.
 BLUE SWEATERS AND BLOOMERS
 Ambition of the Long Bridge Grace Darlings to Beat Their Brothers at the Oar.
 The old boatmen, oarsmen and waterfront men generally on Long Bridge yesterday were startled by seeing a jaunty four-oared barge manned, or rather womaned, by a quartet of young ladies, pull out from the Pioneer clubhouse and go slipping away over the choppy seas. They drew a long, sweeping stroke, feathered high and moved on the sliding seats in perfect time. The girl at the tiller, who trailed a straight wake behind the rudder and proved herself to be fully able to govern the stroke of her crew.
 The fair oarswomen are: Miss Hattie Collopy, bow; Miss Rose Collopy, forward; Miss May Kenny, after; Miss Alice Brennan, stroke and captain; and Miss Lillie Druyer, coxswain. The crew was organized by Miss Alice Brennan, the well-known champion lady Whitehall rower of the coast. She and Miss Kenny are the nieces of James Brennan, of the Pioneer Club, who is the instructor of the ladies' annex. The Misses Collopy are sisters of George and Richard Collopy, members of the Pioneer racing crew.
 These Grace Darlings of Long Bridge have adopted a pretty uniform, composed of dark blue sweater, ornamented with the letter "P" on the breast, the neatest little blue bicycle caps imaginable and blue bloomers that are a vivid dream of beauty and a joy forever. Blue leggings and soft racing shoes complete this natty sailor costume.
 The barge pulled well out in the bay, and after a sharp spin toward the Union Iron Works returned to the boat-house, coming alongside of the float in the most graceful style.
 "I don't think we yet possess the ambition," said Miss Alice Brennan, after stopping ashore, "to match any laurels from our brother-rowers, but there is no telling. The new woman will get to the front even in her boat." And the young lady, her cheeks aglow with the exercise, looked a determination to get her four-oared barge just into that position.
 "You see we girls have to work all week and have no time to practice except Sundays. We are all fairly expert on the wheel, but I believe the boat is better exercised than the bicycle. The oar gives play to all the muscles of the body, while a wheel does not, notwithstanding the loud assertions of the cyclist man. The girls all like the exercise."
 The young ladies have been made honorary members of the Pioneer Boat Club, and their presence in the boat-house is calculated to boom rowing in that organization. Steps have been taken to form a ladies' annex in the other clubs, and

There will also be instrumental music by a mandolin and guitar club composed of twenty young ladies. Santa Claus himself will appear and distribute candies and presents to the children. After the close of the play the dancing will be enjoyed by the older members.

THE POOL-SELLING EVIL.
 Chief Crowley Gives His Reasons Why No Arrests Are Made.
 He Is Not Clothed With Arbitrary Powers and Cannot Go Beyond the Law.
 Chief Crowley was indisposed yesterday to enter into a discussion on the question of the closing of the poolrooms.
 "No man can charge me," said the Chief, "with at any time failing to do my duty when I saw my way clear to act, and I am not going to do otherwise in regard to the poolrooms. I am not clothed with arbitrary power, and therefore cannot go beyond the law."
 Judge Wallace's decision has rendered any efforts on my part to suppress the poolrooms ineffectual. At that time to the best of my recollection we had about eighty cases in the Police Court, and if the decision had not gone against us the poolroom business would have been at an end. Since then they have all been selling pools on commission, which keeps them within the law according to the Wallace decision.
 "The same difficulty we are experiencing here bothered the police authorities in New York till a special act had to be passed whereby the pool-sellers were effectually disposed of."
 "To my mind, the best way to crush out this evil thoroughly is to pass a law making bookmaking in any shape or form illegal. That might seem too drastic a measure, but it would effect a radical cure."
 "I am not aware that any of the pool-sellers are violating the law, but if I find otherwise I will make no time in arresting them. That is all I can say."

DEFENDS THE BIBLE.
 Elder Tanner of the Church of Latter Day Saints Speaks on Relationship of the Testaments.
 "The Relationship of the Old and New Testaments" was the subject of Elder Henry S. Tanner's discourse at Pythian Castle last evening. "While much controversy has arisen as to the genuineness of the Bible," said he, "yet there is a thread of relationship permeating the various books of which it is composed, binding them together with no small degree of growth in the popularity of the already popular Ingleside track. Mr. Hobart is recognized as a judge of everything pertaining to good horses. His connection with the new race track as a director has, therefore, much interest to horsemen.

 "I am not yet a director of the Pacific Coast Jockey Club," he said last night, "but I soon will be. They have a very beautifully situated track with many advantages. You may be sure that the track will grow greatly in popularity."
 "Next year it will not seem so far away as it does now. At present many people do not know its exact location. They go out and the roads being new and in some places bad, it seems a long way off."
 "This feeling will wear away. The roads will be properly repaired and we will have a track that all San Francisco will be proud of and will go to."
 Mr. Hobart said that he was much interested in the track and its success. He entered a string of running horses at the beginning of the meeting and they have done notable work up to date. The idea of his assumption of a share of the management of the club has only been recent. It was suggested that it would be advisable for him to be a director, and as the plan possessed many desirable features he purchased the necessary amount of stock.
 Regarding the track itself, Mr. Hobart spoke with the greatest admiration. Its range, he said, marked its value but little. This was a very slight matter, although next year there would undoubtedly be some improvement.
 "I am not going to put any new stock on the track just at present," he said, "in view of his plans. I have a string of five running horses out there now. They will be kept at work. It is very likely that I will bring out some youngsters next year, though."
 Ed Corrigan, who is one of the directors, said on the subject last night: "I am very much pleased that Hobart is coming into the board and will take an active interest in racing. We want just such men as he. He is honest and has a reputation to maintain that will be a guarantee that he will have nothing to do with anything that is not run as it should be. The presence of just such men as Mr. Hobart in the board will do more than anything else to maintain the tone of racing at Ingleside track. Of course, every one will know that he is interested simply for the sake of true sport."
 If Mr. Hobart goes into racing with as much energy and judgment as he did in the late horse show he will soon be bringing his colors first under the wire in many races. In the horse show he won one championship ribbon, thirty-one blue ribbons, fifteen red, eighteen white and five yellow. He has been frequently commended for his judgment and knowledge about horses and it is well known that he does not leave the choosing of his horses to others.
 It is expected that ere long he will have a long string. At present he has about thirty-five thoroughbreds, mostly yearlings, down at his San Mateo place. Of the horses he has at the Ingleside track Bright Phoebus is best known. He won the rich Realization stakes, worth about $35,000, at Saepehead Bay this season.
 He is by Falsetto out of imported Cinderella, and so is half-brother to the two-year-old Hastings sold lately by Gideon for $37,000. Then there is Ferrier, who has caused racing people to stop and think that Hobart knows something about horses.
 He paid $4000 for Ferrier when they all thought he had the worst of the bargain, but the horse has already won twenty-five races for him. Then he owns Ali Baba, Jo Ripley, Romulus and Little Mid, all good horses.
 At the Haggan sale in New York he was a liberal purchaser of yearlings, and bought four at the Palo Alto sale and five at the Charles Kerr sale. Altogether he has purchased a number of youngsters and a general belief is that he will with his millions and energy and good judgment of horses soon be carrying off stakes about as he did blue ribbons at the horse show with a string of speedy thoroughbreds that will not be equaled in the country.
 Mr. Hobart's trainer is H. H. Hunn and his jockey George Millroy.

ALONG THE WATER FRONT.
 Chinese Actors and Laborers From Atlanta Bound for Home.
 The Schooner American Girl Lost Her Bowsprit While Going Over the Bar.
 The water front was a cheerless locality yesterday with the cold, deserted docks facing a wind-ruffled bay. The boatmen looked at their Whitehalls hanging on the davits and talked with the apple man—that small fruit-dealer with his few pyramids of merchandise on a board or spread out temptingly along a wharf-stringer. The only stir seen and heard along the entire bayline was a football game between Companies A and C of the League of the Cross Cadets in a vacant lot near Folsom street wharf. It was full of snap from kick-off to touchdown and the youngsters rolled in the water-front dirt quite commendably. They were not in uniform or football vest, but their Sunday apparel stood the scrimmage very well barring considerable mud which the garments had accumulated.
 The schooner American Girl was towed to sea yesterday morning and during her passage over the bar lost her bowsprit in a collision with the schooner Laura May, also outward bound. The disabled vessel returned to port for repairs.
 About sixty Chinese actors and employees from the Atlanta Exposition entered the door of our hearing. We must write him into every room of our hearth's home or he will not come. He promises his personal presence; he will not send the highest angel but come himself. His aim is personal undivided and he will bring his father with him. He shall be our friend and we are to be his. He will not come in unless invited. Let us then constrain him to come in, that our hearts may truly have their Christmas gift.

 that any doctrine or fact is sufficiently substantiated if it conforms to these four requirements. These tests applied to the Bible prove beyond a reasonable doubt that it is a record of the dealings of God with his people.
 "The records, being true, stand hand in hand, showing the dealings of God with his people under various circumstances, and are profitable unto us for doctrine and edification, to prepare us to live by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God."
CHRIST IN THE HEART.
 Rev. O. C. Miller's Sermon in Church of the Holy Spirit.
 The services of the Church of the Holy Spirit in Franklin Hall, Fillmore street, yesterday were of special interest. The pastor, Rev. O. C. Miller, preached an advent sermon in the morning entitled, "Christ, the Star out of Jacob."
 In the evening his text was from Revelations iii:20, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door I will come in to him and sup with him and he with me."
 The preacher said:
 "This text gives us the right Christmas thought. Seeking entrance at the door of the heart. Let us notice the person, the purpose and the promise. Who is it at the door? It is the son of man and the son of God. He is rich, but he became poor for our sakes. He humbled himself to take his stand at the door of our hearts. He is persistent though oft rejected. He knocks again and again, yet any knock may be his last. As the good shepherd his way of approach is at the door, and he comes to offer friendship on a human level, and to take us just as we are, with no other plea than that his blood was shed for our cleansing.
 He knocks by providence, by conscience, by his word and spirit. Hear his appeal. He calls attention saying, "Behold, that we may not fail to hear him."
 His purpose is our salvation; we shall know little of Christmas until we have heard him. He comes to lift us out of the basement story of our being into the upper rooms and light up the best of our hearts. He is persistent. He comes on perfectly reasonable conditions. If any man will hear, he will come in and sup with him. Nor does he leave the door without making himself heard. We must invite him into every room of our hearth's home or he will not come. He promises his personal presence; he will not send the highest angel but come himself. His aim is personal undivided and he will bring his father with him. He shall be our friend and we are to be his. He will not come in unless invited. Let us then constrain him to come in, that our hearts may truly have their Christmas gift.

 Fell and Broke an Ankle.
 J. R. Riley, a porter, living at 1914 Fourth street, was taken to the Receiving Hospital last evening for treatment for a broken ankle and a severe laceration of the scalp. Riley was falling while walking along Stevenson street a man struck him on the head with a club, which produced the injury to his head, and he fell on his back, fracturing his ankle and his right hand broke the bone.

THAT "LACED GODDESS."
 An Apologist Appears for the Criticized "California Venus."
 HOT SHOT FOR MR. MATHEWS.
 Frona Eunice Wait Imputes Jealousy as the Cause of His Alleged Lack of Appreciation.
 The following communication received yesterday by THE CALL is self-explanatory:
 SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15, 1895.
 To the Editor of the CALL:—Permit me to refer to an article in today's issue of your paper in reference to the California Venus now on exhibition in this city. The article under the title of "A Laced Goddess," and was signed by Arthur F. Mathews, who painted the picture which was rejected by the International Gallery of Fine Arts at the Columbian Exposition, and which is at present on exhibition in the back rooms on the upper floor of the Hopkins building. The article generally conceded that Mr. Mathews' position as teacher and sometimes director on the board of management of the museum was not to be criticized, but generally condemned as being far from a commendable one, or either. The ethnologist, of whom Mr. Mathews is so fond of prating, will have no trouble in finding the statistics which the artist says were pointed out to him in Paris, and also a wooden lameness in the women which gives the picture about as much animation and life as an obsolete map-plate.
 I knew without Mr. Mathews saying so that artists look for fitness and proportion as well as an ethnologist, so I cannot imagine what he is having such a fit over. No great work of art ever quarreled with truth. And in art and science and in the world of men, the artist demands intelligence and spirituality as an integral part of feminine loveliness. The ancients did not include these, because their women were of the type of the capacity of child-bearing, and a very large part of the world-to-day denies that a woman has a soul. Mr. Mathews did not include these, because their women were of the type of the capacity of child-bearing, and a very large part of the world-to-day denies that a woman has a soul. Mr. Mathews did not include these, because their women were of the type of the capacity of child-bearing, and a very large part of the world-to-day denies that a woman has a soul. Mr. Mathews did not include these, because their women were of the type of the capacity of child-bearing, and a very large part of the world-to-day denies that a woman has a soul.
 Releasing woman from the seclusion of the home, and placing her in the public view, complete subjection to an honored place in the world's affairs, has done something for woman as a race, and there is no reason why an artist should not try to depict it. The painters of female figures have already done so, but Mr. Schmid seems to be the first to do so in this country.
 As to Mr. Mathews' speech over the fact that Mr. Schmid's work has been taken up by a syndicate in New York, London and Paris, that outburst is entirely characteristic of the man. Jealousy is the miserablest of emotions. It is a sign of a low mind, and it is a sign of a low mind. It is a sign of a low mind, and it is a sign of a low mind. It is a sign of a low mind, and it is a sign of a low mind.
 I humbly apologize to him for referring to the many speculations among the men as to what the Venus of Milo was intended to represent—whether she is a goddess, a woman, a separate figure or one of a group. Whether she was always a statue or otherwise is another question which I supposed Mr. Mathews knew had been argued warmly for and against. Neither do I blame him for moving the statue to the first embodiment of Love in a female figure is to be found in the Zodiac, where the sign Virgo is marked by the Cosmic Virgin. She never personated sensuality until public worship degraded primitive ideals. The senses at all times represent the lowest phase of love, and whoever creates a representation of the highest ideal he will always be entitled to consideration for having taken the first step toward the higher. Mr. Mathews is solicitous, will be apt to judge the work accordingly and also appreciate Mr. Mathews' attack upon me, I am not in the least sorry for anything I have said or done in helping Mr. Schmid carry out his scheme. I have lived up to my principles. Mr. Mathews' habit of fault-finding is too well known to seriously harm anybody. If he should speak a word of approval of any one else's work the surprise might prove fatal in more than one quarter. Don't worry, Mr. Mathews. None of your work will ever be taken up by a syndicate—unless they conduct an auction-house.
