ALONG THE WATER FRONT

Harry Howe Started to Become a Doctor, but Has Become a Sailor.

NO ONE WOULD HELP HIM OUT

Sad Fate of a Soldier Who Told a Lie About a Pair of Military Blankets.

The British ships Falls of Afton and Dundonald both got in from Swansea yesterday with coal. The Falls of Afton took a week longer to make the voyage than the Dundonald, and both were off Staten Island about the same time. Both encountered heavy gales, in which hail, sleet and snow formed disagreeable elements. On October 9 last the Falls of Afton was in the vicinity of two large icebergs, and five days later an immense field of ice was encountered. About the same time the Dundonald had an encounter with three icebergs, which the captain describes as being about 300 feet high and 100 yards wide. The ship had to be put about in order to get away from her dangerous neighbors.

J. H. Tracey, who was dismissed from his position as watchman at the Harbor Commissioners' storehouse by President Colton, lays all his trouble at the door of Superintendent Haste. He hunted the rooms of the commission yesterday, and to all who would listen to him he detailed the charges he was going to bring against the Superintendent. Tracey, while in charge of the storehouse, found it had been broken open and that the thief was inside. Instead of capturing him he went and aroused the crew of the fireboat. By the time they got to the storehouse the thief was gone. President Colton at once dismissed the watchman.

The steamer Sonoma, now running in the place of the McDowell between the Alcatraz posts, took a broken-hearted man to Alcatraz yesterday. After nearly twenty years of service he has been condemned to imprisonment on the rock for six months and then to be dishonorably discharged from the army. In four more weeks the steamer will be replaced by the Albatross, and the man who was discharged will be sent to the island with the new vessel. He was a friend of Bartholomew, the man who robbed the soldiers and made his escape after being placed under arrest. Bartholomew stole a pair of blankets and gave them to King as payment for a debt. The stolen blankets were found on King's bed, and he was arrested. Had he then confessed how they came into his possession he might have got off lightly. He persisted, however, in denying Bartholomew's acquaintance, and swore that the blankets were his own. The result is that he is now a dishonored and broken soldier with a six-months' sentence to serve.

The manager of steamers sailed yesterday. The City of Puebla left for Puget Sound, the Progressist for Departure Bay, the Zealandia for Panama and the City of Peking for China. The Progressist has about 1000 passengers and 1000 tons of extra ballast was put aboard. It is now expected that she will not thrash into the sea as she did before when going up the coast in ballast. The Zealandia went out with a full cargo of passengers and cargo as she passed the Spreckels dock all the tug sailed later. The City of Peking took twenty-five cabin and 125 Chinese passengers. Among the latter were thirty-four actors from the Midwinter Fair and Atlanta Exposition. Another passenger was Yang Kay, who for twenty years was interpreter for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. He has accumulated some money and is going to spend the last of his days among his own people. Before leaving the clerks in the company's office presented him with a handsome testimonial.

The Aztec also sailed last night for Central America, and was crowded with freight, among which were two surfboats, twelve head of cattle and twenty-four horses for San Jose de Guatemala.

The steamer Carzina is now on her way to San Francisco from Pensacola, to take the coal trade. The demand for Bever Hill coal has grown to such an extent that the Homer cannot supply the demand, so the agents had to charter another vessel. The Carzina was the most suitable, so she was secured.

Captain Howard of the Oceanic Steamship Company gave a boy a job on the steamer Alameda yesterday, just on account of his wonderful perseverance. Young Harry Howe thought he would like to be a doctor and accordingly went to the State University to study. He calculated upon earning a living by running errands and doing odd jobs for the good people of Berkeley. The largest sum he earned was 25 cents, for moving two tons of coal into a cellar. He gave that up in despair and Captain Howard helped him to get to Los Angeles. There young Howe got work by his perseverance and during and lost his job. He wrote to his friend again and the captain told him to come to San Francisco and he would give him work on the Monowah. The Monowah was called on the 22nd inst., but Howe did not put in an appearance. Yesterday he turned up, footsore and weary, having tramped all but fifty miles of the road between Los Angeles and San Francisco. Howe will probably be shipped as one of the crew on the Alameda in a few days.

The captain of the ship Dashing Wave reported that 90 miles southwest of Cape Platero he passed a quantity of lumber. He thinks it was probably the deck load of some vessel.

Daniel O'Connell, the well-known writer and newspaperman, has been appointed inspector of woodwork on the water front by the Harbor Commissioners.

The tower designed by Chief Engineer Howard Holmes to light the way of the ferry steamers into their slips, has been completed. It is a very handsome affair, and will be a great benefit to the shipping.

There will probably be 3000 candle power each, which take the place of the old 200 candle power affairs.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

Annual Meeting of Graduates of the University of California—Election of Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Alumni Association of the University of California last night at the Mark Hopkins Institute of Art there was an attendance of about fifty members, including a fair proportion of co-eds.

When the amendment to the constitution providing for the admission as members of the association of graduates of the affiliated colleges came up it was laid over for final action until the next annual meeting.

In the report the president announced that the Le Conte fellowship fund of $10,000 was almost completed. This is the fund the interest of which $50,000 is awarded each year by the Alumni Association for a fellowship in the University of California. Appropriate allusion was made to the death during the year of three members of the association—Lieutenant-Governor Reeder, Regent George Ainsworth and E. P. Pomeroy. The president referred with pride to the fact that the attendance of students at Berkeley was 1400, that the whole number of students enrolled on the books of the university was about 2000, and that the graduates numbered 1000. He also stated that fifty-two members had died since the establishment of the university in 1865.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, A. F. Morrison; first vice-president, W. C. Gregory; second vice-president, Miss Catherine Felton; secretary, L. T. Henderson; treasurer, J. K. Moffitt; trustee of the Alumni Association, Frank Dunn; trustee of the Le Conte fellowship fund, W. R. Davis.

It was announced that the banquet to J. B. Reinstein, the newly appointed regent of the university, was to take place at the Palace Hotel on Saturday, December 28. A large gathering is expected, as already a great many acceptances have been received. Governor Budd has promised to be present, and it will be the attendance of a considerable number of the oldest alumni.

An immense Sale of Seats.

At the Columbia Theater yesterday morning there was a line nearly a block in length composed entirely of members of the Pacific Coast Commercial Travelers' Association, who have bought out the house for Friday evening next, when Fanny Rice and company will appear in "Nancy at the French Ball." It is the annual benefit of this organization, and the proceeds are to be devoted to charitable purposes.

PRESS CLUB CHRISTMAS.

Writers and Their Friends Enjoy Themselves in Merry Fashion.

They Fill the Clubrooms and Incidentally Themselves With High Jinks, Etc.

It was Christmas at the Press Club last evening, and the club's principal commodity—hospitality—was free as air to all the guests who thronged its rooms.

The Christmas jinks were on, and from early in the evening—that is early for the Press Club—the free and easy style of entertainment characteristic of that organization was running and the stage in the alcove was kept filled with the best talent of bohemia.

Decorations were not spared. On the walls, over the fireplace, around the sides of the alcove where stood the stage, and around the frames of the big pictures which adorn the walls the holiday green was twined and scattered. Christmas and red berries lurked in every niche and corner of the main room.

The stage itself was a bower of verdure, and Arthur Barendt, the sire, sat in state upon it, a blue pencil in his hand, and showing an expanse of shirt front that the less favored mortals in the rows of seats before him would have envied.

In the inner rooms, in the sacred precincts of the pedro apartments, the candles were for once put aside and in their place was sparkling beer for the multitude. Nor did newspaper hospitality stop at the faucet. Close at hand were plates of sandwiches, with the contents heaped high, besides other relishes to enliven the way between the table and the keg.

The program was a merry one, like that which used to be given at the old late watches in the Pine-street rooms—more like them than any of the later affairs at the club—and the men who participated were all members of the club.

C. M. Cox, president of the club, opened the proceedings. He welcomed the guests and gave them the club's holiday greeting. He introduced Barendt, the sire, and Barendt lost no time in starting the entertainment with a thoroughly repartee.

Music, recitations, witticisms, local hits and sarcasms, words from well-known people and mirth-provoking anecdotes kept the hearer at the highest pitch until the blue pencil dropped for the last time.

Homer Henly, Frank Coffin, Sam Tucker and Jack Raffael sang their best.

Judge Hunt, with his dry humor and his pointed wit, left the stage long before the audience was weary of listening.

Signmund Beel and his violin—the one which so often charms even the pedro-players from their cards—roused the audience to a pitch of enthusiasm which left hand-clapping entirely inadequate and vented itself in shouts of "bravo."

There were four quartets on hand, the Balfian, the Californian, the Plymouth and the club's own Press Club Quartet, and after each had sung its merriest, the four joined together in chorus.

Greer Harrison, Solly Walter, W. D. Armes and C. J. Stilwell appeared and talked, Fred Gutterton turned up his collar and played his sweetest, and Daniel Sully, Robert Downing, Eugene Bowles and Ferris Hartman did what they could—and that was not little—to liven the programme.

It was not until after 12—long after 12—that the last man in the program stepped down, and the blue pencil rapped the jinks adjourned. But it was still rapped for the Press Club.

DU MAURIER'S ART.

A Famous Label Designed by Him to Oblige a Friend.

Probably not fifty people know that the drawing by Mr. Du Maurier which has been the most widely circulated is the only one that does not bear his signature. It is one that millions of people have seen and are still seeing every day without ever suspecting whose the drawing is, and it has been seen by millions of people who never even heard of Mr. Du Maurier's name. The drawing in question is the picture of

GOLF TO BE INTRODUCED.

Society Has Concluded to Go in for the Old Scotch Game.

THE COURSE IS CONSTRUCTED.

A Sport That is Not Indulged in by Dudes Because It Requires Violent Exercise.

The great and good Scotch game of golf, which Mr. Balfour, M. P., has found so many humors to write about, is soon to be one of society's fads in San Francisco. Already the grounds have been prepared in a crude way on a tract of land west of the Presidio, and William Robertson of Burlingame, who is to be the instructor, will be ready with a perfect golf link by the middle of January.

The ground in its present condition is good enough for practice games and is frequently visited by devotees of the sport. "Golf as she is played" is not altogether a dude's game, and good healthy men will be found to be the best players. It requires energy and skill, two elements that

BALDWIN'S CONDITION.

The Code Commissioner Still Seriously Ill—The Extent of Injury to His Brain Yet Unknown.

Code Commissioner Baldwin, who was stricken with paralysis on Friday, is still in a dangerous condition at the Palace Hotel. Dr. Whitney, who is in attendance, stated yesterday that physically his condition was somewhat improved, but that he had not recovered his mental balance. There was a little rise in the temperature, which was the cause of some anxiety owing to the danger of disturbance to the brain.

He was able to walk yesterday, but could not talk nor comprehend what was going on. Dr. Whitney yesterday called in consultation two other physicians, and there will be held another consultation this morning. The physicians state that the patient is in such condition that they do not know what has taken place in the brain. There may have been a rupture of blood vessels, but how serious they are unable as yet to determine.

The Christmas Monitor.

The Christmas Monitor, forty pages, appeared yesterday. It is a very handsome number. There are many engravings, exquisite alike in conception and construction. The frontispiece

SAUSALITO STIRRED UP.

Action of the Trustees in the Matter of Road-Widening Denounced.

RUMORS OF IMPEACHMENT.

Property-Holders Object to Having Their Homes Sliced—The Situation.

There is serious trouble brewing in the generally peaceful burg of Sausalito, in Marin County, on account of the action of the Board of Town Trustees in ordering the widening of the roads, according to the original survey of the town. People living in the aristocratic part of Sausalito, which is the district most affected by the order of the board, have raised a great row and lawsuits are threatened on every side.

Some have even been so rash as to suggest the impeachment of the board of trustees, which is composed of Messrs. John H. Dickinson (president), T. H. Hughes, O. Miller, James W. Sperry and H. J. Crumpton.

Years ago when the town was laid out and the original surveys made, stakes were driven into the ground outlining the property set apart for the roads.

It was not long before the stakes became loose and were broken off and lost, and when people fenced in their property, they only left thirty-foot roads, where the original surveys called for sixty feet. On one of the roads which the Town Trustees ordered widened, are situated the homes of Charles L. Barrett, Commodore Henry Harrison, Charles Mason, A. F. Marvin, D. Childs Macdonald, Dr. H. J. Crumpton and a number of other prominent men of Sausalito and San Francisco. It is from these that the principal amount of complaint is heard, for the widening of the road to its original width would leave A. F. Marvin's house half on his own property and half on the road.

Charles L. Barrett, the secretary of the San Francisco Gas Company, would be compelled to cut off three feet from the rear of his house, and as he has just gone to considerable expense in repairing the effects of a landslide which occurred on his property he does not feel like shaving off the three feet of his home which is on the roadway.

Mrs. Charles Mason will lose a magnificent tennis court if the road is widened to sixty feet, and she is decidedly opposed to the scheme.

Dr. Crumpton would lose his back fence, but says he does not mind that as much as the losing of his property.

James Bell, having recently erected a house on his property, is decidedly against widening the road, as the line brings his house over half way on the highway.

Mr. Shepard's stone wall, erected at considerable expense, would have to be sacrificed, and he does not take kindly to the scheme.

Dr. D. Childs Macdonald's barn would occupy a central position on the street if the road were widened, and Captain Harrison would be without a stone wall.

Everything in Sausalito had been going along nicely for years, until some two months ago the Board of Town Trustees met and decided to extend the width of the roads.

Ernest McCullough, the town engineer, commenced a systematic reutilizing of the roads. It was then found that nearly every fence and many houses in the bou-

FULFILLED THEIR CONTRACT.

Judge Bahrs Has Dismissed the Charges Against Murray and Ready.

Judge Bahrs has dismissed the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses which was brought against the employment firm of Murray and Ready.

The case came before him on an appeal from the decision of Judge Campbell, who dismissed the charges against Murray, but fined Ready $100. Judge Bahrs has dismissed this fine.

About two months ago a man named Coop applied to Murray and Ready for sixty men to work in the Ben Lomond vineyards in Santa Cruz County. He sent the men down and they had two weeks' work. When they returned one of them, a man named Todd, had the members of the firm arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses, claiming that they had been promised two months' work.

Judge Campbell's decision was appealed from and Judge Bahrs has ruled that there was no contract between the parties as to length of service. The contract was to provide work, and this was done. The charge was therefore dismissed.

His Spine Fractured.

Antonio Navi, a scavenger living at 431 Union street, met with a serious accident yesterday morning. He was getting out of the elevator in the Donohoe building with a barrel of rubbish, when it started and he was jammed in the doorway. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where it was found that his spine was fractured.

KINDERGARTEN FESTIVALS.

Pretty Songs and Exercises by Children.

Christmas Joy Brought to the Hearts of Little Ones by Benevolent Ladies.

There were no happier little people yesterday than the 300 little tots of the Pioneer Kindergarten who went through their pretty exercises and merry songs at Golden Gate Hall for the amusement of about an equal number of grown folk. It was not the songs and the exercises, however, which made them so happy, because these were an old story to them, but it was the sight which met their eyes every time they gazed toward the stage, which was very frequently. Here there were two large Christmas trees decked out in holiday glory, and by each tree, like a bunch of flaming tokens, was a cluster of 150 toy balloons.

The Pioneer Kindergarten is composed of three branches. The largest of these is the Silver Star Kindergarten, located at Sansome and Pacific streets. The children in this school are almost all of foreign parentage. For this reason the work of Miss Lizzie Wainwright, who is the main instructor, has been largely directed toward instilling patriotism in the children. The opening number of the program was a song, "Trump, Trump, Trump," by the children of this school, each child waving an American flag.

The other schools are the Adler, situated at Second and Folsom streets, and presided over by Miss Manning, and the Sutor Hall, at 237 Brannan, of which Miss M. F. Monteleone, George Roe, Atkinson, Frederick George, M. S. Grinbaum, L. Dunbar, E. S. Dupue, George Moore, D. W. Winterburn, A. S. Moore, Gorham, Helen Hecht, William Crocker, Clark Crocker, A. Grimm and A. M. Vail, directors of the society.

At Union-square Hall there was a similar scene of juvenile animation. Here the children were chiefly interested in the distribution of gifts. Besides the balloons, each child received a pair of stockings, donated by Mrs. Bixler, Mrs. Grinbaum and Miss Atkinson; a handkerchief, donated by Mrs. Goldstein, and candy. Besides this each boy received a trumpet and each girl a doll, which, with fruit and nuts, were the results of the generosity of Mrs. David Bixler, president of the Pioneer Kindergarten Society, and Mesdames M. H. Hoch, L. F. Monteleone, George Roe, Atkinson, Frederick George, M. S. Grinbaum, L. Dunbar, E. S. Dupue, George Moore, D. W. Winterburn, A. S. Moore, Gorham, Helen Hecht, William Crocker, Clark Crocker, A. Grimm and A. M. Vail, directors of the society.
