

So BARRING-GOULD'S new novel, "The Broom-Squire," is a sad, realistic story of peasant life in the southern part of England.

It holds interest to the end, and it is not one of the stories of which the outcome is readily predicted from a perusal of a few opening chapters.

It is the story of a young man who possesses a small estate in the broom region between London and Portsmouth, and from the only good wood people ever saw in the country.

The heroine of the story, afterward known to the world as the Broom-Squire's wife, was a girl, found as an infant near the body of her murdered father by Jonas Kirk and Iver Verstage, son of a village innkeeper.

THE WRONG MAN. In Dorothea Gerard's new book, just issued in the Town and Country Library, it is shown how it is the fate of some men never to be in the right place.

The circumstances under which Groland acts the part of a friend to Kuni, the acrobat, are peculiar. She is in a crowd of people who are watching a wedding procession, and is impressed with the noble bearing of the bridegroom, Groland.

THE SNOWS OF YESTER YEAR. This story, by Wilbertine Teters, is built upon ideas that border on the theosophical. It is a peculiar story and life goes through it like the hue of death on his cheeks.

of interpretative reading. "Such education," says Mr. Corson, "is demanded for responding to and assimilating the information life on any product of literary genius without it, mere vocal training ingenuities little or nothing. By the spiritual I mean man's essential, absolute being, and I include in the term the emotional, the susceptible or impressive, the sympathetic, the instinctive, the intuitive, in short the whole domain of the non-intellectual, the non-discursive. The volume is neatly bound. [New York: Macmillan & Co., publishers. For sale by William Doxey; price 75 cents.]

LA VENGRO. The new edition of George Barrow's "Bible in Spain," published a short time since, met with a demand that induced the republication of Barrow's other important work, "Lavenro: the Scholar, the Gypsy and the Priest." The latter volume was written when the author was in the prime of his mental vigor. It bears the characteristics of all his works—carelessly written, impatient, petulant, and in parts repellent, but instinct with character and mood and wayward fancy. "Lavenro" did not meet the success forty years ago that it is expected to attain to-day—yet it pleased neither the religious nor the polite world, and yet it is said to have had many passionate admirers. Barrow led a sort of vagabond existence for years and his adventures are strikingly told in the gypsy narrative of "Lavenro." Augustine Burrell, M. P., has an interesting introduction to the work and it is illustrated most artistically by E. J. Sullivan. [London and New York: Macmillan & Co., publishers. For sale by W. Doxey; price $1.25.]

SIEGRIED THE MYSTIC. There is something weird and uncanny about this book. Its author, Ida Worden Wheeler, attempts to treat of socialism in its relation to wealth, producing an irresponsible. The book, like many others bearing the imprint of the Arena Publishing Company, deals with economics. The hero, George Martin, is a gentleman who, in the North American Review for April the first article is a lengthy one by David A. Wells, LL.D., treating of Great Britain and the United States: Their True Relations. Professor Wells thus succinctly sums up England's foreign policy: "Whenever her sovereignty has gone two blades of grass have grown where one grew before. Her dominion has been enlarged and has benefited the country over which it floats and has carried with it civilization, the Christian religion, order, justice and property. England has always treated a conquered race with justice, and what under her rule is the law of the white man is the law for his black, red and yellow brother. England would never have told a neighboring country of reciprocal trade relations, as the United States told Mexico in 1846, to speak of permanent desirable commercial relations with her, without hope of success or promise of results."

MAP OF EL DORADO COUNTY. An excellent and valuable map of the county of El Dorado has just been issued by Punnett Brothers of this City. It was compiled by them from official records and surveys, and has received the official approval of the El Dorado County Board of Supervisors. One of the noteworthy features of the map is the division of the county into supervisorial districts, and furthermore, the map contains a useful index of the 312 mining claims in that county. The map was prepared at the instance of Shelly Inch, a business man of Placerville, whose enterprise in the premises is worthy of commendation.

THE STUDY OF HOMER. William Cranston Lawton's "Art and Humanity in Homer" is a group of essays intended to aid in stimulating readers to a wider course of Homeric study. The subjects of the essays are: "The Iliad as a Work of Art," "Womanhood in the Iliad," "Closing Scenes of the Iliad," "The Homeric Under-World," "Plot of the Odyssey," "Odysseus and Nausicaa," and "Acrotion to the Troy Myth after Homer." Acquaintance with the Iliad and Odyssey are necessary to a thorough appreciation of Mr. Lawton's work, although he has endeavored to make his essays, as far as possible, complete and intelligible in themselves. [New York: Macmillan & Co., publishers. For sale by William Doxey; price 75 cents.]

MISTRESS DOROTHY MARVIN. This is another piece of historical fiction, founded on incidents accompanying the downfall of James Stuart and the triumph of William III of England. J. C. Sneath is the author and the story is supposed to be related by its adventurous hero, "Sir Edward Armstrong, Baronet of the Copeland Hall, in the County of Somerset." The Monmouth rebellion and the rise of William of Orange have inspired the author's

THE SIXTH EDITION OF "FORT FRAYNE," by Captain Giles King, is nearly exhausted, and another is under way. The story was published by THE CALL as a serial a year ago. "How Women Love" is the rather peculiar title of a book about to be issued from the pen of Max Nordau, by F. Tenney Neely. In this volume the author attempts to present by romance his idea of woman's love. Whether that idea is a historical or a psychological study is left to the judgment of the reader.
