

GOULD'S FOES UNITE ON RYAN

Los Angeles Democrats Spring a Candidate for the Convention Chairmanship.

HE WILL GIVE THE STOCKTON MAN A HARD FIGHT FOR THE PLACE.

Footo Goes Over to the Chairman of the State Committee, Whereat the Buckleyites Curse Long and Loud—Factions Skirmishing for Proxies.

THE CALL'S HEADQUARTERS, 614 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 15.

Judge W. A. Ryan of Los Angeles is the man of the hour in Sacramento. He is put forward by his friends as the only man who can beat Frank Gould for the chairmanship of the convention. He may not be able to reach the place, but he has at least given a bad scare to the adherents of Gould. When the Los Angeles delegates arrived to-day they hoisted a neatly printed banner on which was emblazoned the legend:

Headquarters of the Los Angeles delegation. In room 64. Hon. W. A. Ryan for chairman.

Judge Ryan was himself not disposed to press his candidacy, but his friends would not listen to his attempts at declination. Judge Taney of Los Angeles spoke for the southern part of the State in urging Judge Ryan's candidacy, saying:

"We of the Southland are for any man who is impartial. We know that there are certain contests within the party that have caused much rancor. Mr. Gould may be a good man, but having become a partisan in these schisms, we do not consider that he is properly qualified to act with entire impartiality. On that account we present our candidate and trust that he may receive the consideration he deserves. He deserves the support of every good Democrat, no matter to what faction he belongs."

Thus the argument is passed along, and the friends of Ryan say that if they don't win they will give Gould the worst scare of his life.

It was apparently only a little unimportant conversation that was taking place in the barroom of the Golden Eagle Hotel this evening between Frank Gould, the avowed candidate for chairman of the State convention, and Andrew J. Clunie, one of the most enthusiastic and active supporters of the anti-Junta delegation.

But had this little confab terminated satisfactorily to Clunie the situation that now exists would have been changed in most important particulars and would have left the convention proceedings to sail along in the smoothest possible manner. It was a last effort to bring about harmony without a preceding condition of war, but it failed absolutely.

The sudden rise of Judge W. A. Ryan's star to-day put Gould and his adherents on their mettle, and they lost no opportunity of cementing and increasing the strength of their leaders. Conclination was the word, and so tactful were their efforts that they induced that hard-headed and bold-hearted fighter from Alameda, Hon. W. W. Footo, to surrender horse and dragons. Footo is now out for Gould without equivocation and without reserve.

Taking advantage of this conciliatory spirit that pervaded the Gould camp, Andy Clunie looked up Gould, found him holding up the bar in the Golden Eagle, called him to one side and then put this proposition squarely before him:

"We will withdraw all our opposition to your candidacy for chairman of the convention if you will agree to submit to us the names of the gentlemen whom you propose to name as members of the committee on credentials."

Gould backed and filled a bit, but being brought back to a direct answer he declined to comply with the request of the anti-Junta people. From this on until the question of chairmanship is decided the lines will be drawn and the battle will be waged with all the fierceness and energy at the command of all concerned.

Evening brought the first real burst of life and whoop and the first real tug-of-war. Ryan's boom, which started early in the afternoon, ran a gentle and uncertain course until near dinner time, when the first sensation occurred. W. W. Footo made it when he declared himself for Gould, and it became known that English and Fitzgerald had got in with Footo on the deal making Alameda solid for Gould.

This was a hard punch to the Ryan boomers and Buckleyites, and signs of alarm disappeared from the faces of the Daggett-Gould-McNab hustlers. But still everybody waited for the evening trains and the re-enforcements and the conubiating of the night.

The whoop came at 8:30 o'clock, when the San Francisco train rolled into the depot, where the bare of a brass band and a crowd of hundreds of people welcomed the big crowd from the city.

The Iroquois clubs from San Francisco, Benicia and Suisun poured out and formed in line with yip-yip-yip and much hurrah. The Iroquois procession quickly formed and up K street it went, with the new Sacramento Iroquois Club and a band for escort, and with tomahawks, Roman candles and red-fire to help out the excitement.

Then the Buckleyites poured forth from train, too, in their strength. They came 150 strong, and they formed by twos behind the Iroquois clubs, headed by Chairman Joseph Rothschild, Senator Donovan, J. C. Nealon, Henry Ach and other leaders. Each Buckleyite delegate wore a badge of ribbons and tin imitations of silver dollars, and the delegation marched proudly to its headquarters, near Seventh and K streets.

The Buckleyites found that the stragglers Junta delegation had not come with any outward show of force, and that they had no headquarters, and the Buckley force hurried itself en masse into the political gathering that overran the Golden Eagle and the Capitol Hotel, across the street, and gave life to the sidewalks. They made an impression by their numbers and presence, and they knew it. Their show of force itself helped to make them something to be reckoned with.

The same train brought many members of other delegations, and so all at once, at about 9 o'clock, the majority of the delegates and of the leaders were on hand and the real anti-convention hustling broke into full blast.

But the anti-Gould people were at sea and the Gould boomers had regained their confidence.

The Alameda flop had not helped the Ryan boom, and it was waiting for the later night to regain its force. Among the anti-Gould people were heard curses of Footo, who was a few hours before their idol. Attorney W. M. Gibson of Stockton, who was one of the bitter enemies of Ryan in the San Joaquin delegation for a time, threw up his hands. Then he waited for the Ryan boom to get going again.

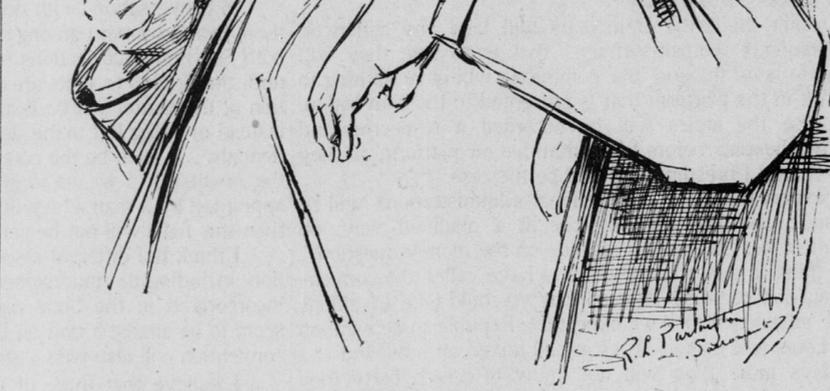

"Footo says that he is satisfied that Gould is not a Daggett man," said Gibson, with derision in his words.

"Footo was in and out, in and out, with us, and now he is out," said Recorder Glynn, and he said more with suppressed indignation.

The Buckleyites cursed Footo sorely. They said they regarded him as an ingrate. They had boomed him for months; they recalled how they had won friends for him and had boomed him for the chairmanship. Now he had gone into the camp of the enemy just at the critical moment when a possibility of victory seemed in sight.

There was much speculation as to what transpired between W. W. Footo and Frank Gould during the hour's private conversation which they had upstairs in the Golden Eagle late in the afternoon, but it was all speculation. People on both sides assumed that a deal of some sort was consummated whereby Footo and his friends are to be benefited and John Daggett is not to be helped.

It seemed unlikely that it would any particular relation to Footo's candidacy for delegate at large, for he was absolutely certain of victory there. It was thought that the result might have a favorable influence on the fight of his friend Lay-mance for delegate from the Third District.

HON. FRANK GOULD, THE MAN OF THE DAY.

Others guessed, probably unjustly, that Footo would have something to say about the appointment of the State executive committee, and that possibly the way of the Senatorial aspirations might have been slightly smoothed.

There was no hint of anything discreditable in the slightest degree from anybody except a very few of the Buckleyites, who spoke hasty words in their wrath.

It was simply assumed that Footo received assurances in behalf of himself and his friends which were of course satisfactory and, politically considered, in every way proper. Footo, however, did not cease his cursing of John Daggett and his declarations of hostility to him when he went into Gould's camp.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Few Democratic Delegates Swear Allegiance to the Cause.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 15.—Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper and her daughter Harriet arrived to-day, completing the equal suffrage delegation in so far as its work before the Democratic Convention is concerned. They to-day appointed the committee that will appear before the platform committee, if their petition is allowed, to plead the cause of woman. They have received no encouragement whatever from any source, and while they continue to hope they do not expect the same treatment from the State Democracy that was accorded them by the Republicans.

The women have established headquarters in parlor 28, third floor of the Golden Eagle Hotel. In the office and about the hallways of the hotel are neatly printed placards announcing that fact and cards are distributed everywhere announcing that "You are respectfully invited to call at woman suffrage headquarters," etc.

Very few have so far accepted the invitation. No delegation has done so as a body, although two or three counties have instructed their delegates to vote for woman suffrage. Some four or five individuals have called, among them Gavin McNab and Max Popper, both assuring the committee that they were heartily in sympathy with their cause. J. A. Filcher of Placer County, manager of the State Board of Trade, went up the elevator with the intention of doing something of the kind, but looking in and seeing a room full of ladies he backed out under some subterfuge. He was afterward led back by a newspaper man and made his little speech.

The threatened organized opposition of women of the State has not developed any showing whatever. A number of prominent women have, on the contrary, enlisted with the cause. The wife of Warden Aull called at the equal suffrage headquarters to-day and declared her active allegiance. She said she would do all in her power to assist the cause. Mrs. S. J. Hanchell and Mrs. Frank Orcutt of this city also dropped in and assured the committee of their support.

The ladies are keeping close to their headquarters and are not attempting any personal canvass of the delegates. The headquarters wear a forlorn appearance as compared to the busy scene it presented during the Republican Convention. The Republicans manifested their appreciation of the ladies in a very marked degree.

"What we are particularly afraid of," said Mrs. Ida Harper, who acts especially as the press committee, "is that we shall be ignored—that is, that the platform shall be silent regarding equal suffrage. If the Democratic party is opposed to equal suffrage we wish it to say in its platform. Then we shall know who our friends are and who our enemies. We are neither Democrats nor Republicans, remember, in this matter of securing enfranchisement. We have personal bearings, to be sure, but they are sunk in the one purpose before us. Very many prominent women of the State who have Democratic predilections will feel it deeply if the Democratic party does less for us than did the Republican."

"We have petitions to present here with the signatures of 40,000 residents of the State over 21 years of age, asking for the suffrage amendment to the constitution. The signers are about equally divided as to sex. The signatures have been collected within the last three months."

"Alameda is the banner county in this matter. Now, suppose Alameda County's delegation here should place itself in opposition to us, as it is intimated it will do, I maintain that it does not represent the sentiment of its people."

"The Republican convention was rather taken by surprise by the strength of our campaign. There was no organized opposition to us. We came down here with the outspoken and unqualified support of THE CALL. That was a great thing for us. It practically amounts to the difference between them and now. Had we the support of some paper that is to the Democratic party what THE CALL is to the Republican party you would not see this difference of the delegates to-day. Our cause was adopted by the Republican convention with a rush. Since then six weeks have intervened, and the opponents of suffrage in the State—I will not say what composes the opposition, but interests that believe they will be injured by the adoption of woman suffrage—have organized and made a hard fight against us. That explains the situation."

Susan B. Anthony and Anna H. Shaw will compose the committee that will plead the cause of suffrage before the platform committee, provided leave is granted, which is reasonably certain, as the right of petition is not yet abrogated. The ladies will be heard and bowed out. There will be no reference to the question in the platform it is believed. In the convention Gavin McNab will, perhaps, offer a resolution of sympathy or something of the kind, and it will receive a dozen or more votes, and with that the matter will be passed. Speaking of the matter to-night Miss Anthony said:

"The question of suffrage seems never to the Democratic party than to the Republican. The Republican party has approached the subject often, passing sentimental resolutions at least. But the Democratic party, with professions of being the party of the people, cannot ignore the rights of woman without being untrue to its own faith. The adoption of a plank favoring suffrage would not in any event commit the individual voter, for he would vote his personal convictions on the subject anyhow. The value we attach to such a declaration is the free discussion of the subject that it insures. It would open the columns of the newspapers to it and the orators would talk about it. That is all that suffrage needs to win—that people understand it. I am certain we will win this fall anyhow, but I should think the Democratic party would be glad of our aid in their contest."

HAMILTON FOR CHAIRMAN.

Placer Delegates Declare for the Old War-Horse.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 15.—J. A. Filcher, editor of the Auburn Herald and manager of the State Board of Trade, and the old Democratic war-horse, General Joe Hamilton, headed the Placer delegation, which got in during the forenoon. Filcher will be the representative of Placer County on the new State Central Committee.

Old Joe Hamilton is known to every Democrat in the State who has not jumped into party activity within three or four years. Hamilton was Attorney-General of the State for two terms and has missed but one convention in thirty years or more.

On the way down the delegates discussed the fuss about the chairmanship and made up their minds that if the delegates kept on fighting at Sacramento they would spring Joe Hamilton for the chairmanship. The Placer delegation came unpledged and undetermined about the chairmanship and with a general prejudice against Buckley, though without any particular understanding or care about the San Francisco contest.

"The delegates care particularly who is chairman," said Mr. Filcher. "They are not against Gould, but they think that the fight over the chairmanship is simply a fight for power and plunder in San Francisco, and they would probably favor some good man who is not mixed up in the fuss. They are against anything that has Buckley attached to it, on general principles."

It is on such material which comes rolling into town from all over the State, made up of stanch, true and unprejudiced men undecided about the fight, that the anti-Gould people rely to swell their initial strength to the necessary majority. It is because there are so many such delegates that there is any uncertainty about how the big fight over the chairmanship, Daggett and the San Francisco contest will break to-morrow. The friends of Gould still contend that there is no uncertainty in regard to his success, and it really seems that they have good grounds for their hopefulness.

It is said the Shasta delegation has also prepared a sweeping currency plank which it will ask the convention to make a part of the platform. The plank reads as follows:

Resolved, That we are in favor of the United States Government coining every ounce of silver mined within its borders at the ratio of 16 to 1, without any condition whatsoever.

HOSPITABLE CITIZENS.

Careful Preparations for the Care of Delegates.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 15.—John Markley, secretary of the State Central Committee and member of the citizens' committee on arrangements, was busy as a miller all day with important labors which many delegates thought or cared much about. Markley has been the leading authority in the work of preparation for the convention which has been done so well.

State Committee headquarters were opened in the parlor of the Golden Eagle in the morning, and during the day chairmen of delegations filed related credentials, received badges and asked questions. About forty proxies were filed during the day and many more will reach the roll before the convention opens. Especially careful arrangements for seating the delegates have been made at the Pavilion, in the vast interior of which the octagonal muslin tent for the convention has been put in order, with a seating capacity of 3000. Each delegation will sit next to an aisle, and the delegations have been located so as to group them by Congressional districts.

The people of Sacramento are displaying hearty hospitality and careful attention to their guests. Committees on halls, music, accommodations, press, badges and attaches have done their work carefully. Accommodations are ready for the biggest crowd that may come. When the convention is over the three conventions will have cost the city about $3000. With all the conventions Sacramento has paid every dollar of party expense.

Chairman Willis, of the press committee, is entitled to special consideration for the attentions paid to visiting press representatives.

Temporary clerical officers have been provided without expense and they will probably become the permanent convention attaches. Most of them have donated their services. They include a secretary, a chief clerk and four assistants, a sergeant-at-arms and five assistants, three porters and four pages.

A big sounding-board has been placed behind the platform; the Pavilion is prettily decorated, and the citizens of Sacramento have done well their part to make things pleasant for the big unpleasantness.

The committee of citizens having in charge arrangements for receiving and seating the delegates has attended to its duties in a manner that meets with the approval of all visitors. William Beckman is chairman of the general committee. A. C. Hinkson vice-chairman, J. O. Funston secretary and David Lubin treasurer.

The sub-committees are as follows: On attaches of the convention—John Markley, Add C. Hinkson, William McLaughlin. Auditing committee—David Lubin, William Beckman, Add C. Hinkson. On badges—A. J. Johnston, C. H. Holmes, W. P. Mathews.

To consult with Democratic Central Committee—Add C. Hinkson, Dr. Mathews, Fred Cox. City decoration committee—J. A. Woodson (chairman), with power to select members of the committee. Hall and decorations—T. H. Wallis, J. C. Germain, W. H. Govan. On hotels and accommodations—E. W. Hale, David Lubin, Herman Graou, L. M. Landborough, A. C. Herrick. On music—W. H. Douglas, R. T. Cohn, Bert Kidder.

On the press—E. B. Willis (chairman), T. J. McFarland, C. K. McClatchy, W. J. Hassard, J. B. Harris, W. B. Thorpe, Charles Schmidt, J. J. Campbell. Printing committee—C. T. Jones, E. S. Hadley, Edwin F. Smith. Transportation committee—William Mc-

The World Wide Wonder Worker Again Extends the Healing Hand to Failing Man.

GRATITUDE TO THE GREAT HUDYAN.

Much Midnight Oil Burned at the Big Institute by Eminent Physicians to Benefit Mankind.

A question not infrequently obtruding itself upon the inquiring mind is this: Is man degenerating—falling in vital force, losing energy, lacking in that strong, robust virile power which made the gigantic gladiators of the arena such enviable types of physical perfection, and if so, why? I give it up. The solution of such a knotty problem would require a more facile pen and subtle mind than I possess, so I will content myself with the broad assertion that man is failing physically. But I also know that this failing may be halted if the proper steps are taken and taken in time.

I will try and tell how I first became introduced to the medical marvel of the age the great Hudyan. While walking along Montgomery street about two months ago I was accosted by—as I supposed at the time—a perfect stranger in so familiar and effusive a manner as to betoken long acquaintance. I could see by the merry twinkle of his full clear eye that he was enjoying my embarrassment hugely. Concluding at last he had had about as much fun at my expense as was consistent with street etiquette, I made bold to say, "Well, sir, may I ask you are, pray?" "Why, calling me by name, 'don't you recognize your friend Jack?'"

I seized his hand and stood paralyzed. Was it possible that this was the same man whom I had seen one short year before a complete physical wreck, nervous, irritable, melancholy, hair and eyelashes gone, round-shouldered and ambitious—yet there could be no disputing the fact that it was the same old Jack. But oh, how completely and miraculously rejuvenated. Why he looked like a gladiator of the olden times, tall, erect, robust and fearless; a sparkling eye and a firm grip. The very embodiment of manly strength and beauty.

"Jack," I said, feeling somewhat dwarfed in his lofty presence, "let us go and sit down somewhere and you can tell me how you discovered the famed rejuvenating waters of Ponce de Leon?" "When we were comfortably seated in an adjacent cafe, he turned to me and administering a good rousing slap on my shoulders, which nearly drove me through the floor, said: 'Old man, no mysterious or Ponce de Leonism about it at all. Just listen. You remember when I last saw you, about a year ago, I was on the verge of suicide. All the comforts of life had been absorbed by my nervous and wasted condition, and the end was near. One day a friend advised me to go to the Hudson Medical Institute and try their celebrated remedio-treatment—Hudyan. I went and the wonderful result you see before your eyes, and oh, my friend, and there were tears in his eyes as he spoke. 'I bless the day I consulted the good doctors of the Hudson Medical Institute and rever the name of Hudyan.' After listening to the graphic account of his miraculous cure by the great Hudyan I have no hesitancy in recommending to you the same treatment, suffering from any of the many sapping diseases of which men are the victims, to call on, or write to the HUDSON MEDICAL INSTITUTE for testimonials, corner Stockton and Market streets."
