SENTIMENT AND SUICIDE

A Young Man and Woman Found Dead in a Lodging-House.

FROM REDWOOD CITY.

They Passed Their Last Day on Earth Writing Farewell Letters.

"PLEASE BURY US TOGETHER."

He Closed His Literary Efforts With Quotations From Gloomy Verse.

Last evening, about 6 o'clock, Salvador Romero and Mrs. Rena Garcia, residents of Redwood City, were found dead in each other's arms in room 6 of the Alpha lodging-house, on the corner of Market and East streets. They had committed suicide by shooting, after leaving several letters written in a despairing sentimental strain stating their intention to kill themselves.

The couple came to the place at 5 o'clock Saturday evening and took a room. They did not register nor tell their names, and Mrs. Lufkins, the landlady, states that the man and woman did not give any information regarding themselves, except that they were short of money, but expected to get some.

The woman appeared to be about 25 years old and the man several years younger. In his pocket, after death, was found a nickel, and in her's a tiny, loaded, barrel-revolver of a peculiar pattern. She was clothed in a white muslin dress, a brown coat and white straw hat, and he in a dark coat and vest and light-blue trousers.

They remained in their room Saturday night and most all day yesterday. About 6 o'clock last evening Joseph Lufkins, the landlady, knocked at their door and, receiving no answer, entered the room through a window facing on East street.

The silence was at once explained. The pair lay partially on a sofa and a chair, locked in each other's arms, lifeless. On the floor near them was a small revolver, and a bullet-hole in the breast of each told of its fatal work.

The two papers were directly over the hearts of the man and woman, showing that the shots were fired by a hand that never faltered. He must have shot her as she sat on the chair by the side of the sofa on which he was reclining, and as she sank over against him she drew the second bullet into his own heart. And they died without a struggle—a double death well planned and well executed.

While the day sped by bringing the night that would know no morning they wrote. Both were Spanish, and sentiment, mingled with despair, marked the pages they penciled. The first note was to the Coroner. "We have just a few more moments to waste, the times flies away," it said. "Please bury us together. Oh, if we could kneel at your side and beg you to bury us together, Farewell. S. Romero and Rena Garcia."

Then the woman Rena Garcia took the pencil and a sheet of note paper and wrote to her brother and sister. She spoke of "Pelle," who would have something credible to say about her, and ended: "I am tired of this world; good night."

Then the young man wrote to his mother. It was a pathetic farewell: "I could hear again your voice how happier would I be, but I shall be dead and you will live. I love you till the last. You would never have lost me if you had only written to me before. * * * a sweet farewell to you and I bid you farewell. This revolver in my hand we bid you farewell. Bury us together, we wish to keep together. Good-night, forever your son, S. ROMERO."

Then she took the pencil again and wrote to her husband, telling him she could not live any longer and must die: "I am tired of this life and such people. I am not willing to be with you any longer. I bid you farewell. * * * You came in like a wild beast, so we must part. * * * I wish you were better off. Your true wife, RENA R. GARCIA."

The writer dropped the pencil for all time and her companion laid his weapon aside to add the quotation beginning: "Tread softly, bow the head. In solemn amission bow; No bell toll, yet I am passing now."

Then he wrote, "One more kiss let me press on those lips that never deceived me for they will be cold and silent now." So the lines ran on till the close, then he shot her, then himself and the Morgue wagon carried them away.

PUGILISTS SIGNED.

The Armory Club Has Arranged Its Programme for the Evening of October 9.

The Armory Club has arranged a first programme for the evening of October 9 by signing Lou Agnew, the clever Chicago lightweight, who recently defeated Billy Akers, and Spider Kelly, the conqueror of Gus Herget. These men will box ten rounds at 135 pounds, and will post a forfeit of $100 each to weigh in on the evening of the fight at that limit.

Billy Shannon and Billy Lewis of Denver will box eight rounds at 150 pounds on the same evening.

The third battle will be between Jimmy Anthony, the Australian champion bantam, and two men, Tom Cooney of Massachusetts and Billy Fay of this City, Anthony to knock each out in six rounds, with a half-hour rest between bouts.

TO-MORROW NIGHT'S EXODUS.

San Francisco Will Be Minus Her Native Sons on Wednesday.

To-morrow evening the City parlors of the native sons will take up their march for Stockton. The parade will form on Mason street, near the N. S. G. W. Hall, and will pass through several of the principal streets to the ferry.

The young men will be garbed in pretty uniforms—each parlor choosing its own dress—and with brass bands, drum corps, bombs and red flags they will make a showy display, such as has never been seen in San Francisco.

At Oakland they will be joined by the transbay parlors, and the special trains will bear them away to the fair valley City. Several parlors will go by the river route, and will make a water excursion of the trip.

A Modern Portrait.

There will be placed on exhibition at Vicky's gallery on Post street to-day a portrait of George Alfred Rogers, designer of wood carving to the Queen. The picture was painted in London by Frederick Yates and was exhibited last year in the Paris Salon and subsequently exhibited in the new gallery. It fairly represents one of the highest achievements of Mr. Yates in portrait painting.

Garfield's Son-in-Law Says Sealing Business Is "Played Out"

BROUGHT BACK 30,000 SKINS.

Six Seizures Made—Jordan to Start Home in Two Weeks—Others On the Way.

The latest news of the Bering Sea Commission under Professor David Starr Jordan reached here yesterday when the steamer Homer arrived, nine and a half days from Unalaska with J. Stanley Brown, superintendent of the North American Commercial Company, and C. H. Townsend of the United States Fish Commission aboard.

Mr. Brown is a son-in-law of ex-President James A. Garfield, and was his secretary at the White House up to the time of the assassination. He passed through this City May 22 on his way to the Pribilof Islands.

"The Homer," said he yesterday at the Occidental, "brought from the Bering Sea a cargo of 30,000 sealskins, being the quota allotted by the Government to the North American Commercial Company during the past season."

"The catch of the sealing fleet this season proves to be light. It is doubtful if it will average 400 skins a vessel, or a total of less than 30,000 skins. Sealers report seals scarcer than ever before, and there is no pretense made that the small catches have been due to inclement weather. As the sealers put it, 'the business is played out.'"

"The Bering Sea mixed commission of Americans, British and Canadians, under Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University, arrived at St. George July 6, and two days later came to St. Paul Island, where are located our company's headquarters."

"That commission is the finest body of men that could have been got together for such a scientific investigation, with the great commercial and international questions attached to it. There is Professor Jordan, the authority on fishes and a scientist of world-wide reputation. He is the only United States Commissioner, but he is being assisted by such men as Dr. Stejneger of the National Museum at Washington, who has no superior in the field of natural history either in this country or in Europe; Dr. Lucas, who has for years occupied the position of curator of mammals in the National Museum, and is unsurpassed as an authority on comparative osteology; C. H. Townsend of the United States Fish Commission, who has devoted years to familiarizing himself with the methods of pelagic sealing; Colonel Joseph Murray, who has been Government Agent on the seal islands for six years and was detailed by Secretary Hamilton to assist the commission, and Captain Moser of the Fish Commission steamer Albatross, another experienced man. The British Commissioners are Professor Thompson of Dundee University, a barrister, and Barrett Hamilton, a barrister, both of whom will start for home about the 20th of this month, but will leave some of the party to complete the work."

"The Albatross should arrive here this month by way of Honolulu. Sue was to FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS.

The combined shows seem to be the amusement magnet of the day. The Forepaugh-Sells circus seems to be the amusement magnet of the day. The attendance has increased regularly since the opening night and will probably continue so until the conclusion of the engagement on Saturday night next.

These seems to be no gainsaying the fact that it is the biggest aggregation of the kind that has ever pitched canvas in San Francisco. The performances thus far have given the greatest satisfaction, and Central Park will more than likely be the Mecca for the amusement devotees during the coming week. The arenic performances surpass anything of the kind ever seen on the coast, and the zoological department has proven a source of much interest. The collection of animals 'neath the big canvas will find few if any counterparts in the zoological gardens of the world, and in itself is a source of education and delight.

The performances in the amphitheater and the training of the animals proper bristles with novelties, an effort evidently having been made to cast aside from the stereotyped features of circuses of the past. The trained animal performers—the elephants and the seals—have become subjects of conversation throughout the City. In these two exhibitions the acme of perfection in animal training seems surely to have been reached. The hippodromic events furnish an exciting conclusion to two hours of the rarest enjoyment that the people of San Francisco have ever had under a circus canvas. Two performances will be given daily during the remainder of the week.

HAY DESTROYED BY FIRE.

An alarm was sounded through box 53 at 5:30 p. m. yesterday for a fire in a quantity of hay on the wharf at the foot of Third street. The hay had been proven a source of much interest. The collection of animals 'neath the big canvas will find few if any counterparts in the zoological gardens of the world, and in itself is a source of education and delight.
