EX-SENATOR DORSEY HERE FROM LONDON

He Will Erect a Great Stamp Mill at Picacho.

Big Gold Ledges to Be Developed and About 500 Men Employed.

MORE BRITISH MONEY COMING.

The Ex-Senator on the Money Situation—His Strange Career and Present Rise.

Ex-United Senator Stephen W. Dorsey arrived here yesterday, having come direct from London, and is at the Palace.

He went over to London to get money to develop these mines. He succeeded in getting a lot of it and will now erect a 100-stamp mill and employ 400 and 500 men.

Mr. Dorsey says he got the needed money conditionally on McKinley's election. If Bryan had been elected he would not have got a dollar.

The ex-senator says also that confidence among London capitalists has greatly revived by the result of the election. He says a great deal of money will come to the California gold fields for development during the coming winter.

"These British capitalists," he continued, "are not buying mines outright, but they will put up money for interests and to be used in development, letting the seller retain an interest and manage the property. They do not care any more to send an English manager over here. But having taken an interest and paid the money, they put up a certain part of the stock for sale and let the public buy it."

"The men of whom you hear as representing English syndicates in this country are usually frauds. Ten to one such a man, if the truth is known, does not represent the money he is supposed to have. He will be striking the first man he sees for $1 for dinner."

"These capitalists are very shrewd and sharp. They are as good business men as the shrewdest of Yankees. I think by the election the money market there will be great prosperity throughout the country, and especially in the West. I think it means a great deal in the way of the development of the gold mines. I have known Mr. McKinley as long as I have known anybody. He is an able, conservative and entirely safe man. His administration will, in my judgment, be admirable."

"My silver men throughout the country try to vote for Mr. McKinley because they did not like some of the planks in the Chicago platform. The one condemning the Supreme Court, and the other criticizing severely the President for calling out troops to suppress the Chicago riot, were particularly objectionable. Mr. Bryan, while a very brilliant man, was hardly old enough, and the coining of silver was too a rious a proposition for the country to undertake. I have known Mr. McKinley as long as I have known anybody. He is an able, conservative and entirely safe man. His administration will, in my judgment, be admirable."

"The mill which I will erect will be at Picacho, twenty miles north of Yuma. We have a 15-stamp mill there now, but the new one will be a 100-stamp and will treat an enormous amount of ore. We have some large ledges. The ore runs from $5 to $20 a ton, being about twice as rich as that of the Alaska Freedmen mine."

"I will also build a railroad five and a half miles long to carry the ore from the mine to the mill, which will be located on the bank of the Colorado River."

Ex-Senator Dorsey has had a strange career. He was prominent in Ohio politics for a time, then went to Arkansas, from which State he was elected Senator. He had meanwhile engaged in a great variety of enterprises from which he made a vast sum of money.

Coming to Colorado and New Mexico he engaged in cattle-raising. He had previously been a Government contractor, his contracts being largely for carrying United States mail through the West and South. These were largely what were known as star route contracts, and in connection with these the Government brought suit charging great frauds. Dorsey spent a vast sum in defending himself, employing Robert G. Ingersoll and other eminent attorneys. His cattle business finally failed in the West, and in recent years he has been reported as utterly ruined. A Chicago paper not long ago reported a judgment against him of $450 for a piano.

But the ex-Senator is on his feet again. His eye is dark brown and piercing, and he talks and acts like a man who had a history of considerable success. There is a suggestion of Blaine about him in his dash and in the look of his face, which is lion-like and full of strength. His hair is getting pretty gray. He wears it short, and does his hair in the Van Dyke style. He will probably be here several days.

REV. MR. MILLER AND FANCY FAIRS

Objects to Eating Oysters in the Name of Religion.

He Says Christians Should Give Without Getting a Quid Pro Quo.

The Presbyterian Ministerial Union had a "quid day" yesterday and one of the questions propounded was "What are your views concerning the raising of money for church purposes by means of bazaars and fancy fairs?"

Rev. O. C. Miller, being called on to lead the discussion, gave forth his views with no uncertain voice. After describing how Christ threw the money-changers and the merchants out of the temple he touched on modern church entertainments and methods of raising money thereby. "They are indeed wrong," said Mr. Miller, "than the state of things that Christ found in the temple."

Sometimes taken by church socials were described and the speaker said: "How could we enjoy them if we realized that Christ was there? I think these decorations have arisen through our not realizing that it is the house of God. Christ said: 'Do not make my father's house a house of merchandise.' Paul spoke against such things when he said: 'Have ye no houses to eat in?' The Scriptures say that we are not to give for the sake of receiving. If a man eats a plate of oysters soup or the like, he is not a Christian because he likes it."

Mr. Miller clinched these remarks with several anecdotes; one of them was about a city in the East with a number of churches, all of which had been built by eating, and another was of a man who, trying to sell a bazaar ticket, was chided by an infidel with the remark: "One would think your God was bankrupt."

The speaker concluded his remarks by stating that nothing could be done but the Scriptures to justify the raising of money for church purposes by means of bazaars and fancy fairs.

Rev. F. A. Deane, who was appointed to continue the discussion, said he frankly owned the principle was wrong, but when a board bill was staring a man in the face he thought one was compelled to look at the matter in a broader light. He considered that a sale of work, in a hall, where the sales were voluntary and not a board bill was not a violation of any divine law. Dr. Ketchum said that God had laid down a rule: "People were to give tythes of all they possessed to supply the church funds, and that was the only way in which socials and entertainments could be made a means of conversion."

The second quiz question was on the effects of revivals by traveling evangelists. Rev. Dr. Ketchum said that in his experience the result was not as disastrous as the enthusiasm inspired was by his superintendent. Rev. Dr. Marshall testified to the success of revivals.

Mrs. Marie Marshall, who was present, said that the Free Will Reformed Church was $400 in arrears for rent, and that unless aid were forthcoming it would soon have to be closed. She begged the clergyman present to do all in their power to help a church which was being arrested to raise the much-needed money.

Ketchum reported for the Sabbath-observance committee and commented on the apathy of many professing Christians. Resolutions commending the work of Rev. Thomas Marshall were adopted.

At the Methodist preachers' meeting Rev. C. G. Mines represented the needs of the Fruitvale M. E. Church and Rev. A. Kummer, Dr. D. T. Eward and I. J. Truman were appointed a committee to investigate means of rendering assistance.

Rev. W. A. Spencer, D.D., general secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church Extension Society, represented the interests of that body in an interesting address. He said that about a thousand new Methodist Episcopal churches were being built annually in this country, and that the extension society helped half of them.

At both the Presbyterian and the Methodist meetings Mrs. H. Luse, State secretary of the W. C. T. U., requested that the fourth Sunday in this month be observed as temperance Sunday. Both meetings ordered that special temperance sermons be preached on that day.

At the clericus Rev. Hobart Chetwood spoke on cremation and opposed its adoption. Newman is expected to arrive on the 25th inst. He will reside for the present at the Occidental Hotel.
