

FIRST CHOICES
THRICE IN FRONT

Installer Turned the Tables on Wheel of Fortune.

Harvey's Mare, Ridden by Hennessy, Was Not Among the First Three.

Sir Richard Won at Odds of 15 to 1 Peixotto Again Turns Up a Winner

The cold weather detracted from the attendance at Emeryville yesterday, the crowd being considerably less than on the preceding days of the week. The racing, though, was very good and apparently clear from jobbery. Favorites were successful in capturing purses on three essays out of six.

In the mile and a furlong handicap installer turned the tables on Wheel of Fortune, winning in fast time with ease, while the mare failed to get a mark. Both opened in the betting at 11 to 5, the Wheel going back at post time to 5 to 2. After something over six furlongs had been covered, with Flashlight setting the pace, Freeman took the lead with Installer, and the Bratus horse passed the judges a length in front of Judge Denny with something in reserve, covering the distance in 1:54 1/2. Lobengula was third.

The 9 to 5 favorite, Manchester, ridden by Clawson, captured the first race, a six-furlong selling affair. Getting away poorly he passed one after another of his field, and at the end was driving a head before Horatio, an 8 to 1 shot. Roltaire secured the show, Nebadnezzer, one which there was a good stiff pace, finished fourth.

Green Morris' mare, Sallie Clitquot, was a prohibitive 9 to 20 chance for the six-furlong purse run that followed, but Pigott got her away from the post very badly, and after wading her way through the bunch got up in time to be beaten on a length by the gray horse Sir Richard, against which 15 to 1 was laid. The winner was cleverly piloted by Hennessy. Heartcase, at 40 to 1, headed in the field, ridden by Holmes, quite a promising boy.

The Oakland stable's fast filly Torsida downed her company very impressively in the two-year-old stakes. She was a length going to the post at odds of 9 to 2. Rosomondo with top weight by the post favorite, but was beaten by the time the stretch was reached. Elsmore got the best of a very straggling start, and was not overhauled by Torsida until the last fifty yards, when she beat him out a length in 1:39 1/2. The well-backed Torsida was third.

With but 88 pounds to carry, Fortunate looked to have it all his own way in the mile selling affair, and was well supported at odds of 2 to 1. Stevens, who had the mount, passed Frank Jaubert turning into the backstretch, and Holly's horse, never pressed, won handsily from Adam Andrew in 1:42 1/2. Billy McCloskey, a 20 to 1 shot, was a good third.

Mr. Ferguson had much trouble with the field while the host in the last race, and he finally dispatched them in the "good old-fashioned style" with the flag, and it was a sockdolager and no mistake. Strung out in a block, Quaker and Quaker showed in front, followed by Peixotto and the favorite George Miller. The leader had gone by the time the stretch was reached, and strangely enough Miller grew tired early in the game. Peixotto gradually assumed the lead, and at the wire led Midos out a neck, with Yankee Doodle taking the show.

Notes.
Fifteen pencils chalked up odds in the ring.

Mercutio, which ran away the reverse way of the track with his rider, acted as though he had joined the light artillery. Manchester, winner of the first race, entered to be sold for $500, was bid up to $1000 by "Jim" Quinn. The stable retained the horse.

ALMOST READY FOR THE JURY

Hebbard's Gag-Law Case Reaches the Closing Hours.

And Strangely Enough He Declines to Be His Own Witness

Attorney Hinkle Comes to Grief in Casting Insinuations Upon Mr. Shortridge.

A quality that nobody believed Judge J. C. B. Hebbard guilty of during the last campaign he displayed to a most surprising degree yesterday. When the moment for him to take the witness-stand to vindicate himself of the various criticisms that have been passed of his merits as a politician and a candidate for the bench arrived he was modestly silent in declining the opportunity. As a result

WEDDING BELLS RING JOYFULLY

Nuptials of Miss Whitelaw and Mr. Walter N. Brunt.

Made One at the Altar of the First Congregational Church.

Judge Seawell Officiates at the Wedding of Miss Agnes Smedberg and Max Rosenfeld.

It seemed as if all the hothouses of this City had yielded up their fairest blossoms to decorate the altar of the First Congregational Church last evening for the nuptials of Miss Margaret E. Whitelaw and Walter N. Brunt. Choice roses, the La France and delicate bride-maid and delicate sweet peas, tinted like the sea shell, mingled in artistic confusion with feathery ferns and stately palms.

The defense, continued Hinkle, turned on the declaration that Sheehan and Watt had "connived and logrolled" to get control of the bank.

Hinkle began to warm up. He was fearful in his admiration for Judge Hebbard his heart might get the better of his head, so he said, and probably it was this misguided fervor that got him into trouble a few minutes later.

He began railing off the virtues of Sheehan, Watt and Hebbard in a manner that would have given a photograph apoplexy, and when he got tangled up in the various items of the receiver's schedule of the bank's assets his words came vituperative and abuse-lugred.

There were references to "Delmas and Shortridge, the attorneys for the Dick Donald board of directors" and an unwarranted and insulting insinuation that they had, as attorneys for the bank, retained in their possession a note from G. A. Swabner for $40,000, which receiver Sheehan could not find in the bank's assets.

Mr. Shortridge was on his feet in a moment to resent the insult.

Hinkle knew, said Mr. Shortridge, that the reflections meant to be conveyed were not in accordance with facts. He knew they were absolutely unfounded and untrue, and he was indignant.

Hinkle began to quibble, when he was interrupted by Mr. Shortridge, who indignantly exclaimed:

"I would permit any living man to make any such false insinuation about me as this person has done as long as there is a drop of blood in my body."

Judge Delagrange attempted to calm the storm by expressing a fear that Hinkle's "continuity of thought might be interrupted." Mr. Shortridge, however, said he cared nothing for the continuity of Hinkle's thoughts.

"Will your Honor," he said, "sit here and allow me to be insulted in this manner by a man whom I have always extended the utmost courtesy? You may remain silent; I will not. I will resist here or elsewhere such false, vile and undignified reflections on my character. Surely it is due the dignity of this court and the profession that such vile slanders shall not be allowed to go uncorrected."

He then announced that he would testify against this infamous insinuation on behalf of the defendant, and as for myself I will answer it in due and at the proper time.

Hinkle made an attempt to justify his conduct by declaring he was proceeding according to the record. The argument was concluded without further incident.

Court adjourned until 9:30 this morning, when Mr. Shortridge will deliver his argument in behalf of Mr. Marriott, after which the case will go to Hebbard and the case to the jury.

Following the ushers walked the bridesmaids—Miss Bessie Hewitt and Miss Annie Reed—who in turn preceded the maid of honor, Miss Agnes Marshall, carrying a silver plate, on which rested the wedding ring. The bride, leaning on the arm of her father, closed the bridal procession. The groom, attended by his best man, Mr. Hunter, awaited his bride at the altar, where Dr.
