ALEXANDER BOYD IS NOW ACCUSED

Charged With Forging the Davis Will by Expert Maxwell.

Sensation Caused in Judge Coffey's Court by This Unexpected Declaration.

Attorney Campbell Contended Himself With Alleging the Partisanship of the Witness.

"Alexander Boyd forged the will of the late Jacob Z. Davis," said Paying-teller exhibit 16, a copy of the so-called will which is admitted to be in Mr. Davis' handwriting. Mr. Campbell handed it to the witness and asked him if he thought the first "a" in it was a characteristic of Davis' "a" according to his previous description.

As Mr. Maxwell was advancing from the witness-stand in some sense of triumph, he was called on to make an examination of the paper. He had certain reasons for doubting it. The paper now shown him resembled that he saw first when he examined it at the request of Alexander Boyd and Attorney Mastick.

On the second examination the paper was handed to him by Deputy Clerk Johnson. In looking it over he noticed a blue or purple acid mark that was visible at the first examination had disappeared.

Mr. Campbell (handing witness the Davis will)—Is this the paper you saw the first time you were called on to examine it?

Mr. Maxwell (advancing to his microscope)—I will see it.

Mr. Campbell (mocking)—Oh, do you have to put it under your instrument again?

Mr. Knight—I submit that this remark is not fair to the witness.

Mr. Campbell (rising indignantly)—Not fair! Not fair! Is it fair when the witness has insinuated that Mr. Mastick or myself or some one in the County Clerk's office has tampered with the will? That some one has stolen the will and put this paper in its place? Is it fair for him to insinuate that? And shall I not examine him on that point?

The court—Let the question be answered.

Mr. Maxwell—I wish to use the glass in order to be sure. I saw two purple or blue spots on the instrument when I first examined it. They are not there now. They might have been made by ink or acid. There are acids that would remove them.

Mr. Campbell—Did you ever tell me or my associates about those acid marks before?

The witness—No, sir.

Mr. Campbell (twisting up)—Did you ever tell any man, woman or child on earth about those marks until this moment?

The witness—Yes, sir.

Mr. Campbell—Well, whom did you tell?

The witness—My mother and my brother.

Mr. Knight—This severity is unseemly and may be assigned as misconduct; this adverse examination of your witness is—

Mr. Campbell (in disgust)—Our witness is a bab.

Mr. Knight (in evident glee)—Well, he was your witness until a short time ago.

Mr. Campbell—Manly Campbell, you had Kyka until all at once you found that you didn't need him.

Mr. Knight (contentedly)—Mr. Kyka is not here.

In that way, little by little, the jury was enlightened with regard to the game that is going on behind the legal scenes and concerning the various parties.

Mr. Maxwell was allowed to explain how he had reached the conclusion that the will offered as the last testament of Jacob Z. Davis was in fact written by Alexander Boyd. He said that for two or three weeks he had been examining the writings of Mr. Boyd for the purpose of making comparisons. He found those writings in the bank with which he is connected. Nobody asked him to make the comparison, and he reached the conclusion after deliberate inspection. He believed that Mr. Boyd wrote the will.

Expert Max Gumpel was sworn as a witness and said that in his opinion the entire will is a forgery; that not a letter of it was written by the late Jacob Z. Davis; that the writing has not one of the characteristics of the writing of Mr. Davis.

The remainder of the afternoon was taken up by Mr. Gumpel with his explanation of the theory on which he proceeds in forming his judgment that the document is a forgery.

During the day it was ascertained that the proponents of the will will introduce Expert Ames to prove that the will is genuine.

Alexander Boyd was in a perturbed frame of mind last night when a representative of THE CALL met him at his Washington-street residence. "It is monstrous, it is an outrage," said he, alluding to the story of Paying Teller Maxwell that, in judgment, the will was forged by Mr. Boyd. "It is so monstrous that I do not care to say anything further."

"I was examined by Knight for two days and a half, and by Campbell for another half-day, making three days, and I told all the details of my connection with the will."

FOR A PACIFIC COAST CIRCUIT

The Associated Cyclists Making Strong Affiliations.

Mexico and British Columbia Will Soon Be in the Combination.

Mayor Phelan Joins the Association Reaching Out for Canadian Friends.

One of the prime objects of the California Associated Cyclists, that of forming a vast affiliation of Pacific Coast wheelmen extending from Mexico to British Columbia, is about accomplished, and within a few days the association expects to be able to officially announce that the governing body of the cyclists in President Diaz' realm has recognized the association.

The British Columbia Wheelmen are only waiting to learn whether or not the California Associated Cyclists really count racing in this State to accept affiliation, and as the proof of this will be sent them shortly the result is a foregone conclusion.

With recognition from these two important bodies it is expected that representatives from both will come to California to participate in the big meets that are projected, and these gatherings of the mighty men of the wheel will partake as much of an international character as any that has held under the auspices of the League of American Wheelmen.

The Mexican cyclists, who have long been recognized by the league, are ardently in favor of Sunday racing, and, moreover, are thorough sportsmen, who are ready at any time to meet the knights of the cycle path.

The recent breach between the Canadian Wheelmen's Association and the league has been closed by the action of the latter to let American flyers go to Chatham, Ontario, to compete in the annual meet there on July 1 is looked upon as a bright chance for the California organization to secure a valuable affiliation.

The Canadians have many crack riders who, if they should refuse to ride under the banner of the league, would come to California for the Mexican-California-British Columbia circuit.

Taken together, the outlook seems unusually bright, and the California Association is straining every nerve to bid closer the ties that are now being formed.

The leaders of the association are more than elated over one of their latest acquisitions in the wheel. No other than Mayor Phelan. The chief executive of the City government has long been known to be in favor of the objects for which the California wheelmen are striving—good roads and well-paved streets—and when he was asked to join the organization that has assumed control of California cycling affairs he did so at once and promised his earnest support in the matters that the association has under consideration.

E. F. Preston, the attorney for the Valley road, and A. Sembliman Stratton are also recent recruits to the association roll, which now contains the names of nearly 1000 members.

FRED BELL, Who Has Sued His Mother—of House-of-Mystery Fame—for an Accounting of His Father's Estate.

of his father's estate, shows no disposition to desist from the prosecution of what he considers his just rights.

In speaking of the suit yesterday, Mr. Bell said:

"I believe I am in the right, although it is a case of two to one—against Mrs. Thomas Bell and Mrs. Pleasant—and I propose to stay with my demand.

"I have not been rightly treated. Before going to law I went to Mrs. Bell and Mrs. Pleasant and asked them whether they would settle the matter quietly. They told me to get out of the house; that no one would take up my case and that I could not get any redress anywhere. So I determined to fight the two of them.

"The CALL has always treated me very well and is always inclined to do justice to all. In that 'accident' of mine THE CALL treated the matter in the fairest way. No, it was only an accident as far as they could 'make it so'—that I am convinced. Of course, no one has anything against me except that I was widowed in my youth, as many others have been.

"The fact of the matter is Mrs. Bell is simply dominated over by Mrs. Pleasant. The tie between them is simply one of imitation and custom. No, Mrs. Pleasant did not put up for Mrs. Sarah Althea Terry in the Sharon case, but the money was put up by Thomas Bell, who had a grudge against Sharon. Mrs. Pleasant was the medium of expenditure. I know this from people who got the money for Thomas Bell. But all my life Mrs. Pleasant has occupied the same position of authority in the house of Bell. I have asked her to stand by Bell's children, but she prefers to stand by Mrs. Bell, and so I must fight them both.

"Mrs. Pleasant has probably $50,000 of her own, but she says she has nothing. As a matter of fact she owns half of a fine summer estate two miles from Glen Ellen, the other half being owned by Mrs. Bell. Mrs. Pleasant has given deeds of her property or most of it to a lady friend whom she trusts to hold it for her. The lady is named Mrs. Boone, and was formerly Mrs. Gordon. She holds the deeds in trust, but Mrs. Pleasant and Mrs. Bell that she has nothing, and is entirely dependent upon her for subsistence. Mrs. Pleasant cares nothing for me in comparison with Mrs. Bell.

"It is time something was done. We children are in no position at all. We can barely live at the house on Octavia street under the present conditions. I am determined to fight the thing to the end."

BRADBURY TO BE JAILED. For Spitting in a Street-car He Must Serve in Durance Ville. Millionaire W. B. Bradbury, who spat on the floor of a Sutter-street car several weeks ago in violation of the City ordinance and who was sentenced by Judge Low to serve twenty-four hours in the County Jail, will have to expiate his crime in durance ville.

At the time of his arrest Bradbury manifested a great deal of temper and openly declared his defiance of the powers of the Supervisors to curtail his personal liberty in the matter of spitting where and when he chose to do so.

When Bradbury's appeal was heard by Judge Wallace a very different tone was taken by the prisoner at the bar. He said he did not wish to defy the law, but only desired to have the conviction and right to spit determined by the courts of the country.

Judge Wallace made a review of all the testimony and heard elaborate argument by Attorney O'Brien on behalf of the defendant. After considering the matter for nearly two weeks Judge Wallace sustained Judge Low's decision and Bradbury will be compelled to go to jail.

By Inhaling Gas. Henry Potlitzer, a young man 27 years old, committed suicide yesterday morning by turning on the gas in the washroom of the California Lawn Tennis Club. Potlitzer kept a grocery-store at 9th and Scott streets. Lack of success is surmised to be the cause. He had a key to the law-tennis clubrooms. He stopped the cracks of the door, took off the burner, turned on the gas, and laid down to await death. He was a German, unmarried, and his nearest relatives in the country were two cousins.

ADVANCES made on furniture and pianos, with or without removal. J. Noonan, 1217-1223 Mission.

George R. E. Maxwell of the First National Bank yesterday.

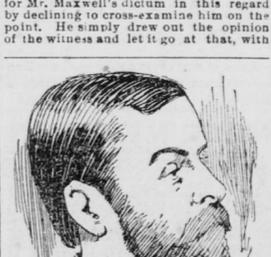

This statement created a sensation, for Mr. Maxwell was testifying about the way in which it appeared to him that the paper had come into existence, and as the witness had been acquainted with the writing of both Boyd and Davis for a great number of years it was assumed by Mr. Knight, attorney for the contestants, that he knew all about the peculiarities of their handwritings.

Attorney J. C. Campbell took exactly the opposite position. He made light of Mr. Maxwell's pretensions to special fitness to sit as a judge of the signature of the dead man, and it was in response to his question that the answer above recorded was given.

Mr. Knight strenuously objected to the delivery of a reply to this question, and the proponents of the will argued that he was unwilling to have his witness bound to a statement as against a man of Mr. Boyd's known high standing in the community. So thoroughly is Mr. Boyd trusted by the people of this community, in which he has transacted business for half a century, that few will be found, Mr. Campbell and his associates say, who will credit the unsupported opinion offered by Mr. Maxwell. To say that the writing looks to be a forgery is one thing, but to flatly accuse another of having committed the forgery, without anything more substantial than a cursory examination of the paper, is quite another matter.

Mr. Campbell exhibited his disrespect for Mr. Maxwell's dictum in the regard of declining to cross-examine him on the point. He simply drew out the opinion of the witness and let it go at that, with the remark that if all his testimony was of equal value he was willing to let it go to the jury for what they would consider it worth.

The proceedings were exceedingly lively from the opening of the case to the time of adjournment. Mr. Maxwell is an exceptionally nervous man and the announcements of the witness stand appear to wear on him seriously. He is constantly jumping up and expostulating to the court that he thinks it necessary for him to explain his answers, and the court is all the time admonishing him of the necessity for coolness and deliberation.

With the aid of a blackboard Mr. Maxwell illustrated what he meant by the "D" in the Davis "D" and the Davis "a" as they appeared in writing that was admitted to be genuine. The Davis "D" has the shaft "above" the loop in the manuscript form, the "D" is angular and firm and the "a" is always a prominent letter in the name.

Touching the Davis "a" many questions were asked, and taking what is known as
