

WHAT JOHN L. SULLIVAN WOULD DO

Writes for "The Call" Upon His Race for Mayor of Boston.

HONESTY THE MOTTO OF THE EX-CHAMPION.

Reforms in City Government Will Be Made if the Big Fellow Is Elected, but His Chief Aim Is to Down Mr. Quincy.

BOSTON, the city of culture and beans, may have a prize-fighter for Mayor, and the people are aghast at the prospect.

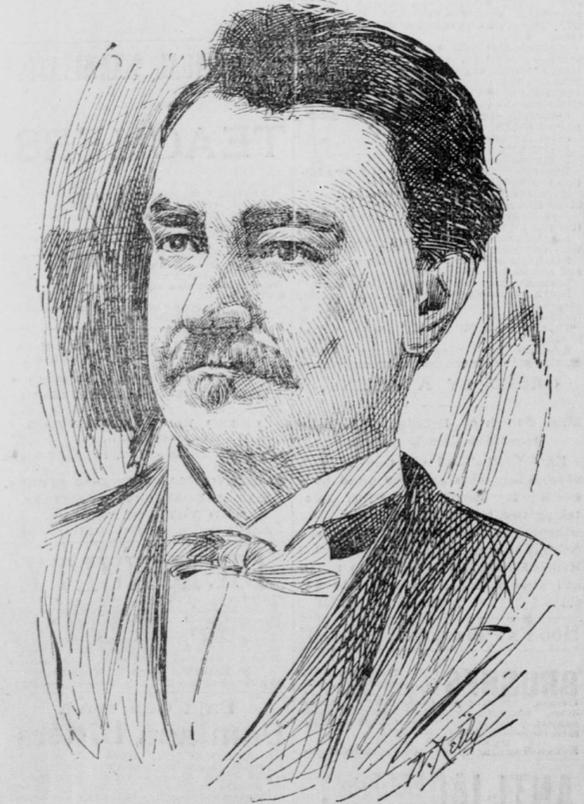

John L., however, does not expect to be elected, and does not run with that point in view.

When he arrived at the hall the pugilist greeted several of the people on the platform, and stepping forward held out his hand to the Mayor.

And now that it is over, Boston marvels that Quincy lives to tell the tale. Why he was not felled to the earth then and there is a mystery which none vouchsafe to explain.

More interesting than all this, however, is the prospect of what would happen with John L. Sullivan at the helm of a municipality.

BOSTON, MASS., Sept. 18.—"What would I do if I am elected Mayor? My theory of life in this world is fair play for every human being on top of the earth, and I will work on this principle if I am elected Mayor.

it to 'em, too. I'll be a marked exception and won't say a word about the silver question, and I'm mighty certain the people will thank me for that.

"If I was Mayor I'd try to do something for the poor women that have to work for a living. If any one came to me, for instance, and wanted permission to build a street railroad in the city I was Mayor of I'd say to him: 'Will you give free rides to the poor washerwomen and casings and sweatshop-workers, and all others that are honest and live by the sweat of their brows?'

"I don't believe in monopolies or trusts or corporations. I believe in equal treatment for the man of $18,000,000 and the man of $18, and you bet your life I'd give day: some of us will be put in the ground some of us will be cremated, some of us will be put in elaborate mausoleums, and some of us in plain boxes, but when we're all planted, in the end we are all equal, and no one is better than the other fellow. I'd go on this principle if I were Mayor and treat everybody right and do the square thing by 'em all, whether they had any stuff or not.

"I don't believe in monopolies or trusts or corporations. I believe in equal treatment for the man of $18,000,000 and the man of $18, and you bet your life I'd give

"Do you think I'd allow any such monkey business, if I was Mayor, as that which happened here in Boston a few days ago, when the management of one of the nice, big brick bugs notified the authorities of a charitable institute for poor children that there wasn't any room in the school for their inmates—that all the places were filled by the children of the richer folks who live in the vicinity? Well, I guess not.

FIGHTING THE DREAD SCOURGE

Southern Cities Try in Vain to Check the Yellow Fever.

DEATHS AND SOME NEW CASES.

Troops Aid in Enforcing the Most Rigid Quarantine Regulations.

TROCHA DRAWN NORTH OF MOBILE.

Many Persons Who Attempt to Leave That Way Are Turned Back by the Guards.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Sept. 19.—A trifling improvement in the fever situation marked the close of the day's work of the Board of Health.

Deaths.—E. Harmon and Santa Graffato. New cases.—Marie Dubois, Rafael Fournien, C. H. Gorman. —Melchior.

The fatal case of E. Harmon, a mulatto, was reported in last night's dispatches as one of the new cases, and was said to be a genuine type of the disease.

The woman Graffato was an Italian, and as soon as her case was pronounced steps were taken to have her removed to the hospital, where arrangements had been made to isolate her.

The Melchior case is that of a boy in the St. Claude-street Square, where the first six cases in New Orleans were reported.

prise this evening when it was learned that he had succumbed to the disease.

As a general rule the patients who are suffering with yellow fever are reported to-night to be improving, with the exception of Dr. Lovell, whose condition is not considered satisfactory.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 18.—There has been an accumulation of cases to-day. The president of the Board of Health stated that the physicians recognized and reported promptly the suspicious cases many of these cases would have been announced several days ago.

The number announced to-day is eleven, making eighteen in all so far announced, of which number three have died, two of which were previously reported and one was to-day discharged.

Frank Donaldson, one of the day's new cases, died to-night.

L. Swaves, the Associated Press operator at the Register office, was taken sick at 6:20 o'clock to-night.

There has been a quarantine line drawn from Chicasaque Creek, mouth of Mobile, some five miles northwesterly to the Mississippi line, so as to provide an absolute embargo against Mobilians penetrating by land into the interior of Alabama.

They encountered the guards at the trocha and were stopped there. At 6 o'clock most of the immigrants are still there in the open air, waiting to return to the city, and not able to go further.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 18.—Secretary Egan of the State Board of Health telegraphed the board from the Cairo yellow fever quarantine to-night that the two cases at the Marine Hospital at Cairo have been pronounced suspicious by the State Board of Health physicians.

OCEAN SPRINGS, Miss., Sept. 18.—Since last reporter's three deaths have occurred here, Walter F. Bransford and Miss Mamie Goodrich, both of yellow fever, and Oscar Elder, formerly from Michigan, who has been sick about twelve days. His ailment was not pronounced yellow fever.

TROOPS ORDERED OUT.

Will Protect Railroad Property and Enforce the Quarantine Regulations in Mississippi.

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 18.—Governor McLaurin has ordered out the Capital Light Guards of this city to protect the property of the railroads in this county.

It was learned this morning that in addition to tearing up the tracks of the Alabama and Vicksburg Railroad, a short distance west of the city, reported at midnight, the crowd also burned a trestle on the same road a few miles west of the city.

Meridian having consented to allow trains to pass through that city the Alabama and Vicksburg regular train passed here at 6 p. m. yesterday going to Meridian. The speed of the train was not greater

AN OPEN DEFIANCE OF THE LAW

The "Solid Eight" Ousted Supervisors Take forcible Possession.

DECLARE THEMSELVES TO BE THE ONLY LEGAL BODY.

The Committee of the New Board, by Persistent Pruning, Gets Within the Dollar Limit on the Tax Levy.

All was not smooth sailing for the new Board of Supervisors yesterday. When they returned to their chambers after partaking of lunch, they found that if they desired to hold another meeting they must either oust the old board literally or find another room.

They took the latter horn of the dilemma and met in the committee-room of the board, while the solid eight, who are supposed to be private citizens now by court decree, occupied the easy chairs in the assembly room and went through the semblance of transacting business for the city.

Ex-Supervisor Britt started the ball rolling by taking forcible possession of the poll-list in the clerk's office. Armed with this document he proceeded to the assembly chamber, followed by ex-Supervisors Devany, Haskins, Sheehan, Morton, Smith and Rivers. These gentlemen took formal possession of the chamber, and John A. Scott was appointed bailiff.

For a while it looked as if there would be a semblance of the old game of "pussy wants a corner," as it was supposed by the old board that their seats would be in demand by the members who had replaced them. If any member desired to speak to a colleague he moved cautiously from his seat and kept an eye on the chair, ready to make a run for it if necessary.

There was every indication of fight showing in their set faces and it was the expressed determination of every one of them to hold his seat against all comers, policemen with clubs excepted. They had been advised by their attorneys to hold to their seats, as they were the legal and only Supervisors of the city of San Francisco, and they said they would not get out for anybody.

But with all the assumption of dignity and indifference there was an air of nervousness which showed plainly in all the actions of the men who had been ousted by law.

After sitting quietly for an hour waiting for an attempt to eject them, Devany moved that ex-Supervisor Britt should occupy the chair, and as there was no objection the motion was carried out without being put. The gavel gave a double rap on the desk and then rattled to the floor from the nervous hand of Britt, who recovered his composure under cover of a joke at the expense of the new board.

Devany, who seemed to be master of ceremonies, then moved to appoint Robert Barton, an ex-janitor of the City Hall, as clerk. The board was now ready for business and set to work to make a tax levy. Secretary Godchaux of the Board of Health was called upon to give the board an estimate of the requirements of his department for the ensuing year, and it then developed that in order to be on the safe side the estimates were given to both boards.

Godchaux asked for $135,000, but he made a grave error. He referred to the body sitting before him as "the old board." Then arose Devany, in all his statuesque dignity, and demanded that he explain what and whom he meant by "the old board." The trembling secretary had scarcely extricated himself from this dilemma when he made another faux pas by incidentally saying that he "had presented his estimates to the Board of Supervisors last night."

Now Britt maintained the dignity of the eight by demanding, in tones that sent a chill through the frame of the secretary, what he meant by speaking of any other body as being the "Board of Supervisors." In the excitement following this demand Godchaux cleared himself of contempt and then proceeded with his details on motion of the master of ceremonies, "took it under advisement."

Devany now asked if any one was present representing the Board of Education, and was told by Chairman Britt that Director Waller would be there in a short time. As nothing further appeared a recess was taken, during which one of the eight left their seats, until the school board could be heard from.

Waller kept the august body waiting about fifteen minutes and then started a flow of oratory, reciting the needs and requirements of the school system, that bid fair to emulate the brook famed in verse as going on forever. As he expressed it, he "dilated" freely.

In the course of his remarks Waller said to Britt: "The gentleman that sat in the seat that you now occupy agreed with me."

"Whom do you mean?" hastily asked Britt. "I mean," said Waller, "Mr. Denman." "Oh, yes," responded Britt. "I have heard of him. He is always looking for office. Pass on."

"Well," continued Waller, "he was in your seat yesterday."

"Well, I am in my seat to-day; pass on," was the response and the incident closed.

At times during the meeting of the afternoon solicitors inquiries were made regarding the health of the missing four. It was feared that they must be very ill, as they did not appear at the meeting.

After Waller had finished his oration and given his figures his plea met the fate of the Board of Health's request and it was "taken under advisement."

There being no further business apparent another recess was taken, but the effort to appear at ease was a failure. Devany kept eying the reporters' table, Morton calmly stroked his beard, Sheehan watched the door, while Britt busied himself with papers that seemed to need a vast amount of consideration.

An incident broke the monotony of the recess when two locksmiths appeared and began preparations to tamper with the locks. They were stopped by two police officers and the last hope of the eight to hold possession except by personal occupancy was gone. If they wanted to keep the room they must remain in it and at once preparations for a siege were made.

There was a suspicious bulging about the pockets of Bailiff Scott when he returned from a visit to the out-fair, and a gleam of satisfaction in the eyes of the members as he passed along and gave them some comforting words. One by one the eight went out and dined, and nothing further occurred to relieve the strain until work was brought in that the new board had adjourned. Immediately ex-Supervisors Devany and Haskins hurried to the committee-room and installed themselves, apparently very busy signing committee reports. This occupation kept them until the new board returned, and it looked at last as if the trouble hoped for by the Solid Eight would begin, but again they were asea!

When Mayor Peelan reached the scene he called the members of the new board around him and told them that the only place for them was in the upper chamber, and to prevent the intrusion of outsiders he stationed two stalwart policemen at the foot of the stairs, with instructions to permit no one but the new board and newspaper men to go up.

As the members of the board were assembling in the room after dinner
