

event of annexation, we will retain the advantages that have accrued under the reciprocity treaty. The Republican party of the United States instituted reciprocal trade relations with foreign powers. Negotiations along this line are now pending with France. According to the importance of our trade will be the benefits granted to us by the United States. We will give and they will return. What have we seen in six short years? The reciprocity treaty with free sugar, under the McKinley tariff, sugar paying a duty of a cent and a fraction under the Wilson tariff, sugar at two cents and a fraction under the McKinley tariff. A reaction will surely follow. I do not believe it will be to borrow trouble about what will happen if we fail.

Annexation will change the fiscal affairs of Hawaii. You should understand that increased taxation must follow annexation. I wish to pay a tribute of admiration to the men who have willingly taxed themselves tens of thousands of dollars to promote annexation on which their fortunes are heard from Hawaii to Niihau because of the assessments of the Tax Collector for the support of what is said to be the best government these islands ever had. Let me say to you that annexation will revolutionize the support of the system on which their fortunes are heard from Hawaii to Niihau because of the assessments of the Tax Collector for the support of what is said to be the best government these islands ever had.

It will be said, because of the record I have made, that I should be one of the first to favor such a move. I am not a man of such a just and humane system of contract labor, where the conditions of the contract are well understood. I warn you that annexation will increase the sharpest kind of competition along certain lines. Men will come here to undertake the mechanical arts. Every clerk and counter on which their fortunes will feel the competition keenly. The field laborer will be the only one not to feel competition. The scale of wages will be the same as in the labor market will be the field laborer, and the same as in the labor market will be the field laborer, and the same as in the labor market will be the field laborer.

Permit me to say to you that, as a Hawaiian, I am indignant at the manner in which we are here on the 17th of January, 1893. As an offspring of American parentage I am ashamed of that action. I believe that all that has followed that fatal day—and all that has followed laid upon us during the past four years—has been because of the false step taken on that day. It seems to me that all that has been undertaken by the present Government has been because the men in power took counsel of their fears rather than of their good judgment.

Anti-annexationists should have the courage of their convictions; their silence now may cause regrets later on. If there is one thing more wrong than to be addressed in the Hawaiian language, it is to be shown by them under wrongs. I want to know that your patience must surely meet reward, sooner or later; that if justice and truth have been trampled to earth, they must rise; that a good time is coming. I would excite in the breasts of all true Hawaiians the same sentiment. What I have said I believe, and have said it for the purpose of giving you all food for thought. It is my duty as a citizen to speak for you to urge action in all lawful ways to preserve and perpetuate Hawaiian independence.

At the close of Mr. Carter's address on motion of F. J. Testa, who acted as interpreter throughout the memorial, which had been read in Hawaiian and English, was adopted amid immense cheering, and the gathering dispersed with farewells and with farewells to the Hawaiian flag and independence.

However, the Visiting Statesman Enjoyed Himself and Danced in the Quadrille with Mrs. Dole.

Correspondence of THE CALL. HONOLULU, HAWAII, Oct. 12.—Senator Morgan left this afternoon with the best wishes of all classes of political friends and foes. It is believed that no man ever left the islands so full of information about Hawaiian affairs as he did.

While the greater portion of this voluminous mass of statistics and impressions has been gathered from official sources the Senator from Alabama, after annexation, has been permitted to see a little for himself. He has been feasted and entertained by his friends, but the Hawaiians, unfortunately for himself and themselves, have held aloof from him.

It was hoped that they would present themselves at the President's state ball last evening given in the Senator's honor, but their detestation of the government and their aloha for the former occupants of the palace kept them apart.

The State quadrille was danced by Senator Morgan and Mrs. Dole, President Dole and Miss Morgan, United States Minister Sewall and Mrs. A. Francis Wood and Mrs. C. P. Parker, Hon. E. M. Hatch, Hawaiian Minister to Washington, and Mrs. S. M. Damon (wife of the Minister of Finance), Chief Justice Judd and Mrs. W. F. Allen, Captain Nichols of the Bennington, and Mrs. Nichols.

EXPLORE CAVENTISH RETURNS. During the Year spent in East Africa His Expedition Was Well Treated. LONDON, Oct. 19.—Cavendish, the nephew of the Duke of Devonshire, who with a companion, Lieutenant Andrews, has been exploring Somaliland, East Africa, at the head of an expedition composed of ninety Ascari, and who, with his party, was reported to have been massacred by the natives, has arrived safely in London from Zanzibar, the Sikany, which place the expedition reached on August 5 last. The explorer had a remarkable journey, lasting more than a year, in which he traversed much of the unexplored country between Berber and Mombasa. He and his only European companion, Lieutenant Andrews, were everywhere respected by the natives, and the Boranis, with their bows and arrows, and the ferocious warriors of King Menelik of Abyssinia, and the expedition was frequently begged to remain in the country and defend its inhabitants against the invaders.

LANDS ELECTION SEEMS CERTAIN

Leading Residents of Sacramento Express Their Views.

The Republican Candidate for Mayor Steadily Gaining Strength.

His Published "Declaration of Intentions" Meets With General Favor.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 19.—William Land's interview, published in an evening paper here, has done much toward adding strength to the already popular candidacy. It is a straightforward business-like talk of a straightforward business-like man. His review of municipal affairs discloses a familiarity with and a knowledge of the city's needs which few men possess. The following interviews with some of Sacramento's leading men show the general trend of feeling throughout the city:

F. B. Adams of Adams, Booth & Co. said: "That interview has my cordial endorsement. It has the right ring to it, and let me tell you, when William Land has finished his term of office the people of Sacramento will point to him and say: 'There goes the best Mayor Sacramento ever had.'"

W. H. Hatfield, ex-Assemblyman, said: "I read Mr. Land's interview in the Bee very carefully, and must say that it was greatly to his credit and will be the means of helping him to his election."

Senator F. Ennis, president Capital City Wheelmen, said: "That interview means more to Mr. Land than anything yet accomplished in his canvass. It voices the sentiment of the wheelmen and at the same time gives the city the assurance of a careful and economical administration of municipal affairs."

William Henderson, of Henderson, Brown & Co., wholesale produce-dealers, said: "When a man talks like that he means business, and I am doing everything I can to secure the election of William Land."

Flood V. Flint of Leeman & Co., cop factors: "The interview of Mr. Land, as published in the Bee and Union, should satisfy every man in Sacramento who desires to see the city prosper. I have heard many favorable comments on it, and believe it has virtually assured his election."

"Come back here a moment," continued Mr. Flint, and he led the way to his private office. "There are three prominent men in here talking and we will see how they stand."

The three gentlemen referred to were Rudolph Wittenberg, George C. Brewer and William Leeman, all wealthy hop men owning property in Sacramento. Mr. Wittenberg responded to the question of how he stood on the Mayor's fight by saying:

"Why, it was only this morning that I got two votes for Land and I intend getting many more. As a Republican I say what Mr. Brewer said: 'He will be the next Mayor all right.'"

Mr. Leeman replied: "Flint's interview will do for me the firm."

How W. H. Beckman, ex-Railroad Commissioner, president of the People's Bank, said: "That was a very good interview and has helped Mr. Land greatly in his fight."

Hon. F. R. Dray of the Sacramento Bank was next seen and this is what he said: "Did you see when ex-President Harrison said, 'Good local purposes and management are not the worst for being associated with government purposes and measure?' Well, sir, those are my sentiments in a nutshell. Not only are local purposes none the worse for being associated with national ones, but the better for it; and a Republican I say what we want to do is to keep our Republican line in life. If we can do that William Land, our nominee, will be surely elected."

Colonel El R. Hamilton and W. P. Coleman of the same bank gave similar expressions, and predicted the election of Mr. Land and further prosperity of the city under his management.

Robert Richardson of Crocker & Co.'s, a member of the Republican County Committee, said: "I am an ardent supporter of William Land, and when I read that interview I laid the paper down and said, 'William Land is Sacramento's next Mayor.' I have heard fifty men say the same thing since it was published."

Eugene S. Elkus of L. Elkus & Co., wholesale clothing store, said: "I have just returned from New York and Chicago, and what struck me more forcibly than anything in the interview was Mr. Land's reference to the Trinidad bismen. As a matter of fact, all streets now being relaid in New York and Chicago are of this material. If Mr. Land carries out the plans set down in his statement to the Bee, Sacramento will profit greatly."

BRIGHTER TO-DAY THAN IT HAS EVER BEEN BEFORE.

MANITOBA SCHOOL QUESTION.

Text of the Finding in the Controversy Based on the Report of Mgr. Del Val.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 19.—A letter has been received in this city which purports to contain the text of the finding in the school question, based on the report of Mgr. Merry del Val.

The finding as outlined in the letter is regarded as taking a favorable view of the settlement reached between the Federal and local Governments. It states that "wherein these differed, but do not clash, the church desired that there shall be harmony."

This is interpreted to mean that both church and state have an interest in education, one in religious and the other in secular phases, and where both can attain their object without a sacrifice of cardinal principles in the establishment of schools, these may be adopted by the church.

It is said the report would have been made public a fortnight ago, but was stayed pending the arrival in Rome of Archbishop Brodie, who according to common report, bears a letter to the Holy Father expressing the views of Mgr. Langevin and other Canadian Bishops.

It is further alleged that the Bishops of Curtis, San Francisco, who according to common report, bears a letter to the Holy Father expressing the views of Mgr. Langevin and other Canadian Bishops.

Historic Relic IS DULY HONORED. Figurehead of the Old Sloop Hartford Given to the State of Connecticut. No Losses in Membership Recorded During the Past Twelve Months.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL. HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 19.—Amid the boom of cannon and the cheers of the people the figurehead, representing the genius of war, which adorned the old sloop-of-war Hartford while she passed through the rain of shot and shell in Mobile Bay, was today set up in the place of honor in the beautiful State Capitol. The historic relic had been presented to the city of Hartford by the United States Navy Department.

High honor was paid to the old craft, the brave Admiral Farragut and the part taken by the commander and vessel in the battle of Mobile Bay, August 5, 1864. The figurehead was escorted through the streets on a handsomely decorated float to the Capitol building, where impressive exercises were held. The weather was all that could be desired. The city was in gala attire, public and private buildings being festooned with flags and bunting. The formal presentation to the city of the figurehead was made by Captain Casper of the Godrich. The orator of the day was United States Senator Joseph R. Hawley of Connecticut. The poem, "The Bay Fight," was recited by Hon. Joseph Barbour, and the exercises closed with the singing by the assemblage of "America."

STELZNER GIVEN THE DECISION

Another Defeat Added to Joe McAuliffe's Long List.

Sorry Showing Made by the Mission Lad at Los Angeles.

Save for a Single Knockdown His Work Is Stagnant and Cruel.

Special Dispatch to THE CALL.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 19.—Big Joe McAuliffe added another number to his startling string of defeats to-night when Jack Stelzner of St. Louis received the decision of a fifteen-round contest.

The big fellow was slow and awkward from the beginning to the end and allowed Stelzner to slowly but surely batter him down. It was anybody's fight, however, at the end of the fourteenth round, and the referee announced that three additional rounds would have to be fought unless the pace was changed in the next one. Stelzner changed the pace.

At the opening of the last round Stelzner tapped Joe lightly on the forehead. The big fellow tried to respond, but his attempts were painfully weak and ill directed. There was a rapid exchange of short-arm punches and then Stelzner put a stiff left on Joe's face and followed it with a terrible right punch, straight on the nose. A crimson stream flowed down over Joe's brawny chest and the crowd yelled. Stelzner followed the blow with several light ones, which McAuliffe seemed to lack the power to avoid, and this was kept up until the round ended. The referee promptly awarded the fight to Stelzner, who had escaped without punishment and was fresh and strong.

The men came into the ring at 9:45 o'clock. McAuliffe had Bob Compton and Professor "Younn Dutchy" in his corner, and Stelzner was looked after by Dan Long, Frank Barton and Jack Carter. Stelzner weighed 175 pounds and looked to be trained to a superior condition. McAuliffe was fat and white and weighed 220. McAuliffe was 10 to 6 favorite before the fight, but after the tenth round money went in even.

The first round was tame. Stelzner did most of the leading in this as well as in all of the following rounds, but none of his blows were very harmful. Stelzner did some clever ducking and foot work. The men went at it viciously in the second and Stelzner avoided some heavy lunges. It was remarked that McAuliffe was faster than in any of his late fights, but Stelzner avoided his blows and landed steadily.

McAuliffe had a shade the better of the third round, but Stelzner steadily avoided his heaviest blows and landed constantly. From this on until the eighth the fighting was tame. In the opening of the eighth round Stelzner gave Joe a hot rib roast and McAuliffe landed a left hook on Stelzner's neck, which sent the St. Louis boy to the floor. He was up promptly and made a good fight during the rest of the round.

Stelzner forced the fighting from the tenth round and landed on Joe's chest and face repeatedly. The big fellow looked distressed and seldom led. McAuliffe attempted to recover in the thirteenth, but failed to land a hard blow in any of the mixups.

There were two good preliminary bouts. Joe Baker of Denver, a lad built like a jath, was put on with Charles Smith, who weighed 160 pounds and was the champion of his brother Billy, the champion. Smith got the decision.

Phil Green of Oakland was having a hard time of it with a local colored lad named Whitehead, and the referee gave him the decision because Whitehead persisted in falling before he was hit. John Brink, who reentered the McAuliffe-Stelzner combat, gave the best of satisfaction.
