OPPOSES ANNEXATION.

The Guardian of Princess Kaiulani Speaks Strongly Against It.

Says the United States Cannot Conscientiously Absorb the Islands.

The guardian of Princess Kaiulani during her stay in England, Theophilus Davies, accompanied by his son, George H. Davies, reached the city yesterday and is staying at the Palace.

When seen by a Call reporter last evening he denied that the Princess, who is expected here the first part of the week, is coming for any political purpose.

"I had thought there was any political significance in the visit of the Princess and her mother, the Princess Kaiulani, to Honolulu I should have advised against it.

"The Princess has no thought of politics in the trip. She is simply going back to her home, which she has not seen for eight years. At the time of her visit to Honolulu a residence for her was in the course of construction, and it is now finished. This she will occupy during her stay in the islands.

"She with her father, A. S. Cleghorn, reached New York the 16th, on which day, by the way, the Princess was 22 years of age. They spent two or three days in New York and then went to Washington. When they will reach here is not known. 'I am not here to meet the Princess, but am on my regular trip to the islands to look after my sugar business. While I am not in any way interested in the politics of Hawaii, I do not see how the officers of the Government and my political friends I am opposed to annexation as I have always been. I don't think it would be good for the United States or the Hawaiian people, and I don't see how the United States has the moral right to take the islands. In face of the appeal of the natives I don't see how it can be done conscientiously without further investigation.

"I believe it would be a serious step for the United States and don't see how American statesmen with American principles could think of it. The natives want their own flag and the English in Hawaii are for the most part opposed to annexation. Those who desire it are chiefly those engaged in commercial and agricultural pursuits. The movement was started on account of a revision of feeling against the completion of the Government, which, I regret to say, was great, as it is in all governments. However, I feel that the remedy sought for the evil is the wrong one. It is done, and the United States has no moral right to annex it for political purposes and not from reason."

J. D. Arnold En Route. Mr. J. D. Arnold, the ladies' tailor so many years with Arnold, Constantine & Co. of New York, who has been engaged by the Emporium and Golden Rule Bazaar of this city as head designer and cutter in their Ladies Tailoring Department, left New York last Thursday and will arrive here Monday.

An Exciting Ride. Car No. 4 of the California-street line got away from the gripman Thursday morning by the cable slipping from the grip just as the start was made for the hill toward Kearny street. There were twenty passengers in the car, and while the conductor and gripman kept the brakes one of them rang the bell. The car careened and was headed toward Sansome street was rescued. A man jumped off at Stockton street and was thrown heavily, but luckily escaped serious injury. That no casualty occurred was due to the fact that few vehicles were on the street at the time.

CHILDREN INOCULATED WITH EQUISINE. An Experiment With D'Evelyn's "Prevention of Drunkenness" on Boys From the Youth's Directory.

For the past three weeks Dr. d'Evelyn, at the suggestion of Frank J. Kane of the Pacific Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and Animals, has been inoculating boys of the Youth's Directory with the equisine which he claims will eradicate the desire for intoxicants from the human system. Many boys ranging from 6 to 14 years of age have been taken from the Youth's Directory as well as other similar institutions to the office of Kane and there inoculated with the preventive. The boys chosen were the sons of men who are known to be victims of the alcoholic beverages. The children will be submitted to the operation but once, and it is hoped the desire for stimulants will be forever eradicated from their systems. Secretary Kane has been interested for many years in the welfare of young boys and men who have started on the wrong road and the tests have been watched by him with great interest. The claim has been made that drunkenness is hereditary and not acquired by habit, but it is also acknowledged that company in which the young may mingle will lead them either to a life of sobriety or vice. The system used is on the same line as that whereby subjects are vaccinated for the prevention of smallpox, and in the natural course of things the result can only be determined by analogy. If the desire to be drinkers is in the blood of the young men who are submitted to the test, it is thought by those who have carried out the experiment in the interest of humanity that the former desire has been done away with and that the boys will be better men in later years.

As there are the first tests made on boys the result is anxiously looked forward to. Of course we do not necessarily have to state before the result can be positively stated either one way or the other, but it is hoped that the wished-for end will have been attained. The boys who are so treated seem willing that the desire to drink shall be done away with, if any exist, and seem themselves anxious that the results will be satisfactory to all. Dr. d'Evelyn is anxious that the experiments should be tried on the young men who are submitted to the test, it is thought by those who have carried out the experiment in the interest of humanity that the former desire has been done away with and that the boys will be better men in later years.

When maturity is established and growth confirmed the child thus guided has a good average possibility of living distinct from its inheritance, but we would advocate a more potent intervention, convinced beyond skepticism of the alcoholic condition of the blood, stimulated by the results of its artificially prepared component equisine in the treatment of adult alcoholism, recognizing the alcoholic ferment superinduced in vitro by chemical and organic reactions. We are prepared to carry our investigations along these lines until proximate principles are isolated, but even now our technique permits of therapeutical application, and our victims of inherited alcoholism, with their hereditary of vitiated blood, are placed under treatment, and that, too, with a confidence which permits us to forget the rescue of hundreds of these vastly too numerous cases. But further convinced (as already beforetime admitted) the effects of alcoholism are so interwoven, so universal, that we do not consider it our duty to exclude any, but to extend to all children the antidote which will succumb to their disease, some alcoholic offspring, overcome by saturation, be born, vegetate, die?—why, then, deny to these sick the best results of our experience and investigation and, eliminating the disease, secure an immunity which proves a blessing to the sufferer and determines a purer, brighter, healthier inheritance for his offspring?

I. Friedman, a pawnbroker at 251 Third street, was arrested Friday night by Detectives Ryan and O'Dea and Special Officer Lewin of the Southern Pacific Company, on warrants sworn out by Lewin in Judge Conlan's court charging him with receiving stolen goods and with failing to make a proper entry in his books, as required by law.

September 30, a bonded car on the Southern Pacific was broken into at a point east of Ozden and twenty dozen pairs of gloves, valued at $20 per dozen wholesale, and a lot of clothing consigned to Kohlberg, Strauss & Folsom of this city were stolen. The robbery was not discovered till the train arrived at Sacramento, and the Southern Pacific detectives were immediately notified. On October 15 Detective Crowley of the Southern Pacific saw some of the stolen gloves in the store of Goldstein & Co., 822 Market street, and on inquiry was informed that they had purchased eighteen dozen pairs from a man named Prior. Two dozen pairs had been sold, and Crowley seized the remaining sixteen dozen.

When Friedman was questioned he said he bought the gloves from two men on October 12 or 13.

Wednesday last a boy was arrested by Detective Ryder of the Southern Pacific, and was locked up in the tanks at the City Prison. The boy made a confession implicating two men in the robbery, and the police are now trying to find them.

Run Over and Killed. Fatal Accident to John Fignoi, a Boy Eight Years of Age, on King Street.

John Fignoi, a boy 8 years of age, whose parents live at 609 King street, was fatally injured by a runaway team yesterday afternoon.

G. Rossi, a teamster living at 629 King street, had his team and wagon in the yard of his house. While he was talking to his wife his children and two or three boys, among them Fignoi, got into the wagon.

Rossi's 12-year-old daughter took hold of the reins and drove the team into the street. The boy Fignoi tried to take the reins from her and the team became frightened and started to run. The wagon collided with a post and Fignoi was thrown out, one of the wheels passing over his head and fracturing his skull.

The patrol wagon was summoned and the unconscious boy was taken to the Receiving Hospital, but before reaching there he died.

The father of the boy visited the Coroner's last night and waived an inquest, as he was satisfied his son's death was the result of an accident.

Wants His Money Back. C. E. Bowen, a guest at the Russ House, score to a complaint in Judge Low's court Friday charging F. W. Handy, president of the Yukon and Copper River Transportation Company, with obtaining money by false nomination of a candidate for United States Senator, and in both of these years I accepted such nomination. In 1886, after my nomination, a union was made with the Democratic party to support Hon. W. J. Bryan. I helped to make that union at St. Louis.

Believing that since that action of the party conditions are changed and that instructions by a State convention in favor of any candidate for United States senator tend to complicate the situation, and being desirous of removing any embarrassment which might thus result, I desire to say that I have long since determined to inform the party that I shall not allow my name to come before the next State convention. Please communicate this message to the committee and oblige, yours very truly, THOMAS V. CATOR.

The People's party has in the past called its State conventions at an early date, usually in May, but under the provisions of the new primary law the next convention will probably be set for July.

The members of the executive committee are fifteen in number, distributed as follows: Chairman, E. M. Wardall, Los Angeles; secretary, R. E. Bush, Alameda; treasurer, J. E. Camp, Sacramento; C. H. Castle, Merced; M. E. Dittmar, Shasta; J. M. Gibson, Alameda; Frank Houston, Tehama; John S. Dore, Fresno; H. A. Mason, Santa Clara; John W. Keegan, Sonoma; Carleton H. Johnson, George D. Gillespie, John C. Gore, A. B. Kinne, San Francisco.
