WAR INQUIRY WILL NOT BE WHITEWASH

Miles, Alger, Brooke and Shafter Will Receive Their Share of Blame in the Report.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—The Herald's Washington correspondent sends the following: President McKinley will have in his possession the full report of the War Commission within the next ten days. This report, it is asserted, will not be a whitewash of the army administration. It will be unanimous on all essential points. It will declare that the primary trouble is due to a lack of proper military organization.

It will show that Secretary Alger was weak, especially in his relations with Major General Miles, but it will not find him responsible for camp "horrors." Subordinate officers will be blamed for conditions which existed with respect to these matters. Major General Miles will be criticized for his conduct before, during and since the war.

It will show that General Miles was directed by the Secretary to make an inspection trip of all camps, but that he informed Alger that he was in the habit of making out his own orders.

It is also stated that the Secretary should never have permitted Miles to go to Santiago, though an observation of this kind may not be included in the report.

Coming down to the beef controversy, the commission will find that General Miles' charges were unfounded. No fault will be found with General Shafter, except with respect to points which he in his testimony admitted. General Brooke will be criticized for conditions which existed at Camp Thomas, and the medical department will be blamed for lack of inspections and failure to carry out proper sanitary regulations.

The report will also show that Congress was responsible for the equipment of soldiers with black powder, as the ordnance department did not get in time the necessary appropriations for smokeless powder.

She had shot herself through the heart with one of her father's revolvers. Two letters which she had written to friends indicate that she was laboring under the hallucination that she and her family were being pursued by some phantom.

The bill is a strong feeling that it should be made to apply to quartz mining, a feeling, however, which is not shared by some of the members from the Rossland and Siccan districts.

A Self-Propelling Boat.

In the Christmas number of Pearson's some interesting particulars are furnished as to the history of a boat that propels itself, and to which the inventor, Mr. Linden of the Zoological Station at Naples, has given the designation of the Autonaut. Without the help of engines or steam or electricity or "man power" this curious vessel propels itself by means of wind and wave at a speed, it seems, of from three to four miles an hour. Singular enough, and the rougher the weather, the faster the moves, the explanation being that she is propelled by the action of the waves. The secret of her propulsion lies in a couple of engines, arranged, not unlike gridirons, fixed, one at the bow and the other at the stern, about level with the keel. These engines are made of the ingenious inventor calls "feathering fins" and it is stated that he was led to "discover" by closely observing the motion of fish's fins, especially the dolphins' tail. In the case of the Autonaut, the fins are made of metal, and rebound back of their own elasticity. Hence, it is that the waves, striking the fins, are propelled the strange craft.—London Telegraph.
