

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Women's Ready Made Suits $12.00.

Lively selling for the last few weeks has left many odd lines and sizes in suits on our racks. We have selected Monday to close out the entire lot—over one hundred suits. All sizes from 32 to 44 are represented. The styles are all this season's best sellers, and there is a choice of some very well effects among them. A splendid assortment of colors are here for your choosing, including the new grays, browns, castor, blue, grays and black. Over one-half of these suits are lined throughout with plain and changeable taffeta silk. There is a choice for early comers.

Silk Waists

$3.75 Each.

A variety of silk shirt waists, including colors and black, $5.00 and $6.00 values, all reduced to $3.75 for Monday.

White Duck Skirts

75 Cents Each.

These are made from good quality white water-shrunk duck, with scroll of colored embroidered braid around the bottom of skirt; all sizes.

Tan Jackets.

$7.50 Each.

Just the right weight for summer and early fall wear. They are made of fine grade tan cover cloth, lined all through with taffeta silk, inlaid velvet collar; sizes 32 to 44.

R. D. Davis & Co.

Geary and Grant Avenue, San Francisco.

DOGS AS BAROMETERS.

They Are Also Useful to Lake Skippers in Case of Fog.

Masters of steamers and tug barges on the lakes have a fondness for dogs, and in dozens of the boats running between Lake Erie ports and upper lake ports dogs are carried. Sailors generally show an inclination for pets, but the dog is something more than pet on the lakes. He is a valuable member of the crew. He is considered as trustworthy as a barometer in giving notice of an approaching storm. Most of these dogs are cowards in storms. Occasionally a captain finds a dog that is not afraid of heavy weather and seems to enjoy the rolling or pitching of the boat, but as a rule dogs are as afraid of a gale as a woman in a storm. One day before a storm hunt for a hiding place. "I had a dog that was as much like a woman as it was possible for an animal to be," said a captain who has carried a dog with him for nearly a quarter of a century. "He could tell a storm was coming long before I could notice it, and often before the barometer would change. He would come to me whining and crying and I would pick him up and hold him to my head. He seemed to be asking me to put him ashore or to find a comfortable place for him. I used to carry him in my arms, and when the storm would strike us he would be out of sight, and we often found him hiding under the banks and in corners where he could not see anything and could not be easily seen. I believe if he could have done it he would have jumped into bed and pulled the covers over his head.

"We were always very careful that he didn't get hurt in loading or unloading for he was worth a good deal of money to us. Many a time, when we had a thick fog, I'd hunt for that dog and find him in a corner where he could not see anything and could not be easily seen. I believe if he could have done it he would have jumped into bed and pulled the covers over his head.

"I remember one time we were coming down Lake Superior from Duluth in a boat. We had a dog all the way up, and Jackson, that was his name, was very tired of sailing when we reached Duluth and he tried to jump us, but we couldn't spare him and he stayed with us. We didn't have as many lights in those days as we do now and it was no easy thing to take a boat from the upper end of Lake Superior to Sault Ste. Marie in a fog that was with you all the time.

"Jackson was so tired that he lost all interest in the boat and spent the time sleeping on deck. When we were about abreast of White Point I saw a light that we were outside far enough to be safe, and was not the least bit nervous, suddenly Jackson jumped and ran to the rail and put his paws up as though he expected to look right over to a dock. "I saw him and at once gave the engineer the signal to check, and Jackson barked as though he was immensely pleased. I signaled to stop and yelled to the first mate to get out the lead. Just then I saw a lumber schooner loom up in the fog, and I'll tell you we were so close together when she was so close that we could almost touch her bows. That dog

EASTON, ELDRIDGE & CO. REAL ESTATE AGENTS GENERAL AUCTIONEERS

At Auction!

TUESDAY, JULY 11, AT 12 O'CLOCK NOON.

At Our Salesroom, 638 Market Street.

BUSINESS PROPERTY.
East side (No. 2939 to 2943) Mission st., 43 feet north of Twenty-sixth st.; lot 65x115 feet; 2 front side flats above on Mission st. and house on Lilaac ave.

GOLDEN GATE AVE. INVESTMENT.
South side (No. 1115) Golden Gate ave., 192-6 feet east of Webster st.; lot 27x127 feet; 2 flats of 5 and 4 rooms and cottage of 3 rooms.

FOLSOM ST. LOTS.
East side (Nos. 2450 to 2454) north of Thirtieth; lot 50x80; 2 elegant lots almost in the center of the city.

MISSION HOME.
West side (No. 2622) Harrison st., 235 feet south of Twenty-second; lot 23x125 feet; well-built house, 7 rooms, bath and stable.

COZY MODERN HOME.
West side (No. 20) Diamond st., 198-2 feet south of Seventeenth; lot 24-10x125 feet; modern 2-story house of 4 rooms and bath.

MISSION COTTAGE.
North side (385) Richmond ave., 775 feet east of South ave.; lot 25x100 feet; cozy cottage of 3 rooms.

24TH-ST. BUILDING LOTS.
North side Twenty-fourth st., 280 feet west of Castro; 4x111 each; 2 large nice building lots in nice residential district.

SUNNY CORNER.
Northeast corner of Arm and Dolores sts.; nice lot ready for building; 25x76 feet.

EASTON, ELDRIDGE & CO., Auctioneers, 638 Market St.

had smelled that boat, sure as you're born, and if I hadn't checked there would have been a collision and then a suit, and I would have had hard work to explain why I was not sounding a fog whistle."—Buffalo Correspondence New York Sun.

INHUMAN.
Father's Attempt to Curb Infant Rights by an Invention.
New York is fast becoming a city of great inventors. The man who recently patented a straw hat that screws on has just been outdone by Ira H. George of the borough of Brooklyn. Mr. George is evidently a father himself and knows what it means to have a baby wake up at 4 o'clock every morning and cry until it is rocked back to sleep. He has been greatly impressed by the woes of his neighbors in the borough of baby carriages. Accordingly he has invented and just patented a device by the use of which erring and vociferous infants may be wowed back to sleep without seriously disturbing the slumbers of their parents. The invention consists of a hammock which is to swing between the footposts of the paternal bed. The slightest symptom of infantile unrestiness the hammock can be given a gentle impetus by the paternal foot under the soothing influence of which the inventor guarantees that all disturbing sounds will be hushed and the drowsy god will once more reign in the paternal apartment. It is understood that, in honor of his patriotic invention, Mr. George will be presented with the freedom of the borough of Brooklyn.—Chicago Tribune.

Inharmonious.
"No, we couldn't agree," sighed the man. "I said I wasn't worthy of her, and she said I was. For the sake of harmony I yielded my opinion and said I was worthy of her, and she, not to be outdone in generosity, I suppose, yielded her opinion and said I wasn't."—Detroit Journal.

Advances made on furniture and pianos, with or without removal. J. Noonan, 1017-1023 Mission.

NEW UNIFORMS FOR THE MEN OF THE GUARD

Inspection Report of Second Brigade.

THE FIFTH'S NEW COLONEL

SIGNAL MEN WILL WELCOME THE MANILA VETERANS.

Naval Militiamen Disappointed on Account of Delay in the Arrival of the Steamer Badger.

The National Guard of the State is, according to orders, to be uniformed and equipped at once. Last Friday the new board on uniforms, Major General Dickinson, Colonel Catter (retired) and Lieutenant Colonel Geisting, met, discussed the situation and decided to prepare the specifications and issue them next week. The War Department will furnish the rifles, haversacks, canteens and belts.

Major Jansen, brigade inspector of the Second Brigade, has forwarded his report of the inspection held in the latter part of June to the Adjutant General. The brigade, he says in his report, was made up at the time of muster and inspection of Troop A, the Signal Corps, seven companies of the Fifth Infantry and four hundred men of the First Infantry, who did not go to the front for obvious reasons. He says that the men who were in the service during the recent war with Spain and who have returned to the guard are noticeable for their soldierly bearing and discipline, and he suggests that captains of companies use their best endeavors to retain these men in the guard as their presence will be a great benefit to the guard which will be exceedingly beneficial. "As a rule," says the inspector, "changes are too frequent in the companies, and they tend to cripple the guard."

The report gives the details of each muster and inspection and attention is called to the fact that the men are not in most of the companies uniformed, yet in spite of the fact that they were not in regimental blue the bearing of those men who were in the volunteer service was noticeable and is mentioned favorably. In the Fifth Regiment the companies mustered officers and men as follows: A, 40 out of 64; B, 34 out of 55; D, 44 out of 77; E, 54 out of 114; F, 50 out of 58; G, 40 out of 53; and H, 37 out of 51. The fact that men were at work at distant points from the armories and the short notice for muster is given as the reason for absence. Troop A mustered 35 out of 50 and the Signal Corps 35 out of 38.

The inspector reports that Troop A cavalry is short the following State property: One carbine, 21 revolvers, 5 cartridge boxes, 15 pistol holders, 2 saddles, 2 bridles, 2000 feet of webbing and several other articles. Captain Burnett dropped these articles from his report, but the inspector was unable to have any order produced for the dropping of such missing articles. Captain Burnett stated that the revolvers disappeared while the late Captain Jenks was in command. Still the inspector holds that Captain Burnett, who was lieutenant at the time, is responsible for the property and suggests that a board of inquiry be ordered to fix the loss. He made such a suggestion last year in regard to the lost property in the troop, but no heed was paid to it.

A. K. Whitton, who last week was elected colonel of the Fifth Infantry, entered the service of the State as a private in Company B of that regiment in March, 1882, and in December of that year he was elected second lieutenant of the company. A year later he was elected captain, and held that commission until 1889, when he Caused by over-work! Over-eating! Over-drinking! No part of the human body receives more ill treatment than the bowels.

Constitution

Load after load is imposed until the intestines become clogged, refuse to act, worn out. Then you must assist nature. Do it, and see how easily you will be cured by CASCARETS Candy Cathartic. Not a mass of violent mercurial and mineral poison, but a pure vegetable compound that acts directly upon the diseased and worn out intestinal canal, making it strong, and gently stimulating the liver and kidneys; a candy tablet, pleasant to eat, easy and delightful in action. Don't accept a substitute for CASCARETS.

THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

CASCARETS are absolutely harmless, a purely vegetable compound. No mercurial or other mineral pill-poison in Cascarets. Cascarets promptly, effectively and permanently cure every disorder of the Stomach, Liver and Intestines. They not only cure constipation, but correct any and every form of irregularity of the bowels, including diarrhoea and dysentery. Pleasant, palatable, potent. Taste good, do good. Never sicken, weaken or gripe. Be sure you get the genuine! Beware of imitations and substitutes! Buy a box of CASCARETS to-day, and if not pleased in every respect, get your money back! Write us for booklet and free sample! Address: STERLING REMEDY COMPANY, CHICAGO or NEW YORK.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

"I have gone 14 days at a time without movement of the bowels. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; I did everything I heard of but never found any relief until I got CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day, and if I was rich I would give $1000 for each movement; it is such a relief."—ATLANTA, FLA., 1899 Russell St., Detroit, Mich.

More Information.
Tommy—P that do the put water in

read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the American flag not as strangers or hirelings, but as citizens who have contributed as many civic virtues to the brightness of its stars as any other nation and whose blood has flown as free that it may stand secure. But we are no worse citizens of the great republic because we honor the motherland from which our race has sprung. We look to you with pride. If at times we seem to chide it is our love alone that speaks. Ireland never grows old. To the traveler across the desert sea her hills are like the eagle that renews its youth. St. Patrick has impressed on this land his own characteristics, and, standing on the threshold of the new century, you are girt with strength to run the race and renew the glory of ancient days. These stories grow with the returning years and, chief among them, the renown of this college which has taken up the traditions of Armagh, Bangor and Clonmacrisse, and through the gracious providence and justice of our father's God is destined to surpass them all.'"

Of the paper Cardinal Lode said "it was the most beautiful he had ever read at a public meeting." Most Rev. Bishop Clancy said: "It appeared to him that if other evidence were absent of the work Maynooth was doing, Father Yorke himself would be the most convincing specimen. He combined logic, imagination and eloquence of the highest order. It was said formerly that light came from the east. He thought to-day they saw light coming from the West. In the future he had no doubt Father Yorke would

FATHER YORKE IS HONORED BY IRISH BISHOPS

Brilliant Address at Maynooth.

PRaise FROM THE PRIMATE

THE ELOQUENT PRIEST'S PLEA FOR CATHOLICS.

An Honored Place in the American Hierarchy Is Predicted for the Young San Francisco Clergyman.

Rev. P. C. Yorke, the well-known priest and lecturer of this city, has been the center of admiration among the students and professors of the Irish Catholic Seminary of Maynooth. In fact, he has been the recipient of the warmest congratulations from the most eminent and learned of the Irish Bishops. He read a paper at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association of Maynooth College, and awoke the next morning to find himself famous through the length and breadth of the Emerald Isle.

Recent copies of the Freeman's Journal, the most influential and widely circulated paper in Ireland, which have just been received in this city, contain a full account of Father Yorke's reception. Maynooth College is one of the greatest seminaries of the Catholic church. It has over 600 students, all studying for the priesthood. Father Yorke spent some years before he determined to cast his lot in the United States.

The meeting of the alumni at which Father Yorke read his paper was attended by Cardinal Logue, primate of Ireland, twenty Bishops and over 300 priests. The Freeman's Journal gives the following account of the San Francisco priest:

"Rev. Peter C. Yorke, San Francisco would

ADVERTISEMENTS.

read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the American flag not as strangers or hirelings, but as citizens who have contributed as many civic virtues to the brightness of its stars as any other nation and whose blood has flown as free that it may stand secure. But we are no worse citizens of the great republic because we honor the motherland from which our race has sprung. We look to you with pride. If at times we seem to chide it is our love alone that speaks. Ireland never grows old. To the traveler across the desert sea her hills are like the eagle that renews its youth. St. Patrick has impressed on this land his own characteristics, and, standing on the threshold of the new century, you are girt with strength to run the race and renew the glory of ancient days. These stories grow with the returning years and, chief among them, the renown of this college which has taken up the traditions of Armagh, Bangor and Clonmacrisse, and through the gracious providence and justice of our father's God is destined to surpass them all.'"

Of the paper Cardinal Lode said "it was the most beautiful he had ever read at a public meeting." Most Rev. Bishop Clancy said: "It appeared to him that if other evidence were absent of the work Maynooth was doing, Father Yorke himself would be the most convincing specimen. He combined logic, imagination and eloquence of the highest order. It was said formerly that light came from the east. He thought to-day they saw light coming from the West. In the future he had no doubt Father Yorke would read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the American flag not as strangers or hirelings, but as citizens who have contributed as many civic virtues to the brightness of its stars as any other nation and whose blood has flown as free that it may stand secure. But we are no worse citizens of the great republic because we honor the motherland from which our race has sprung. We look to you with pride. If at times we seem to chide it is our love alone that speaks. Ireland never grows old. To the traveler across the desert sea her hills are like the eagle that renews its youth. St. Patrick has impressed on this land his own characteristics, and, standing on the threshold of the new century, you are girt with strength to run the race and renew the glory of ancient days. These stories grow with the returning years and, chief among them, the renown of this college which has taken up the traditions of Armagh, Bangor and Clonmacrisse, and through the gracious providence and justice of our father's God is destined to surpass them all.'"

Of the paper Cardinal Lode said "it was the most beautiful he had ever read at a public meeting." Most Rev. Bishop Clancy said: "It appeared to him that if other evidence were absent of the work Maynooth was doing, Father Yorke himself would be the most convincing specimen. He combined logic, imagination and eloquence of the highest order. It was said formerly that light came from the east. He thought to-day they saw light coming from the West. In the future he had no doubt Father Yorke would read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the American flag not as strangers or hirelings, but as citizens who have contributed as many civic virtues to the brightness of its stars as any other nation and whose blood has flown as free that it may stand secure. But we are no worse citizens of the great republic because we honor the motherland from which our race has sprung. We look to you with pride. If at times we seem to chide it is our love alone that speaks. Ireland never grows old. To the traveler across the desert sea her hills are like the eagle that renews its youth. St. Patrick has impressed on this land his own characteristics, and, standing on the threshold of the new century, you are girt with strength to run the race and renew the glory of ancient days. These stories grow with the returning years and, chief among them, the renown of this college which has taken up the traditions of Armagh, Bangor and Clonmacrisse, and through the gracious providence and justice of our father's God is destined to surpass them all.'"

Of the paper Cardinal Lode said "it was the most beautiful he had ever read at a public meeting." Most Rev. Bishop Clancy said: "It appeared to him that if other evidence were absent of the work Maynooth was doing, Father Yorke himself would be the most convincing specimen. He combined logic, imagination and eloquence of the highest order. It was said formerly that light came from the east. He thought to-day they saw light coming from the West. In the future he had no doubt Father Yorke would read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the American flag not as strangers or hirelings, but as citizens who have contributed as many civic virtues to the brightness of its stars as any other nation and whose blood has flown as free that it may stand secure. But we are no worse citizens of the great republic because we honor the motherland from which our race has sprung. We look to you with pride. If at times we seem to chide it is our love alone that speaks. Ireland never grows old. To the traveler across the desert sea her hills are like the eagle that renews its youth. St. Patrick has impressed on this land his own characteristics, and, standing on the threshold of the new century, you are girt with strength to run the race and renew the glory of ancient days. These stories grow with the returning years and, chief among them, the renown of this college which has taken up the traditions of Armagh, Bangor and Clonmacrisse, and through the gracious providence and justice of our father's God is destined to surpass them all.'"

Of the paper Cardinal Lode said "it was the most beautiful he had ever read at a public meeting." Most Rev. Bishop Clancy said: "It appeared to him that if other evidence were absent of the work Maynooth was doing, Father Yorke himself would be the most convincing specimen. He combined logic, imagination and eloquence of the highest order. It was said formerly that light came from the east. He thought to-day they saw light coming from the West. In the future he had no doubt Father Yorke would read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the American flag not as strangers or hirelings, but as citizens who have contributed as many civic virtues to the brightness of its stars as any other nation and whose blood has flown as free that it may stand secure. But we are no worse citizens of the great republic because we honor the motherland from which our race has sprung. We look to you with pride. If at times we seem to chide it is our love alone that speaks. Ireland never grows old. To the traveler across the desert sea her hills are like the eagle that renews its youth. St. Patrick has impressed on this land his own characteristics, and, standing on the threshold of the new century, you are girt with strength to run the race and renew the glory of ancient days. These stories grow with the returning years and, chief among them, the renown of this college which has taken up the traditions of Armagh, Bangor and Clonmacrisse, and through the gracious providence and justice of our father's God is destined to surpass them all.'"

Of the paper Cardinal Lode said "it was the most beautiful he had ever read at a public meeting." Most Rev. Bishop Clancy said: "It appeared to him that if other evidence were absent of the work Maynooth was doing, Father Yorke himself would be the most convincing specimen. He combined logic, imagination and eloquence of the highest order. It was said formerly that light came from the east. He thought to-day they saw light coming from the West. In the future he had no doubt Father Yorke would read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the American flag not as strangers or hirelings, but as citizens who have contributed as many civic virtues to the brightness of its stars as any other nation and whose blood has flown as free that it may stand secure. But we are no worse citizens of the great republic because we honor the motherland from which our race has sprung. We look to you with pride. If at times we seem to chide it is our love alone that speaks. Ireland never grows old. To the traveler across the desert sea her hills are like the eagle that renews its youth. St. Patrick has impressed on this land his own characteristics, and, standing on the threshold of the new century, you are girt with strength to run the race and renew the glory of ancient days. These stories grow with the returning years and, chief among them, the renown of this college which has taken up the traditions of Armagh, Bangor and Clonmacrisse, and through the gracious providence and justice of our father's God is destined to surpass them all.'"

Of the paper Cardinal Lode said "it was the most beautiful he had ever read at a public meeting." Most Rev. Bishop Clancy said: "It appeared to him that if other evidence were absent of the work Maynooth was doing, Father Yorke himself would be the most convincing specimen. He combined logic, imagination and eloquence of the highest order. It was said formerly that light came from the east. He thought to-day they saw light coming from the West. In the future he had no doubt Father Yorke would read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the American flag not as strangers or hirelings, but as citizens who have contributed as many civic virtues to the brightness of its stars as any other nation and whose blood has flown as free that it may stand secure. But we are no worse citizens of the great republic because we honor the motherland from which our race has sprung. We look to you with pride. If at times we seem to chide it is our love alone that speaks. Ireland never grows old. To the traveler across the desert sea her hills are like the eagle that renews its youth. St. Patrick has impressed on this land his own characteristics, and, standing on the threshold of the new century, you are girt with strength to run the race and renew the glory of ancient days. These stories grow with the returning years and, chief among them, the renown of this college which has taken up the traditions of Armagh, Bangor and Clonmacrisse, and through the gracious providence and justice of our father's God is destined to surpass them all.'"

Of the paper Cardinal Lode said "it was the most beautiful he had ever read at a public meeting." Most Rev. Bishop Clancy said: "It appeared to him that if other evidence were absent of the work Maynooth was doing, Father Yorke himself would be the most convincing specimen. He combined logic, imagination and eloquence of the highest order. It was said formerly that light came from the east. He thought to-day they saw light coming from the West. In the future he had no doubt Father Yorke would read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the American flag not as strangers or hirelings, but as citizens who have contributed as many civic virtues to the brightness of its stars as any other nation and whose blood has flown as free that it may stand secure. But we are no worse citizens of the great republic because we honor the motherland from which our race has sprung. We look to you with pride. If at times we seem to chide it is our love alone that speaks. Ireland never grows old. To the traveler across the desert sea her hills are like the eagle that renews its youth. St. Patrick has impressed on this land his own characteristics, and, standing on the threshold of the new century, you are girt with strength to run the race and renew the glory of ancient days. These stories grow with the returning years and, chief among them, the renown of this college which has taken up the traditions of Armagh, Bangor and Clonmacrisse, and through the gracious providence and justice of our father's God is destined to surpass them all.'"

Of the paper Cardinal Lode said "it was the most beautiful he had ever read at a public meeting." Most Rev. Bishop Clancy said: "It appeared to him that if other evidence were absent of the work Maynooth was doing, Father Yorke himself would be the most convincing specimen. He combined logic, imagination and eloquence of the highest order. It was said formerly that light came from the east. He thought to-day they saw light coming from the West. In the future he had no doubt Father Yorke would read an eloquent paper on 'Certain Aspects of Clerical Education.' He summarized his paper as follows: Clerical education is a delicate subject to treat but wholesome criticism and candid discussion were the life of the Maynooth Union. Maynooth should be a center of Catholic intellectual life and the headquarters of an aggressive propaganda of Catholicism. Do the Irish people hold intellectual matters the place to which their numbers would entitle them? The penal laws and the absence of a Catholic university do not fully explain or excuse our deficiencies; the death of Catholic writers, the defects of our educational system, the absence of any attempt at advanced popular education, the want of a sound Catholic tone in public life. In the past of Ireland must take the initiative, and Maynooth must train the priests. The literary training of priests should be in training with a view to popular organization.

"He advocated a short course for ordinary students, a long course for students of more ability and urged the necessity of encouraging students to specialize. The trustees had already made some regulations in this direction which were one of the most encouraging signs of their aim. He had treated the education of the priest from the point of view of public man and a representative of the great church of God. In conclusion Father Yorke said: 'Your glory is the glory of the Irish race and your triumph is shared equally by us. We stand under the