Electric Seal Collarette

A swell little collarette just like the picture—Of electric seal with sable opossum collar and border—Just the thing for winter weather; very stylish. Not many—So order to-day.

Overdue Wachusett. W. E. Mighell, president of the California Ship Company, is a heavy loser on the loss of the May Flint. He is also managing owner of the ship Wachusett, now out 124 days from Newcastle, N. S. W., for Hawaii, and on which 45 per cent reinsurance is being offered. Mr. Mighell had been in the freight office when the May Flint, while in the case of the Wachusett there is more than enough in the insurance fund to make up the loss. Few people should prove a total loss. Few people in the world, however, think anything has happened to the vessel.

Want Remains of Barge Removed. The captains and pilots on the narrow-gauge ferry steamers want the remains of the barge that was burnt Saturday night removed. They say the barge is in the lower floor is held in position by the anchors and the whole is in a position to cause damage after dark should a ferry boat run down on it.

Too Much Celebration. J. F. O'Brien tried to make a spectacular ending to the Native Sons' celebration yesterday. He went into the ferry cafe, wrote on the back of a card "Life is a Journey," and threw it into the water.

HISTORIC STUDIES IN HOME FURNISHING.

BY MARGARET AINSLEE. Of all the textile fabrics, tapestry, ancient or modern, forms the most poetic of hangings, the most romantic of backgrounds, the most artistic simulation of the painter's handiwork.

Of all the textile fabrics, tapestry, ancient or modern, forms the most poetic of hangings, the most romantic of backgrounds, the most artistic simulation of the painter's handiwork. The difficulty of understanding the technical details of the weaving arts is simplified by its classification into "high warp" and "low warp" tapestries.

ment of decorative subjects has never been surpassed. Arras, because of its pre-eminence in the manufacture of storied weaving, became a synonym in England for tapestry in general and was so understood by Shakespeare when he made Polonius say:

Behind the arras I'll convey myself, To hear the process. An idea of the various uses of Arras hangings may be gathered from the illustration of the medieval chateau. Here were hung the favorite local epics, that those who saw might read of their master's valor in the hunt, his prowess in the tournament; or perhaps it was some Bible story, illustrating the moral to be pointed a moral or adorn a tale.

Probably the most beautiful tapestries in existence are those made at Arras from the cartoons of Raphael. Rubens found seven of these cartoons which Leo X had commissioned Raphael to paint for the decoration of the St. Peter's Chapel cut into strips and stored in a Brussels shop. Perforated by the needle of the copier, stained and faded, there was still enough left of the scenes from the Acts of the Apostles to enable the genius of an artist to recognize the master genius of another.

When Louis XI of France took the town of Arras it was practically the deathblow to the tapestry-weaving industry of this far-famed little place. Brussels, under the Burgundian rule, soon became the center of Flemish weaving. The most extensively developed of Flemish tapestries in existence is now in Madrid, acquired during the Spanish occupation of Flanders.

It was in the East, the cradle of decorative craftsmanship, that the art of tapestry weaving sprang into being; and in spite of the political and artistic fluctuations which so strongly influenced the other arts of the Orient, the industry upon which the Old World craftsmen adapted design to technical necessity and yet achieved effects which with natural life and subdued overlying splendor of color. Textile fabrics reached their highest development under the Saracens and the Moslems.

Three of the pickpockets arrested during the celebration appeared before Judge Conlan yesterday. Simon Wenne, of Nineteenth Infantry, who was accused of stealing a watch from P. Day of Baker City, Or., in a saloon at Grant avenue and Market street, had his case continued till to-day. Day did not appear to swear to the complaint. George Collier, of the thirty-seventh Infantry, who is accused of stealing a purse from the pocket of Kearny street, had his case continued till Monday. Joseph Sullivan, grand convict charged with attempt at murder on the Pacific coast, and Nicholas, had his cases also continued till Monday.

Keep your baggage checks until you reach San Francisco. You will save one-half in the transfer of your baggage. One trunk, valued at $50, containing Special Delivery, Oakland, ferry depot, 650 Market street, 408 Taylor street.
