VICTIMS NUMBER 18 DEAD IN THE DISASTER

New Horror Is Added to the Catastrophe Which Has Stunned the City.

Detectives Seeking to Fix Responsibility for the Dread Accident.

Roll of Seriously Injured Is Now Eighty-Five Men and Boys.

The horror of the accident at the San Francisco and Pacific Glass Works has left a profound impression upon the people of the city. The dread roll of the dead has been increased to eighteen, five more victims having succumbed yesterday to their wounds. Six more men are so desperately injured that it is feared they may at any moment die. The number of injured is now eighty-five, most of whom will be maimed and scarred for life.

The police authorities are making every possible endeavor to fix responsibility for the catastrophe. Three men have been discovered and swear that men and boys entered the enclosure in single file through one of the gates and acted as if they were paying for admission. Two boys declare that they did pay, one for admission to the enclosure and the other for permission to ascend to the roof. At the inquest next Tuesday every effort will be made to fix the blame where it belongs.

SAN FRANCISCO passed yesterday a day and a night of sorrow. The horror of the dreadful accident on Thanksgiving day was upon the people, and everywhere there was the sign of sadness and gloom. Hour by hour the terrible roll of death was increasing. New homes were being stricken by the reaper of lives, and new families were feeling its stern personal anguish—the force of the calamity which had come with such horrifying suddenness. The hospitals were crowded by anxious men and women. The streets in the neighborhood of the Morgue were black with great masses of humanity, and in many private homes hundreds of sympathetic people went to give their sympathy to the families which were in sorrow. The dead now number eighteen, five men and boys having died during the day.

The roll of the injured has been increased to eighty-five. Many of these have been injured for life; some will lose their limbs and a few will probably die. The catastrophe was one which has inspired the authorities of the city with a serious purpose to locate the responsibility. The police and the coroner were busy yesterday in the preliminary investigations looking toward this end. The coroner summoned a jury and went with its members to the place of the accident. The inquests will be held next Tuesday morning, and no fact which may shed the slightest light upon the terrible affair will be neglected.

The persistent rumor that men officially connected with the San Francisco and Pacific Glass Works received money to permit the men and boys to enter the place cannot be silenced. To all who have investigated the matter it seems incredible that so many people could have entered a private enclosure, have swarmed over the grounds and up the buildings to their post of death on the roof without permission of the company which owns the building. The unfortunate beings who entered the place took a great deal of time in doing so. They could not get into the enclosure over fences which are guarded by barb wire, rush through the grounds and climb to the roof in a few minutes. There is grave reason to believe, therefore, that some one permitted these men and boys

Every effort was made yesterday to secure interviews with any one representing the company, but without result. For some reason not explained no representative of the concern could be found. All persons possessing any authority in the company will, however, be summoned to tell what they know at the coroner's inquest.

Harold Palmer, a 13-year-old lad who was among the slightly injured in the accident on Thanksgiving day, told a straightforward and circumstantial story last night regarding the payment of money to the employees of the San Francisco and Pacific Glass Works prior to the accident. The statement was made to a Call reporter in the presence of his father, mother and elder brother. The latter stated that it was substantially the same as made to them immediately upon his return home.

building on some planks that were laid there. "Leo did not come up, but Munroe did. I fell through on to a pile of rubbish and only had a sprained left arm. The man who got the money was a workingman. He had on a dark shirt and his face was all covered with soot. Nobody tried to stop us going into the building."

Young Palmer did not know the exact address of Munroe, but said that they went to school together. The three boys, he said, saw the money paid and the motions made by the man. All of the hospitals of the city which were called into service have now practically completed their emergency work. Those victims of the disaster who were in a condition to be removed were taken to the homes of their friends and those that cannot be removed will remain for some days to come.

after being rendered unconscious by a fall of forty feet. Fragments of burned clothing, clots of human blood and twisted inch-bars of iron railing showed too plainly where the weight of the unfortunates fell after the flimsy wooden braces which supported the open-sided ventilator gave way, permitting the corrugated iron roof to give way with its load of human beings.

The police insist that they were not asked to clear the roof. The only time in which the police were about to take action in the matter was when acting Sergeant E. B. Riehl, who was in charge of a detail of men on Folsom street, saw the crowd on the roof. He was in the act of proceeding into the lot just as the accident occurred. Up to this time both Riehl and the men under him had their hands too full to take in observations outside of their immediate range.

upon which he subsequently lost his life. He drew a cross section, showing the supports of the roof and of the ventilators. He made designs from sketches of the timbers and the strength of their material and supports, and from the very place which he had sketched he topped to death.

This incident, so pathetic in its character, has thrown the school in which the young man studied into sadness, and many of the boy's schoolmates will pay their last respects over his body this morning. The body is at the undertaking establishment of Peterson at 225 McAllister street, where the rooms will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The boy's body will be taken to Dixon this afternoon on the 4 o'clock train and to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock the funeral will take place from the Dixon Baptist Church. In sympathy and consideration for the stricken parents of the lad the various Protestant churches of Dixon will suspend their individual services at that hour in order that the various congregations may attend the funeral.

Most of the victims of the tragedy will be buried to-day and to-morrow and while there will be nothing in the nature of a public funeral the days will be of gloom in San Francisco. Never, perhaps, in the history of the city has an incident so shocked the people.

a number of people were passing. They walked through this to the rear of the building and then went up the incline leading to the room where the furnaces were located. "We crossed over to the framework back of this building," said young Palmer last night, "and saw a man standing at the foot of the ladder. One of the boys asked him how much it would cost to get on the roof and he said 'Two steams.' He was handed the 10 cents, put his hands to his lips and motioned to one of his companions as if he was drinking the beer. I did not have 10 cents, so I climbed up the rafters and crossed over to the ices for nothing. Cabmen put their cabs at the service of any one who needed them and many private vehicles were contributed. In an affair of such terrifying sadness these facts have merited the highest praise.

Acting under instructions from Lieutenant of Police M. O. Anderson, there were two police officers stationed at the glass works all of yesterday until the coroner's jury arrived at 4 o'clock and viewed the scene. Nothing was permitted to be disturbed, not even the blood stains on the floor or on the guard bars which surrounds the retort where the unfortunates fell, only to be roasted to death native of California, residence 3530 Twenty-third street. He died at the City and County Hospital at 10:05 a. m. The fifth victim to die during the day was Cornelius McMahon, who expired at the City and County Hospital at 5:30 o'clock. He was 12 years old, and his parents live at 2611 Post street.

ROLL OF DEAD.

Passing of Victims Is Reported to the Morgue. Up to 6 p. m. five names were added to the death roll, making then the total number of casualties eighteen. They were as follows: Robert J. Harrison, aged 15, a native of Kansas, residence 247 Second street. He died in the City and County Hospital at 2:55 a. m. About a month ago Harrison, whose father is said to be a prominent lawyer in Kansas City, Mo., ran away from that place with another boy of about the same age and made his way to this city. The two runaways were arrested by the police while wandering in the water front and were confined until City Prison for a night, but were released in the morning. It being considered by the authorities that they were old enough to take care of themselves, Harrison's chum went to the Morgue yesterday morning and wept over the body of his dead friend. He refused to give his name.

A Defaulting Secretary. A warrant was secured yesterday from Judge Cabaniss for the arrest of Jacob Birnbaum on the charge of misdemeanor embezzlement. He was secretary of the Bakers' National Mutual Protective Association, and it is alleged, he is short in his accounts to the extent of $47 50.
