WORK IN THE FIRST ARTILLERY BATTALION

Guardsmen Listen to Lecture on the "Log of a Houseboat on Baltimore Canal." Lieutenants W. A. Varney, J. N. Ross and P. J. Neumann have been relieved from duty on the examining board of the First Battalion of Artillery, for non-commissioned officers and the following names have been detailed in their stead: Lieutenant W. S. Gratton, J. J. Hyer and J. A. Eason. Lieutenant J. R. Howell has been detailed to assist the Inspector of rifle practice by the First Battalion of Artillery at the headquarters of the Battalion at the Presidio. The lecture was entitled "Log of a Houseboat," and the lecturer, A. J. Le Breton, gave a humorous description of the adventures of a party of amateur photographers who had adopted that method of spending their vacation and of solving "what becomes of the flies in winter." The lecture was interspersed with witty allusions to officers of the battalion. The trip of the houseboat was along the Baltimore and Ohio canal from Washington down. The lecturer had something to say about the battle of Antietam, and Captain Elsen during the speaking illustrated the text with stereopticon views. Some of the views were of that battle at which Major General Graham received one of his brevets. At the close of the lecture Captain Elsen showed a number of views taken while the battalion was in camp.

Features of Woodmen's Street Fair Carnival

Bureau of Relief Will Have a Booth in the Stump of a Large Tree. The plans of the Woodmen of the World for a street fair and carnival in this city under the auspices of the local camp, fifteen in number, are nearly all completed and from the information that has been received at the head camp of the executive committee on Mason street it is evident that the novel entertainment that is being prepared by the choppers will attract a great deal of attention. The committee is now considering the different plans that have been submitted for the three entrances to the carnival grounds. Some are very elaborate and with the committee it is now a question as to which will serve the purpose best. A feature of the carnival will be the section to be set aside for the Woodmen's Bureau of Relief. This is to be a large, stumpy, hollowed out, with two or more entrances cut into the bark. In the interior there will be counters behind which will be ladies of the Women of Woodcraft, who will dispose of articles of value that are to be donated to the proceeds of the sales will be for the relief of sick neighbors of the order.

A number of ladies have already announced that they will be in the contest for Queen of the Carnival. The first one to submit her name was Harriet Wilder. The others are Christine Wehl, Pearl de Gamma, Pearl Nickel, Mary Mackel and Agnes King.

The several circles of the Women of Woodcraft have decided to lend their full aid to the fair, and they now have under consideration a plan to open an old-fashioned country store and to get up a minstrel show of lady performers.

In addition to days or nights for fraternal societies it has been suggested that during the fair there be National Guard days with exhibition drills by the infantry, artillery and cavalry, and that there be school days for the children of the schools of the city.

There has been an unusual demand for space by intending exhibitors, one being from parties in Iowa.

A New Use for Wine.

Viticulturists in France have just tried experiments in feeding draft animals with bran mixed with wine, which seem to be successful. It seems that poor wine can be used to replace oats as food, weight for weight, and to be a large source of oats. At least half of the usual feed of grain can be replaced in this manner without disadvantage to the animals. Barley, beans, bran and like, mixed with wine, can be substituted for oats entirely, if desired, it is said. In years of abundant vintage a material saving can be effected in this way.

King Edward's state crown, which was placed on his head by the Archbishop of Canterbury in Westminster Abbey, is in the hands of goldsmiths for repair. His Majesty wore the crown on his return to Buckingham Palace from the abbey, and when entering the state coach street, it against the roof of the vehicle, damaging it slightly. The crown, together with the jewels set in it, is valued at £500,000.

The summer season has been visibly shortened in the social world by the early autumn weddings. What with the shopping to be done and appointments with gown-makers to be kept, there is no opportunity for time to hang heavily upon one's hands pending the approach of very smart affairs.
