

BAL POUFRE A COTILLON HALL BRINGS OUT FASHION'S REVERIES

Fair Young Hostesses, Despite Magnitude of Undertaking, Entertain Their Many Guests With Complete Success—Powdered Hair and Beauty Patches Bring Visions of the Old Colonial Days

THE bal poufre given last night at Cotillon Hall was a delightful affair and a credit to the young hostesses who made a success of so great an undertaking. There was a decided crush of handsomely gowned young women, chaperones and men. The feminine portion of the dancers were powdered hair, beauty patches and artistic ball gowns, most of which were modern. A few elaborate colonial costumes were worn, adding effective color to the scene already picturesque. Officers of the army and navy wore full dress uniforms, and touches of gold lace were much in evidence.

There were no patronesses, and the twenty-two young hostesses, chiefly debutantes, wishing to give the ball upon their own responsibility, received and entertained the 250 guests with a grace and dignity that were an honor to their grandmothers whom they portrayed. San Francisco has never before seen a more captivating galaxy of beauty.

SECOND WIFE TELLS HER TALE

Mamie Pedersen Testifies About Marriage to Mariner.

Says He Told Her He Had Never Been Wedded Before.

Mrs. Mamie Pedersen, who, with Mrs. Ottilla Pedersen, claims to be the wife of Captain John Pedersen, was a witness in her own behalf in Judge Murasky's court yesterday, where a legal battle for the possession of the household furniture in the Pedersen home at 704 Haight street is being waged.

She testified that she first met Pedersen while she was employed as a stenographer at Sharp's real estate agency, and that she was married to the mariner at San Jose on March 17, 1902, by Father O'Malley of St. Patrick's Church. She showed a certificate from the priest in support of her statement. She said that after her marriage she returned to this city with Pedersen and lived with him as his wife at the Palace Hotel for several months. Then, she said, she went to Pedersen's flat on Haight street, where he informed her that the furniture it contained was hers. "I had it furnished for my sister," she said the captain remarked in making the gift.

The witness denied ever having met Mrs. Ottilla Pedersen, though she admitted that she had seen her.

"My mother heard rumors," said the witness, who is only 19 years of age and rather pretty, "that my husband had been married before, and asked him about it in my presence. He denied ever having any other wife than myself, and went with me to the woman who told my mother of the other marriage and told her there was no truth in the rumor. A short time after our marriage it was reported to a newspaper office and had a notice of the marriage published. We were living at 704 Haight street, and I did not know of the claims of Mrs. Ottilla Pedersen until the story of my husband's disappearance was published in the papers. The last time I saw him was on December 6 of last year."

SCOTT'S EMULSION. BONE FOOD

The bones of a baby are soft—so very soft that at first they can scarcely be called bones. They grow hard in time, but the period of their growth is a critical one.

Loose joints, bow-legs, enlarged head and hip disease are evidences of rickets. If not checked they lead to deformities of a permanent character. This is the natural result of improper bone nourishment during the period of bone development.

The child needs mineral substance to harden the bones and this is plentifully supplied in the hypophosphites of lime and soda contained in Scott's Emulsion.

The cod liver oil provides the element of fat needed to reinforce the child's ordinary food.

Thus Scott's Emulsion offers in a perfect combination the very principles of proper bone and flesh nourishment most needed by a young child.

The action of the Emulsion is so mild that the most delicate stomach will accept and retain it. This makes Scott's Emulsion of particular value to weak children and very young babies who are in absolute need of a mild yet effective food-medicine.

Pale-faced children show they are not getting what they ought to get from their food. They need Scott's Emulsion to enrich their blood and give them strength to start on the right road to a healthy growth.

If a child is thin, backward in growth, or slow in development it will be found that Scott's Emulsion will quickly help it. There is nothing better for babies and growing children than Scott's Emulsion.
