

HONORABLE ANGELL

Aged President of Their Alma Mater Greeted by Loyal College Graduates IS DEEPLY TOUCHED

Declares That a University Extends Far Beyond the Enclosure of Its Walls

President Angell of the State University of Michigan was tendered a reception at the University Club last evening by the Michigan University Alumni of San Francisco. The aged president, who is making a tour of the Pacific Coast, was deeply touched by the fact that he was still remembered by those who had studied under him so many years before. He was called upon to address the assembly and said:

What I have seen here to-night has deeply impressed upon me the fact that a great university extends far beyond the walls of its buildings, and I assure you that my heart is full of gratitude as I see you all gathered here to greet me and to tell me that you still remember your old college chum.

I have watched the growth of colleges and State universities as year by year they have grown larger and become more numerous, until at the present day there is hardly a State in the Union that has not a State college, where hundreds and thousands of young men and women are being prepared to enter upon their college studies.

When I first became president of the University of Vermont there were but thirty students. There are now more than 1,000. There are many hundreds. In those days professors were appointed directly upon their graduation, and were educated and experienced men appointed to those offices.

In 1871 I was made president of the University of Michigan, and have been here ever since. I assure you, gentlemen, that I am not thinking of leaving it, even now.

It is my duty to be responsible for bringing the students of different colleges together, not only in the name of competition, but in the name of education and sportsmanship, and I believe in them.

As the aged speaker brought back to mind the college days of those who had not seen him since their youth, the scene was a touching one and the feeling of devotion that still prevailed between professor and student was evinced by the hearty greetings that were exchanged at the conclusion of his remarks.

What added to the pathos of the situation was the sad death of Professor Angell's wife a few weeks ago, and as he spoke it was evident that his thoughts were of her.

President Angell will leave shortly for Palo Alto, where he will visit Stanford University. He will later go to Los Angeles and San Diego.

Among those present last night were President Benjamin H. Wheeler of the University of California, Samuel J. Hill, Professor C. M. Gayley, Mayor Olney of Oakland, Horace Davis, W. W. Campbell, Professor Bernard Morse, Judge Church, Judge Leib, Dr. Huntington, W. A. Beasley, Martin G. Kohn, John H. Perry, E. M. Adam and Charles Bush.

NOONDAY SERVICES NEAR END

DR. DAVID STARR JORDAN, PRESIDENT OF THE LELAND STANFORD JR. UNIVERSITY.

Dr. David Starr Jordan Speaks on Public Spirit.

So successful have been the noonday Lenten services in the rooms of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of the Episcopal church during the past week that there is a desire on the part of many of the leading business men to have the services made a permanent institution of the commercial district. It is for this example that noon services are held in Trinity Church, New York, in the center of the business section, every working day in the year, and there is always a large attendance. If sufficient encouragement is given the movement in this city it is designed to have fifteen minutes of devotional exercise every day at the noon hour.

The services yesterday brought out the largest attendance of the week. Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford Jr. University, delivered the address, and took for his subject "Righteousness in Public Spirit." He made one of his characteristic talks and his address was replete with good wholesome advice. There was no attempt at oratory, but rather a heart-to-heart talk on a timely topic, which was well received. Dr. Jordan after the services expressed himself as well pleased by the interest manifested and the personnel of the audience.

H. R. Braden led the services and Rev. Robert E. Lee Craig, rector of Grace Church, pronounced the benediction. The lesson was taken from St. Matthew, chapter 5, verses 13 to 15.

Frank F. Bostwick, cashier of H. S. Crocker & Co., although of another denomination, has kindly furnished the organ for the services and acts as organist.

Dr. Jordan upon being introduced stated he had a little lay sermon to preach on "Righteousness in Public Spirit," and quoted from Emerson that "the world is upheld by good men." "Righteousness is doing right," said Dr. Jordan, "not at some future time, but now. Righteousness is active, moving and not fastened down. It is doing the thing that is right for us in our lives and in our work. Wisdom is in knowing what to do next."

Dr. Jordan then dwelt upon individuality. He stated that he heard a man say that he could get along without the respect of neighbors, but not without the respect of himself. The public spirit of the country needs personal honesty, and that is bound to be at the bottom of any public spirit. The speaker spoke against individuality being carried to excess. He said that the moving power in society was the work of individual men. "Christianity is the work of an individual man, and also this great republic."

Dr. Jordan then spoke of the light that had been thrown on corruption by public spirit and individual effort. He dwelt upon the present trend of events to lawlessness, and declared that law was nothing more than a condition upon which we agree to live together, and must be upheld by the man of public spirit.

FINE CREATIONS AT ART EXHIBIT

Forty-Ninth Annual Display of San Francisco Association Opens Successfully

RECEPTION TO MEMBERS

Searles Gallery Greatly Improved and the Pictures Show to Best Advantage

The forty-ninth exhibition of the San Francisco Art Association, which opened last evening with a private view and musical reception for members and which will remain open daily until April 21, will be remembered as one of the very best displays of California art yet seen at the Hopkins Institute. For this admirable representation of the artists of the city and State credit is due alike to the professional members of the association and to the officers and jury, who have labored especially to make the show a success.

In preparation for the fine collection of oil paintings the Searles gallery has been greatly improved under the direction of President Willis E. Davis and Captain T. H. Fletcher, the director, who personally superintended the alterations. The walls have been wholly retinted and the lower portion covered with a dull, reddish brown burlap that forms a capital background to the pictures, while the former barlike expanse of the ceiling is now broken at convenient intervals by pilasters in olive green. Overhead a broad canopy has been spread under the skylight, cutting off the reflection from the floor that made a daytime view at former exhibitions a rather unsatisfactory entertainment. This year's catalogue is also worth a word of praise. The cover design is the result of a competition among the students of the School of Design, in which the first prize went to Miss Bertha Boye.

The jury on the acceptance and hanging of the works exhibited was composed of G. F. P. Piazioni, Mrs. A. B. Chittenden, Miss Anna E. Briggs, Joseph Greenbaum and F. Latimer. Members of the association will be interested in the annual lottery distribution of oils, water colors and sketches. In accordance with the now well established custom more than a score of these, the contributions of the artists of the association, will be allotted at the close of the exhibition, but members who wish to participate must leave their names with Assistant Secretary Martin before April 21.

This year's exhibition is especially strong in California landscapes. These, both in number and merit, quite overshadow the work of the figure painters, although the collection presents several capital portraits and genre pieces. Especially noteworthy among the latter are Mrs. Ackerman's "Bess," a delightful study of child life, quiet and full of character, and the hardly less admirable "Meressa," by the same artist; Joseph Greenbaum's characteristic miniature, "Brittany Woman," and his "Gray Day in Holland"; Matteo Sandona's "Portrait of Children," a truthful, unpretentious presentation that is not easily forgotten; the water color, Herick's conscientious and spirited "Market Day," and Mrs. Matthews' strong figure piece, "Red and White." But the landscapes that ought to be mentioned would fill a column.

Keith is represented by two forest and mountain pieces, "Strawberry Creek" and "A Glacial Meadow," which hold places of honor well deserved. John M. Gamble's "Wild Heliotrope" is a striking study of the San Emidio hills. C. C. Judson's "San Leandro Marshes" compels admiration for its truth and spirit. Benjamin C. Brown, the Pasadena impressionist, is seen for the first time at the Institute, where a number of his brilliant dashes of color, among them "Poppy Fields in Pasadena," "Gathering Shadows" and "San Gabriel Valley" attract gratified attention. Another Southern California artist is present in great number and strength. This is Elmer Wachtel of Los Angeles, more than a dozen of whose distinctive pictures were wisely accepted and hung. They show Wachtel as one of the best living interpreters of California scenery in all its startling variety.

Two haunting scenes of Monterey represent, each in its way and each worthily, the art of Charles Rollo Peters and Charles J. Dickman. Peters is even better in "Evening on the Seine" and in his venturesome but successful "Approaching Evening." Will Sparks shows mastery of a distinct and valuable style in several small bits of canvas that one would like to own, and that are upheld by the man of public spirit.

Octavius P. Reed, Suspected Burglar, Is Arrested in a Fifth-Street Grocery.

A man giving the name of Octavius P. Reed entered the grocery of H. Goetzen & Co., 280 Fifth street, shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning and began to help himself to several articles on the counter. G. Ashman, a clerk in the store, approached the man and asked him what he meant. The latter drew a revolver from his pocket and threatened to blow the clerk's brains out if he did not keep quiet.

Patrolmen O'Connor and Tyrell were passing the place and seeing Reed with the revolver in his hand placed him under arrest. He was booked at the Southern police station on charges of carrying a concealed weapon, threats against life and petty larceny. When searched a pair of brass knuckles and a long knife were found in Reed's pockets. He is suspected of being the man who has been holding up saloons in different parts of the city lately.

Morgue Officials Mistake Name.

Dr. E. A. Bohm registered a protest yesterday at the coroner's office against the use of his name as one of the physicians who attended Belle Inlay, the young woman who died at the City and County Hospital as the result of a self-performed criminal operation. The Morgue officials found that they had made a mistake and that it was Dr. Born and not Dr. Bohm who attended the unfortunate young woman.

CIRCUS BEGINS WITH ONE DOG

Humble Origin of Norris & Rowe's Show, Which Will Soon Exhibit Here

The coming of Norris & Rowe's big show recalls the remarkable growth of this typically Western organization from a small affair to its present imposing proportions. The story reads almost like a romance.

Andrew Norris was the founder of the organization. In 1888 he started with one trick dog, giving exhibitions at various small entertainments. He gradually added to his collection until he had quite a number of trick dogs. Later he took his brother Clarence as partner and the show was known as the Norris Bros.' trained dog show. In 1895 the exhibition was turned into a dog and pony show and was exhibited for the first time under canvas. In 1897 H. C. Rowe, who had been managing the organization, was admitted a partner.

In 1900 Andrew Norris retired from the business and made his home in Santa Cruz. Clarence I. Norris and H. C. Rowe absorbed his interest and the firm has since then been known as Norris & Rowe.

Wild and native animals were added from time to time. Norris trained the animals and Rowe looked after the business and the show was known as the Norris Bros.' trained dog show. ### MARSHALS MAY USE PULLMANS

Drawing-Rooms in First-Class Coaches Provided for Removing Prisoners

United States Marshal Shine will be allowed hereafter to transport prisoners to the East in Pullman drawing-rooms, he having been notified yesterday that he had won his appeal made several months ago to Comptroller Tracewell at Washington, D. C. It has been the custom of the Marshal in taking prisoners to the East to use the drawing-room of a Pullman sleeper for such purpose as being the best and safest mode of transporting prisoners. Office Deputy A. L. Farish wrote an exhaustive brief to accompany the appeal and set forth the many weighty objections to the use of second class or tourist cars and of Pullman berths for this purpose.

Comptroller Tracewell in rendering his opinion saw for such allowance as that the method of travel to secure the safety of the prisoners in their transportation is one that must be left largely to the discretion of the Marshal. The Government is not and will not be held responsible for the safety of prisoners had escaped he would have been, at least in some part, to blame for such escape. As deputy marshals are permitted the use of sleeping cars by the regulations of the Department of Justice, I see no reason why they should be relegated to second class accommodations on tourist cars.

THIEF'S RUSE IS SUCCESSFUL

Glib Young Stranger Lures Mrs. Helen Klein From Her Home and Then Loots It

A robbery ingenious in method and complete in design took place yesterday at 270 First street. Mrs. Helen Klein was the sufferer, and she is now mourning the loss of her valuable jewelry and also a lot of wearing apparel.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning a dapper young man called at her house and told her that Captain Dunn of the transport dock wanted to see her, as he had a package addressed to her which had come from Manila on the steamship Logan. He told her that there were certain papers that would require her signature, and as the Logan was likely to sail at once she must go down to the dock immediately.

Mrs. Klein told the supposed messenger that she did not know of any party in Manila who could have sent her a package, but the dapper young man was so full of assurances that the package was intended for her that she decided to go to the dock. On arrival there Captain Dunn informed her that not only had he not sent for her, but that there was nothing on the vessel for her. While this was in a measure a surprise for her, it was nothing to the surprise that greeted her when she returned home.

Everything in the house was in confusion. Every bureau drawer had been opened and the contents thrown around miscellaneous over the floor. Not one place had escaped the attention of the robber. Her jewel casket, which had contained $1000 worth of gems, had been forced open and all the valuables taken. Not content with this, the thief had carried away about $300 worth of fine wearing apparel.
