

MILLIONAIRE'S SON MISSING

Futile Search for Mars E. Wagar Jr., Who Disappeared From a Southern School

DETECTIVES ON QUEST

Scion of Foremost Cleveland Family Leaves Behind No Clew to His Whereabouts

Special Dispatch to The Call.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 24.—All efforts to find fourteen-year-old Mars E. Wagar Jr., a son of Mars E. Wagar, the Cleveland millionaire, who has been missing for twelve days from the Asheville school, have proved futile.

The boy's father and a number of detectives have been here, though Wagar has gone back to Cleveland. He brought several detectives with him.

The boy was last seen on May 11. He was missed that evening and the faculty of the school instituted a search. His parents were notified and Wagar immediately came to Asheville.

Young Wagar was of good moral habits and popular in school. He was a dreamer and fond of literature of adventure and travel. He was recently reprimanded by a teacher for breaking a school rule and this is advanced as a possible reason for his disappearance.

He came here last fall with the late Senator Hanna's grandson. The Asheville school is five miles out of town. It is exclusive and nine out of ten of the students are millionaires' sons.

TEACHERS TO ABANDON UNPROFITABLE CALLING

Minnesota University Professor Presents Figures Showing That Instructors Are Poorly Paid.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 24.—More than 100,000 school teachers will this year abandon an occupation which does not yield them living wages. Professor George F. James, dean of the department of pedagogy at the Minnesota State University, made this statement in an address delivered at the Commercial Club before the St. Paul Federation of Grade Teachers.

An organized movement to secure higher salaries was vigorously advocated. Some startling comparisons were drawn by Professor James to show how poorly teachers are remunerated.

COUNE NUGLES GOLDEN BRICK

Escorts It to Mint and It Becomes White Man's Burden of Worthless Brass

ASSAY STAGGERS OWNER

Heart of City Furnishes a Victim Who Probably Fell to Game of Selling Fakes

United States Mint officials discovered yesterday what appears to be a gigantic "gold brick" swindle, with L. E. Cuhne of the Crossley building as the victim.

Cuhne took a large metal bar to the Mint yesterday morning for deposit. The experienced eyes of the receiving clerk, Major D. L. Noggle, discerned that the ingot had suspicious appearance. The doubts as to its genuineness were confirmed by an assay, not a trace of precious metal being found. When Cuhne was advised in the afternoon as to the results of the assay he staggered as if he had been shot. A companion in excitement turned to the man with the exclamation: "I told you so. I told you that it was a swindle."

The pair took the worthless bar away with them. Subsequently Superintendent F. A. Leach of the Mint advised Secret Service Agent William J. Burns and pointed to nothing but a straight business transaction on his part. The brick, as described by Major Noggle, was a rough, blackened affair, not unlike that of brass, with the appearance to an unpracticed eye of a bar of alloyed gold. In size it was large enough to have carried $25,000 in gold, but not heavy enough to be precious metal.

A SHATTERED HOPE

Cuhne was so utterly dazed by the disclosure of the assay that he did not wait to make explanations. He and his companion simply departed after the telltale expression of surprise.

According to the Mint officials there was no attempt made to defraud the Mint. Cuhne said Superintendent Leach, deposited his bar in good faith and acted as if he fully expected to realize. So far as his dealings with the Mint were concerned they were regular and pointed to nothing but a straight business transaction on his part. The brick, as described by Major Noggle, was a rough, blackened affair, not unlike that of brass, with the appearance to an unpracticed eye of a bar of alloyed gold. In size it was large enough to have carried $25,000 in gold, but not heavy enough to be precious metal.

It was at 10 o'clock yesterday morning that two men entered the receiving department. One of them staggered in under the weight of the heavy bar that he bore on his shoulder. The other man was Cuhne, owner of the white man's burden. Placing the bar on the counter he begged for a receipt and a temporary receipt for the bar pending the making of an assay. Major Noggle said: "I suspected the bar was not genuine as soon as I saw it, but I did not want to say so until I had had the bar assayed. It might have been an extremely base bar, of such percentage of gold that we could take it. When Cuhne returned with the other man I told you so," said the second man. "You've been swindled." That was about what he said. It gave me a distinct impression that there had been a regular old-fashioned gold brick swindle, but that Cuhne was the victim.

NOGGLE SUSPECTED BAR

In his report to Superintendent Leach Major Noggle said he had made no inquiry concerning the circumstances under which Cuhne obtained the brick. That was the connection of the Mint officials with the transaction. Superintendent Leach explained that he was satisfied there had been no intention to defraud the Government. But in precaution he had given the case in Secret Service Agent Burns' hands in order to make positive the assurance that nothing criminal had been intended.

Superintendent Leach said last night: "Strange as it may appear, there have been a number of such cases at the Mint. On one occasion five small bars of purported gold were sent to the Mint from one of the prominent banks. The assay showed that there was not a trace of precious metal in any one of them. In the case to-day I see nothing that would concern the Mint. It appears that Cuhne was a victim of sharpers. Major Noggle said the men seemed confident when they presented themselves in the morning and were completely taken back when the truth was known.

In many instances we accept bars conditionally. This is on the basis that they will not be received—that is to say, they will run under 200 parts gold to 1000 parts. In the case to-day we accepted them. They were too low for us to handle. Major Noggle had little doubt that the bar would be found worthless, but to be sure he had an assay made. I know of nothing further the Mint police can do in the matter. If rests of course with Cuhne if he has been swindled to talk to the police.

PALM PLANTS DISPLAYS

Features at Fair Are Graced by Shrubs From San Francisco's Breathing Spot

FORESTRY ATTRACTIVE

California Citrus Fruit Exhibits Continue to Delight the Many Sightseers

By Paul Edwards.

CALL BUREAU, WORLD'S FAIR, ST. LOUIS, May 24.—Golden Gate Park, the beautiful, whose charm has inspired people from every part of the globe, is doing its share to make California's display at the World's Fair a success. It has contributed liberally of its wealth of vegetation, and its contribution has been used with fine effect on the grounds of the California building by George C. Roeding, who has in charge the beautification of these grounds and the placing of California trees, plants and shrubs that are used in other places within the fair grounds as decorations.

San Francisco's wonderful park has sent on a fine collection, and its commissioners are receiving the praises of Californians and shrubs that are used in other places within the fair grounds as decorations. There are a number of varieties of Japanese fir and one California spruce tree in the park collection; also specimens of the New Zealand flax, a striking flowering plant of variegated colors; the Montreal cypress and a large collection of delicate bamboos. The park sends altogether 100 varieties of trees, shrubs and plants, and they seem to be doing very well in the Missouri spring.

FINE COUNTY EXHIBITS

Fresno contributes to the California building grounds Canary Island date palms, blue palms and windmill palms as a part of the finest soil. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has provided a fine collection of palms. R. M. Teague of Dimas, Los Angeles County, supplied orange trees, which may be seen in the park. They have not chilled their marrow, and Santa Barbara has sent a number of small plants. Stockton and San Joaquin County have made a fine contribution. In this collection are handsome palms and varieties of house plants. The most striking feature of the San Joaquin contribution are specimens of the Spanish bayonet, or variegated yucca. It is doubtful whether the yucca will bloom here.

Sacramento is to have the honor of placing two pomelo or grape fruit trees in front of the main entrance of the Palace of Agriculture. These trees have just arrived and they still bear some ripe fruit. They will furnish a striking advertisement for the Sacramento valley.

Wherever California palms, plants or fruit trees are placed for ornament they bear the California label, for all to read. The central part of the Palace of Agriculture, which is reserved for the use of the weary, is so ornamented with five palms from the Golden State, and the labels are read by nearly every one who is attracted by their beauty.

Commissioner Joplin of Orange County is going to show the fair visitors what California is capable of in the production of beets. He cannot procure a 250-pound specimen, such as was shown at Chicago, but he has sent on a number of high quality beets. The lower part of this he will put in a cube of peat soil he has on exhibition. About three feet of the agricultural specimen will then project into the air and the whole group of plants will produce the finest celery and biggest beets grown in Orange.

CITRUS FRUIT DISPLAY

C. W. Merritt, the commissioner from Santa Barbara County, is receiving consignments of excellent lemons and pomelos from the Crocker-Sperry ranch in his county. Potatoes thirteen inches in length, and stock beets weighing forty-five pounds attract many people to Santa Barbara's exhibit.

California's forestry display was given a high compliment the other day by Mr. Elwes of the celebrated Kew Gardens, in England. He especially admired the specimens of polished redwood burl.

Among the distinguished San Franciscans at the fair is Boon Wang Hoy, a highbinder of the Hop Sing Tong, who has several nicks in his hatchet, which isn't used for cutting cherry trees, and who about three months ago was acquitted, by outwearing the prosecution, of the charge of trying to slaughter a Yin Sing Ting man in Waverly place. Boon was walking about quietly enjoying the sights of the fair when Detective Reynolds of San Francisco said "Hello!" to him.

"Whassa mallah?" asked Boon, looking in vain for an alleyway as his mind hurried back over a long list of unexplicated crimes. "What you want?" Reynolds told Boon he only wished to revive a pleasant acquaintance, and the Celestial head-hunter took his gaze off the entrance to the Tyrolean Alps, in whose labyrinths he would have felt lost under the eye of a San Francisco officer. Boon said he came here to work, and not as an avenging angel. He would be a curiosity on the pike in this city, where the bark of the highbinder's gun is not of the most important notes in a peaceful civilization.

CALIFORNIANS ENTERTAINED

The press delegation and the California State Board of Trade excursion have ceased to exist as sight-seeking bodies and the members have scattered, each to return home as he wills. Some have gone farther East, some have returned to California and many are still here. The California building has been their headquarters, and Commissioner Filcher has placed himself at their service as guide. He has conducted the visitors to all the California exhibits and the principal displays of the fair in general. There is so much to see that it can only be briefly skimmed over in a short time. Some of the Californians now here will return again in the fall.

Commissioners H. C. Bay of Contra Costa and Fred Buck of Solano have returned home, their business calling them away. Woodlawn Gates of Los Angeles, who is Senator Bard's secretary, and Dr. Doremus and wife of Santa Barbara were among this week's visitors.

The representatives of the Sacramento Valley Development Association are having some trouble in placing the reproduction of the great seal of California, done in beans, that was sent here from Sacramento. It is six feet square. The State Commissioners have offered to have it set on top of the facade at the Sacramento entrance, a commanding and seemingly the most desirable place for it, but this is opposed by some of the valley people. There are forty-six varieties of beans in the seal, giving it many colors, and it is a handsome object. At the bottom is a line to the effect that Sacramento County produced 108,000,000 pounds of beans in 1903. A life-size horse made of hops has recently arrived for the Sacramento Valley display.

It is a woman's fondness for change that prevents many a husband from leaving any in his pocket.

PESTS SLAUGHTERED BY CHICAGO NIMRODS

Celebrated "Crow Hunt" Results in the Killing of More Than 1200 Birds.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Hunters in the vicinity of Elgin have completed their annual slaughter of crows, butcher birds, hawks and other birds regarded both by farmers and the State laws as destructive to growing crops. When the heads of the dead fowls were brought to the city hall and counted it was found that a total of 1228 had been killed. The crow hunt has for many years been a great event in local gun club circles. Each contestant is compelled to deposit 25 cents as an entrance fee and after the scores are announced arrangements are made for a banquet to be given at the expense of the losing side.

PRINCE PU LUN'S PARTY ENCOUNTERS OBSTACLES

One Automobile Is Almost Burned and Another Is Disabled by Breaking of Gear.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 24.—Prince Pu Lun and party were taken to Lafayette to-day in automobiles. Thirty machines started. Before starting the machine which was to carry Prince Pu Lun took fire and there was great excitement. The fire was put out with milk taken from a passing milk wagon. In the meantime the fire department had been called and the arrival of the apparatus added to the confusion. The machine scheduled to go in advance of the party was wrecked a few minutes before the start by an accident to the steering gear. No one was hurt.

BUTE CONTEST DECIDED

Western Federation of Miners Seats Rockefeller Delegation.

DENVER, May 24.—The Western Federation of Miners' convention spent the entire morning over the report of the committee on credentials. The only contest was in the delegation from the Butte engineers. The delegation consisting of Joseph Colby, J. F. Lyford, Malcolm Gillis and E. B. Stodden was seated. The men are said to be employees of the Rockefeller properties, while the defeated delegation was employed on the Heinz properties. One of the most important acts of the convention thus far was the seating of delegates sent by the United Mine Workers of America and the American Federation of Labor. Their credentials were read to-day and although they will have no voting powers they will be permitted to engage in discussion upon all matters pertaining to labor. This action is significant in that it is the official recognition of the two organizations given by the Western Federation of Miners since its withdrawal from the American Federation of Labor.
