GIRL BECOMES UNMANAGEABLE

Major J. G. Trimble Has to Lodge Insanity Charge Against His Daughter

RUNS AWAY FROM HOME

The Parents Are Worn Out With Long Watching and Caring for Unfortunate

Oakland Office San Francisco Call, 1016 Broadway, July 14.

The actions of Miss Martha K. Trimble, daughter of Major J. G. Trimble, U. S. A., retired, who lives in a pretty home at 207 Francisco street, Berkeley, have become so erratic that a complaint of insanity has finally been lodged against her. Last night she ran away from home and when she was at last retaken a determination was reached by the father that the only thing to do with the unfortunate woman was to send her to an asylum. She is 22 years of age and has been under treatment for many years.

"She has worn her mother and myself out," said the Major this morning. "I have done everything I could for her, but of late she has become unmanageable. I have had her under a doctor's care for years and took her last for treatment."

Tears were in the old Major's eyes this morning when he came to see her in the detention ward at the hospital. She waved him away and said that she did not want anything more to do with him. He wished to kiss her good-bye, but she told him that he had left his family for thirty years and that she thought she would do the same. Her condition is believed to be due to epilepsy.

Major Joel G. Trimble is a well-known resident of Berkeley. He has a long and honorable record as an army officer, but increasing years forced him to retire. The daughter has been a great burden upon him and her malady increasing in its acuteness has brought her to a condition where he feels he can no longer prevent her from injuring herself.

WILL SEEK AID OF RELATIVES

Prince Ramina Aramancha Sengh to Ask Assistance From Wealthy Brother

Oakland Office San Francisco Call, 1016 Broadway, July 14.

Prince Ramina Aramancha Sengh, who claims to be a son of the former Maharajah of Lahore, in India, and who is confined in the Alameda County Jail, awaiting trial on a charge of burglary, is seeking aid from several wealthy members of his family who now reside in England. To this end he has communicated with his brother, Prince Victor Gwa Hulip Sengh, and his sister, Princess Louise Sengh, who is a graduate of the Northwestern College of Medicine in Chicago.

About a week ago the "Prince" assigned his effects in San Francisco to some supposed friends in order that they might raise the money to bail him out of jail. He has since heard nothing from his friends and now believes that they have deserted him in his trouble.

The Prince, who professes to be very sensitive concerning the honor of his family, was at first reluctant to apply to his relatives for aid, but under the pressure of accusation and confinement he has been driven to do so as a last resort. He expects to hear from his brother by return mail.

EXPIRES WHERE HIS WIFE DIED

William J. Burrows Takes His Life With a Pistol on a Street in Alameda

BLOWS OUT HIS BRAINS

Despondency Over Sudden Demise of His Spouse Prompts the Tragic Act

ALAMEDA, July 14.—With a pistol

William J. Burrows, chief of the abstract room in the Auditor's Department of Wells Fargo & Co.'s Express, San Francisco, blew out his brains this morning at 6 o'clock in front of his former home at 1335 High street, this city, and breathed his last on the spot where his wife dropped dead from apoplexy four months ago.

No one witnessed the tragic deed, but Emil Lundberg, employed at the coal yard of Harry T. Moore, 1316 High street, heard the report of the revolver and saw the smoke from the weapon. He reached the inanimate form of Burrows at the same time as did J. L. Hicks and O. E. Muddock, the crew of an electric car, whose attention was attracted by the prostrate body of the suicide. Deputy Coroner James Fowler was notified and ordered the remains taken to the local branch Morgue.

Burrows held the gun close to his right temple and the bullet passed through his head, the exit being close behind the left ear. In falling after the discharge he struck the macadam with his face, disfiguring his eyes and nose.

Despondency and nervous prostration, brought on through brooding over the sudden demise of his helpmeet, are said by those who knew Burrows intimately to have been the causes that prompted him to seek death. Since the death of his wife he had been living at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. J. A. Thomas, of 646 Santa Clara avenue. He left the house last evening after dinner, saying that he felt nervous and was going out for a walk. He did not return at night and this fact was not discovered until this morning, when his sister-in-law, upon going to Burrows' room, observed that his bed had not been disturbed. Where the despondent man spent the night is not known, but it is thought that he was not far from the spot where his wife died. Burrows was observed by J. B. McCauley wandering about his old residence several weeks ago. McCauley attempted to speak to Burrows, but the latter avoided him.

Since the 5th of this month Burrows had been treated by Dr. M. W. Brown for nervous prostration, and had been advised by the physician to take a sea voyage, which he intended to do. Burrows' friends had noticed that he was a changed man since the death of his wife. She died on the 15th of March, just after alighting from an electric car in front of her home, 1335 High street.

Burrows was 38 years of age. His brother-in-law, Thomas Burr, of 1268 Eighth avenue, East Oakland, has taken charge of the arrangements for the funeral, which will be held Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the parlors of James Fowler.

J. S. Bunnell, auditor of the Wells-Fargo Express, said to-day, concerning Burrows' suicide:

"Business affairs had nothing to do with this unfortunate occurrence. Burrows was broken-hearted over his wife's death, and brooded over it most of the time. He talked the subject over with me, and I tried to induce him to take a vacation, thinking that a change might help him. But Burrows said he must stay at work, which was the only thing that could help him. He was one of the best men in the company's employ. He had thirty or forty men under him, and he was a faithful man."

DARING ROBBERS OF SALOON LATER CAPTURE POLICEMAN

Compel Officer Horace B. Cochran, Who Was Searching for Them, to Pilot Them to Shell Mound, Where They Set Him Free--Oakland Detectives Hunt Vainly for a Trace of the Hold-Up Men

SCENE OF WEDNESDAY NIGHT'S EXCITING ROBBERY IN OAKLAND, THE BARTENDER AND HIS FRIEND WHO WERE HELD UP AND THE RAILROAD DETECTIVE WHO WAS CAPTURED AND RELIEVED OF HIS PISTOL AND STAR BY THE BOLD HIGHWAYMEN, WHO ARE STILL AT LARGE.

Oakland Office San Francisco Call, 1016 Broadway, July 14.

Horace B. Cochran, a State railroad policeman employed in the West Oakland yards of the Southern Pacific Company, encountered two highwaymen for whom he was looking early this morning, but instead of landing the pair behind the bars, he was himself taken prisoner, and, without weapon or star, compelled to march to Shell Mound station, nearly two miles distant, before he was given his liberty.

This stroke of daring on the part of the thieves resulted in their escape, and the police in several counties have been notified to watch for them.

Shortly after 11 o'clock last night the highwaymen held up and robbed the saloon of Henry Wiekling, at the corner of Eighth and Washington streets. The crime was particularly bold, as the streets were brightly lighted and many pedestrians were in the neighborhood. One of the men wore a red mask, but the other was not in disguise. Both carried weapons, and when they entered they commanded William Wiekling, who is a brother of the proprietor and who was in charge of the saloon, to throw up his hands. The same order was given Albert Springer, the bartender, and Fred Josselyn, a customer. While one of the thieves watched those in the saloon the other passed behind the bar and in a nervous manner opened the cash register and "skipped about $100 in coin. As abruptly as they had entered the pair took their departure. Once outside of the door they pocketed their weapons and walked up Eighth street to Clay.

POLICE ARE NOTIFIED.

Wiekling, when the robbers had departed, called up the police and told what had happened. When the message was received Night Captain Wilson immediately issued orders to as many policemen as he could muster together to search the city and, if possible, to bring in the robbers. Details of officers were dispatched throughout the town, but for about four hours there were no results.

Policemen Hamerton and Thompson were sent to the West Oakland railroad yards on the suspicion that the fugitives might make an attempt to leave the city on the first outgoing freight train. Hamerton and Thompson, when they arrived at the yards, found Railroad Policeman Cochran on his beat.

The officers informed the latter of the saloon robbery and of their detail to look about the yards. It was suggested that the hunted men were probably hiding in one of the empty box cars and a search was proposed. None of the men had a lantern and Cochran went in quest of one. He had one in a locker at the other end of the yards and started away in the darkness to get it.

CAPTURE THE OFFICER.

Cochran had not gone a great distance when he was confronted by two men. Both held revolvers in their hands, which they quickly raised to a level with the railroad policeman's head. Cochran was taken by surprise. He asked the men what they wanted and in reply they ordered him to raise his hands. Resistance was useless and Cochran did not hesitate. While his hands were above his head one of the men stepped up to him, unfastened his star and took away his pistol.

Then the daring crooks told the policeman that he might lower his hands, but that he must do as they said. There was a brief conversation in which the thieves gave their orders and then started Cochran in the direction of the Shell Mound depot. Among the suggestions the highwaymen made to Cochran was that he was not to observe them too closely. When he offered them his watch they found its value was little and they returned it to him. Then the march began.

Meanwhile Policemen Hamerton and Thompson waited for the lantern. Cochran was in the lead and two long pistols were held close to his back. The trio passed the bathhouse at the head of the Oakland mole, then took to the railroad track. While going by the Sixteenth-street station the thieves displayed caution and took a circuitous route with their captive. The tramp continued and little was said. Occasionally the robbers reminded Cochran that any attempt at trickery would result in his death, but otherwise the men were silent.

When within fifty feet of the Shell Mound station Cochran was ordered to halt. He did so, and then he was told that he would be given his freedom. The man who had taken his revolver removed the cartridges from the weapon and passed it back to Cochran. The police badge was not returned.

COCHRAN SET FREE.

Cochran was glad to get away. He started back in the direction whence he had come, and the men stood side by side with their revolvers pointed at him, calling upon him to make no outcry. Finally, when they were out of sight, he broke into a run and returned to the railroad yards. A telephone message was sent to police headquarters and more policemen were sent out on the new clew. Those who searched the vicinity of Shell Mound, however, found nothing, the men having made a quick escape.

Chief of Police Hodgkins, when he arrived at his office this morning, took the case in charge. Detective and patrolmen reported to him the result of their investigations, but no tangible clew was obtained during the day. One man, Joe Ranken, was arrested in an intoxicated condition and held in order that he might be closely questioned.

It is believed that the robbers boarded a freight train and left the county. Telegrams were sent to Port Costa to arrest all suspicious characters, but no answer has yet been received. The highwaymen have not been located. The police have good descriptions of the men. Wiekling and those in the saloon could identify the men again and Cochran has a very good idea of the robbers' appearance. They may be local men, but the detectives are of the opinion that they are strangers in the city, owing to the character of their work. The fact that they immediately made an attempt to leave the city after committing a crime strengthens this theory.

COCHRAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Concerning his experiences, State

Railroad Policeman Cochran said:

"When I first saw the pair of robbers they were inside the fence near the brick repair shop in the railroad yard at the foot of Cedar street. I had met Policemen Hamerton and Thompson and was returning to join them with a bullseye lantern. The robbers were standing in the yard, and until I was close enough to them I thought they were Thompson and Hamerton. As I approached the strangers pulled out pistols and ordered me to throw up my hands."

"I said, 'What's the matter, boys?' One of them replied: 'Some fellow drove us out of a box car and we don't like that.'"

"Well, I can't help that," said Cochran. "I tried to allay their suspicions, but they pressed the pistols to my back and ordered me to move on. One of them grabbed my revolver and the other got my star, after starting me ahead of them. They kept me walking out by way of the curve at the foot of Seventh street, through to the new cannery near Ninth street, then around back of Sixteenth-street station as far as Shell Mound."

"When they left me both of the men warned me to make no outcry. As soon as they left me I hastened back and gave the alarm."

TO BUILD NEW ELECTRIC ROAD

Incorporation in San Francisco of the Webster-Street and Park Railway

WILL OPEN IN AUTUMN

Line to Use Existing Tracks and Run From Heart of Oakland to the Cemeteries

Oakland Office San Francisco Call, 1016 Broadway, July 14.

Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday with the County Clerk of San Francisco by the Webster-street and Park Railway Company of Oakland. The capital stock is stated at $150,000. News of the incorporation of this line, which has for its object the completion of an electric railroad through the heart of Oakland and extending from the water front to the cemeteries, occasioned no little interest here. The franchise for this road was granted by the City Council and the Board of Supervisors almost a year ago. It requires the work to be done by October 15, and it is expected that the roads will be completed by that date.

The system is commonly called the "corkscrew" line. By taking advantage of the provision of the law which enables one company to use the lines of another for five blocks the new corporation can get from the water front through the heart of the city without being obliged to lay other than connecting tracks with those of the Oakland Transit Consolidated.

The directors are J. H. Macdonald of the real estate firm of J. H. Macdonald & Co.; John Charles Adams, capitalist; Thomas Prather, president of the Union National Bank; Charles E. Wilson, the attorney of San Francisco, and T. A. Perkins.

The route to be traversed by the new company's lines begins at the foot of Broadway, near First street. The cars will run up Broadway, from First to Fifth street, along Fifth to Washington, up Washington to Tenth, along Tenth back to Broadway, up Broadway to Fourteenth, along Fourteenth to Webster, along Webster to the Boulevard, thence across Adams Point to Pleasant Valley and out to the cemeteries.

The Adams people, it is thought, are the most interested in the new concern, and it is believed they are pushing the completion of the road in order to give them an outlet for their large holdings near Adams Point. They have much property along the proposed line beyond the heart of the city, and it is presumed that the main object of projecting a line in this direction is to tap their land.

It has been current street talk that the Southern Pacific Company also had interests in the road in connection with projects to convert their steam local train service in this city on Seventh and Webster streets into electric lines.

In an interview this evening Director Macdonald said: "The corporation has been formed for the purpose of completing this road. The papers were filed in San Francisco for the reason that the principal place of business is to be there. The time for the franchise runs out on October 15 and we purpose having the road in running order by that time. So, you see, we have not much time to lose. We will begin work immediately. The Oakland Transit has nothing to do with this road, which will be operated by our company. We do not need a power house at the present time, as we can buy all the power we want. We will look out for that later on."

PARENTS UNFIT FOR CHILDREN

They Get Drunk When One Baby Dies and Know Nothing of Another's Burial

Oakland Office San Francisco Call, 1016 Broadway, July 14.

The three young children of Albert and Lillian McPeters were taken away from them to-day by the order of Judge F. B. Ogden and given to the paternal grandfather. It was shown that the parents had reached such a degraded condition that they were not fit to have the custody of them. The mother made a scene in court when she was called upon to give up her year-old girl, the only child she had with her, and declared that she would fight before she would relinquish it. She, however, was finally persuaded by her husband to surrender the child peaceably.

McPeters and his wife are young, neither having reached the thirty-year mark. They have been married about ten years and have had six children. Three of them are dead. The testimony went to show that when one of their children died, a short time ago, both parents got drunk. A few weeks after another died and, in order to avoid a repetition, the grandparents, who were caring for the child, buried it without letting either of the parents know it was dead.

It was shown that the father is drunk most of the time and that the mother is not much better. They have separated six times, and the mother has consorted with low characters. She habitually smokes cigarettes and her fingers are stained with nicotine. After hearing the testimony in the case Judge Ogden said he had no hesitation in giving the children to the grandparents, who are a respectable old couple living in Alameda.

UNKNOWN MAN IS FOUND MANGLED ON CAR TRACKS

Stranger Is Picked Up at Fourth and Berry Streets With His Bones Badly Crushed.

With nearly every bone in his body from the hips up broken, an unknown man was found lying across the street railway tracks at Fourth and Berry streets early this morning. He was first seen by Joseph Labina, motorman of a Kentucky street car.

As the car started across the Southern Pacific Company's tracks on Berry street Labina says he noticed the prostrate body of a man on the track. He halted his car just in time to prevent running over him.

Though terribly injured the man still lived. He was immediately placed on board the electric car and taken to the corner of Third and Market streets. Then he was hurried to the Central Emergency Hospital in an ambulance.

Though a spark of life remained, his case was pronounced hopeless. He is evidently a laborer, about 40 years old, and 5 feet 10 inches in height.
